EM pain set to deepen if draghi signals QE of end

The headquarters of European Central Bank in Frankfurt. The ECB meeting tomorrow is the latest in a growing list of risks that includes a Federal Reserve policy meeting next week, US-China trade talks, and new developments in the Korean peninsula.

Some analysts estimate that 30% of banks sold in the European sovereign economies. While the worst is done in Europe, the impact on emerging markets is likely to be even more substantial, with many analysts warning that it could result in a sharp currency drop and worse for some countries.

The gloom is widespread in emerging markets as well, with some countries struggling with higher inflation and interest rates. Inflation and interest rates in emerging markets are expected to remain elevated for the foreseeable future, which could lead to a sharp currency drop and worse for some countries.

Stock markets run out of steam on caution over N Korea summit

U nited European stock markets steadied yesterday as investors braced for US President Donald Trump’s historic summit with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un, dealers said. Frankfurt, London and Paris had been on a downward trajectory following gains across Asia, but then ran out of steam in togs what decentralisation means, the timings and whether the deal will be sustained.

As enthusiasm petered out, traders looked to key meetings of the Federal Reserve and European Central Bank later this week.

“European equities are under modest pressure despite some news on the region and focus shifting to the upcoming extra-hurdle meetings,” analysts at BNP Paribas said.

Investors also remained慎慎 about a possible policy shift by the weakly performing US Federal Reserve, which is expected to raise interest rates today but its post-meeting statement will closely watched as a clue as to its plans for future hikes.

Meanwhile, ECB officials will likely stress that a credible exit strategy and in turn stimulus will come from the region’s core and southern members in the earliest term. Depron, after Opec said that the oil group’s production drop was slightly more than expected, the Eurozone turned lower after a slight gain yesterday.

ers in a market from four to three and regulators voiced concerns about the market for growth, people with knowledge of the market on tenterhooks about its next move.

That deal prompted BAT to study the potential of heated tobacco products, people familiar with the matter said, asking not to be named, as new oilfields and refinery expansions are expected to boost crude output over the next several years. However, higher oil prices have raised concerns among consumers about the sustainability of growth in major markets.

In other markets, BAT said it has expanded to as many as 70 working days with new oils and fuels, and liquefied natural gas, as it expands its international crude trader, the people familiar with the matter said. The company doesn’t really matter.”

The European Commission’s investigation to ensure, that the proposed deal does not lead to higher prices or less competition in the market, is still ongoing. The company is considering changes in its business model and would be ready for a deal in the second half of the year, the source familiar with the matter said.

US inflation accelerates to 6-year-high, eroding wages

The consumer price index, a measure of the prices that consumers pay for a basket of goods and services, accelerated to a 2.7% annual gain in May, the most since August.

The most volatile components of the CPI, used-car prices, a category that includes all goods and services, and rents, rose at a faster rate than in previous months, after a 1% gain in April. Food prices, excluding tobacco, were flat, as expected, and gas prices fell.

Inflation is only gradually picking up, and the Federal Reserve is widely projected to have its rudder adjusted. That's what its captain might want to do, but the Fed is in no hurry.

The pickup in headline inflation partly reflects gains in food prices, which the annual gain has accelerated to a 2.7% annual gain in May, the most since August. Food prices, excluding tobacco, were flat, as expected, and gas prices fell.

The advance in the CPI matched the most since August.
Islamic finance industry assets surpass $2tn-mark

By Anne Makridis and Michael Ebert

The Islamic finance industry could be set for another record-breaking year, with assets surpassing $2tn-marking an 8.3% growth in US dollar terms—confirming earlier forecasts that the sector is set for a continued ascent. A surge in projects and a wider acceptance of Islamic finance are expected to continue as the global financial crisis in 2008 and the following European debt crisis are expected to not have lasting effects. However, the pace of growth could slow down in the near future as some banks are facing challenges in meeting regulatory requirements.

The Islamic finance industry has demonstrated robust growth and resilient fundamentals since the global financial crisis in 2008 and the following European debt crisis. The sector has continued to grow in terms of capitalisation and the number of institutions offering Islamic finance services. In 2017, the global Islamic finance industry experienced a 4.3%-expansion compared to 2016, taking the total assets to $1.4trn.

A report by the Islamic Development Bank (IsDB) and the Islamic Capital Markets Institute (ICMI) showed that the global Islamic finance industry has experienced a steady growth over the years, with assets surpassing $2tn-mark in 2018. The report noted that the growth of the industry was driven by factors such as the increasing acceptance of Islamic finance by both individuals and institutions, the rise of Islamic finance as a competitive alternative to traditional finance, and the growing demand for socially responsible investment options.

The report also highlighted the role of regulatory bodies in promoting the growth of the Islamic finance industry. In 2017, several countries, including Saudi Arabia, UAE, and Malaysia, adopted new regulations to facilitate the growth of the industry. The report noted that the regulatory framework in the region was expected to continue to improve in 2018, with several countries expected to adopt new regulations to facilitate the growth of the industry.

Despite the growth, the report also noted that the industry was facing challenges, including regulatory challenges, the need for more skilled professionals, and the need for more innovative products. The report called for a continued effort to address these challenges and to promote the growth of the industry.

The report also highlighted the role of international institutions in promoting the growth of the Islamic finance industry. In 2017, the European Union, the United States, and other countries adopted new regulations to facilitate the growth of the industry. The report noted that the regulatory framework in the region was expected to continue to improve in 2018, with several countries expected to adopt new regulations to facilitate the growth of the industry.

Qatar and Oman firms to develop aggregate terminal in Sohar Port

By Peter Alagos

The industrial firms have signed an agreement in the presence of the Omani ambassador and the Qatar chamber chairman, to develop an aggregate terminal in Sohar Port.

The authorities in Qatar and Oman have announced that the Qatari and Omani companies are going to sign an agreement in the presence of the Qatar chamber chairman, to develop an aggregate terminal in Sohar Port.

The agreement was signed in the presence of the Omani ambassador and the Qatar chamber chairman, and it covers the development of a terminal for the export of aggregates and other building materials.

The terminal will be developed by the Marafi Sohar Company, which is a subsidiary of the Qatari company, and it is expected to increase the exports of aggregates and building materials.

The terminal will be a joint venture between Marafi and Kalidary, who is the CEO of the Oman’s Primary Material Company CEO Oman’s Tomato.

Najib bin Yahya al-Balushi, the Omani ambassador, and Saif al-Khayaren in the presence of Qatar Chamber chairman Sheikh Khalifa bin Jassim al-Thani, and Qatari firm’s representatives.

The terminal will be developed with the help of the Oman’s Tomato and the Qatari firm, and it is expected to facilitate exports in two phases.

The first phase of the project will take around three years, and it is expected to commence export operations in late 2021.

The terminal will be developed on a 30-year concession basis.

The terminal will be developed for huge amounts of aggregates and other building materials, with state-of-the-art equipment to allow for large volumes of aggregates and other building materials to be processed.
