It carries the message of the Emir to extend his congratulations to the people of Australia on the occasion of its National Day which is celebrated on January 26 in recognition of the country's Independence Day.

In brief

T he Supreme Committee for Delivery & Legacy (SC) has published a report revealing the number of articles, software and tokens published by media outlets owned by the blocking countries, their falsehood and fake symbols. The report, which was published by the Ministry of Transport and Communications, revealed that the media outlets’ articles have published at least 1,210 articles since the beginning of the siege in early 2017. Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Bahrain and other blocking countries have published at least 1,210 articles.

The number of publications in the blockers’ newspapers during this period has totalled 666, most of which can easily be described as immoral and against Islamic values, while the blockade has disrupted the media landscape in Qatar. The embargo on media outlets led to the closure of around 3,500 jobs and forced about 500 by Emirati officials.

The report warns up with a reminder to the degree of harmlessness and depreciation that media outlets owned by the blocking countries have reached.

“Most of our designs are based upon our unique heritage and culture,” he said in particular of the “National Vision 2030” which is a new departure. “It actually represents what is common between many of our family members and within the GCC and Arab world. And it represents a significant portion of who we are and part of who we want to be in the future.”

“Every tournament has its own unique way and flavour, representing its culture. From games and rules and how this is the World Cup? To Middle East?”

Therefore every domain we have is tied up with the outside world, and in part of our vision and commitment towards delivering a successful 2022 and having a legacy beyond.”

He also added that the Qatar Airways Chief Executive Officer Abdulrahman al-Khayareen, has expressed his gratitude for the efforts of the government in this regard, as well as the necessary arrangements and support which have been made available.

Iraqi forces make fresh gains in Tal Afar offensive

By Yassine al-Wattar, Reuters

Iraqi forces yesterday made further inroads in their offensive to dislodge Islamic State from Tal Afar, seizing two villages on the eastern and southern outskirts of the city.

In the fifth day of their onslaught, Iraqi forces continued to inflict heavy losses on Islamic State fighters holding out in the city in the northeastern Iraq close to the Syrian border, according to statements from the Iraqi joint operations command.

Tal Afar, the city between the cities of Mosul and Arbil, has captured three more neighbourhoods as well as the seat and Al-Wahdah in the west, taking over several strategic buildings in the process.

The advance was the latest in the campaign to retake the military from one of the last remaining strongholds in Iraq, those areas after they seized the city from north and west in a military offensive.

On Tuesday, the cities and countryside territories under Islamic State control Tal Afar from the seat and north and east.

The main forces taking part in the offensive are the Iraqi army, as forces, Jordan Police, the elite US-trained Counter-Terrorism Service (CTS) and some units from the Syrian Popular Mobilization Forces (PMF) that began recapturing the city on July 16.

About three-quarters of Tal Afar remain under Islamic State control including the Ottoman-era citadel at 80 per cent, according to an operational map published by the Iraqi military.

Located 73 km west of Mosul, Tal Afar lies along the main route between the city and its surrounding villages.

As the guns fall silent, Benghazi residents return to battered homes

By Ayesha al-Wattar, Reuters

Two months after the dominant military force in eastern Libya declared victory in a campaign to dislodge Kadhafi's forces from the city that witnessed the city's last major battle, many residents remain in their homes, refusing to leave.

Many are fearful of the violence that ensued, and some are still skeptical about the government's ability to provide security.

Benghazi residents are still waiting for their government to address the security crisis in the city.

The city, which has been under siege for more than two years, has witnessed frequent attacks by Islamic State and other groups seeking to establish a foothold in the country.

Benghazi residents have been demanding the government take action to secure the city and provide basic services.

As people return to their damaged homes, many are still waiting for electricity and water to be restored, and for the government to provide security and stability.

Residents of the istifda district, east of Benghazi, said they are still waiting for their water and electricity to be restored.

“Electricity and water are still not available in our area,” said a resident named Abu Ali.

“We hope the government will provide security and stability soon,” he added.

Despite the recent improvements in the security situation, residents remain cautious and concerned about the safety of their families.

Benghazi’s economy has been hit hard by the conflict, with many businesses closed and people unable to earn a living.

Maduro critic says Venezuela now lawless

Venezuela's fugitive former leader, wearing a hood and claiming to have been the victim of a plot to kill him, is said to be holed up in a manor complex in Miami. But news that opposition leader Juan Guaido, who was self-proclaimed president in January, might be in a private property run by Odebrecht, a Brazilian construction conglomerate, is likely to add to regional tensions. Guaido, who has been living in Miami since he fled Venezuela in 2019, is said to be in a location known as the "El Dorado" mansion. The mansion, located in the upscale neighborhood of Old Miami, has been a target of U.S. sanctions and is reportedly owned by a company linked to Odebrecht. The news comes just days after the U.S. government announced new sanctions targeting Odebrecht and its executives, accusing the company of facilitating corruption in Venezuela. The mansion is said to be owned by a company linked to Odebrecht, a Brazilian construction conglomerate, which has been under U.S. sanctions since 2018 for its role in alleged corruption in the Venezuelan oil industry. The mansion is reportedly located in the upscale neighborhood of Old Miami, and is said to be surrounded by a high wall and guarded by security personnel. It is believed to have been vacated by the government of Venezuela after it was seized by Odebrecht in 2019. The news of Guaido's possible whereabouts has raised concerns among regional leaders, who have already been grappling with the fallout from the country's economic crisis and political turmoil. The opposition has long accused the government of President Nicolas Maduro of corruption and mismanagement, and has called for his resignation. The international community has also condemned the government's handling of the crisis, with many countries recognizing Guaido as the legitimate leader of the country.
Typhoon Hato leaves 16 dead

The death toll from Typhoon Hato rose to at least 16 yesterday after the typhoon, a threat to an estimated 500,000 across southern China, knocked out power in Macau and caused a road collapse in the city. "I have never seen Macau like this," a passenger of a hotel tour coach said after the typhoon hit. "It was so beautiful and so quiet."

At least two bodies were found in a flooded basement in Macau yesterday. A man was killed by a wall that was blown down, another fell from a fourth-floor terrace and one was swept away by the water. The Macau government said two bodies were found in a funeral car park early yesterday, and that two more died when they were trapped in the basement of their homes. Details of the remaining two deaths were not immediately available.

In Hong Kong, at least eight people have died, state broadcaster CCTV said. Among them were two men who were killed when a wall collapsed on them in Shenzhen, while another man died when a boat capsized. Two other people were killed when a high-speed train derailed in the south of the country.

In Macau, officials declared a "state of calamity" and ordered all non-essential services to be suspended. The city's government said it had deployed 2,000 police officers and 1,000 rescue workers to deal with the typhoon.

The typhoon, which made landfall in southern China on Tuesday, has caused widespread damage in the region. In Macau, windows were blown out of buildings and streets were flooded as the typhoon hit. In Hong Kong, up to 100 people were trapped in a building in Kowloon and three others were killed in a separate incident.

A citizenship crisis will grow in Australia, experts say, if the government does not act to address the issue. The government has been rocked by the revelation that the seven lawmakers, including the junior partner in the ruling coalition, are dual citizens, meaning they are potentially ineligible to hold elected office.

Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull's government held on to a narrow lead in opinion polls as news of the citizenship scandal continues to overshadow the government's efforts to pass an election bill that would end the deadlock in the Senate.

Turnbull's government was hit by a pair of fatal blows in recent days, withazio Morey, aged in his 50s, who was caught in a panic. ### Eight missing after huge landslide in Swiss Alps

A landslide on the Swiss side of the border has left eight people missing, including a Briton. The avalanche struck a mountain village called Bondo in the Graubunden region on Thursday, sending mud, rocks and debris moving down the mountainside.

The avalanche was so powerful that it triggered an emergency response by the Swiss Seismology Office (SwissNATS), which measures the equivalent of a magnitude 4.5 earthquake. The Swiss police and rescue services are now searching for the eight missing people, including a Briton. The village of Bondo, which is on the Italian side of the Alps, was closed to traffic.

The avalanche occurred on the Italian side of the border, according to the Swiss Seismology Office. The Italian coast guard has also been called in to assist in the search.

Dutch police on ‘committed info’ of planned attack

Dutch police said Monday they have information that a terror attack is to be carried out in the next few days. The police said they have intelligence that a group of people is planning to attack targets in the center of Rotterdam. The police did not say what kind of targets are expected to be attacked, but they said they are working on the假设 that the group is planning to attack a major event or a public place.

The police said they have been monitoring the group for several months and that they have identified several individuals as being involved in the planning.

Spain probe second suspect as released on ‘committed info’ of planned attack

Spanish police have released a suspect in the investigation of a potential terrorist attack in Catalonia after receiving new information from intelligence sources. The suspect, a 22-year-old man, had been held in custody since Friday, following the discovery of a bomb in his car in Barcelona.

Police said they had found evidence linking the man to a network ofclé attacks that killed 15 and wounded 120 people on the Ramblas in August.

The police are now investigating whether the man was involved in the attack on the Ramblas, which was the largest attack in Spain in recent years.

Cashes in Rome as police evict refugee squatters

Italian police have evicted a group of 200 refugees who had been occupying a building in the city of Rome for months. The police said they had received complaints from neighbors about noise and littering, and that the group was causing a public nuisance.

The police said they had been trying to negotiate with the group for several weeks, but that the refugees had refused to leave.

The police said they had issued a eviction order on Saturday, and that they had been planning to evict the group on Monday. The police said they had been trying to negotiate with the group for several weeks, but that the refugees had refused to leave.

The Supreme Court had set up a special bench to rule on the issue after a petition had been filed in the apex court challenging the constitutionality of the Aadhaar biometric programme, which has been a major political issue in India's general election campaign.

People who said that such biometric data collection was a violation of fundamental rights were not being heard, Chief Justice of India Dipak Misra said last week.

"The right of privacy is a fundamental right. The citizens are entitled to challenge their own biometric data," he said.

The Supreme Court, which is hearing the case, has given notice to the government and is expected to pronounce its verdict today.

Meanwhile, the Centre has decided to go ahead with the implementation of the new biometric programme, which aims to identify nearly 1.2 billion Indian citizens.

The government has faced criticism for its handling of the programme, with concerns raised about data security and privacy.

Pakistan: Islamabad rules out wrestling with Taliban in Afghanistan

Pakistan has ruled out any further talks with the Taliban following a failed military offensive against the insurgent group, the country’s foreign minister said, with US-backed Afghan leaders set to meet with the insurgents in Qatar next week.

Imran Khan, who is facing a no-confidence vote in parliament this week, said Pakistan would not have any contact with the Taliban, who are fighting a 16-year war against the US-backed government and its international allies.

“Pakistan has taken the toughest position in the world,” Khan told reporters in New Delhi.

Khan added that Pakistan would continue to support the Afghan government, but would not engage in direct talks with the Taliban unless they first agree to a peace process.

The US has been pressing Pakistan to cut off support to the Taliban, which has been fighting a war against the US-backed government and its international allies.

Pakistan has been a key ally of the US in the war against terrorism, and has been providing sanctuary to the Taliban in its tribal areas.

However, the US has been critical of Pakistan’s efforts to combat terrorism, and has been pressuring the country to cut off support to the Taliban.

The US has also been pressuring Pakistan to cooperate with the Afghan government, which has been fighting a war against the Taliban for more than a decade.

Hajj is the fifth pillar of Islam, and it is one of the most significant acts of devotion and worship for Muslims. During Hajj, Muslims gather in Mecca to perform specific rituals and ceremonies that symbolize their faith and commitment to Allah. The Hajj is a pilgrimage that begins and ends at the sacred site of the Kaaba, and it is a time for Muslims to reflect on their beliefs and their relationship with Allah. The Hajj is considered a time for forgiveness, repentance, and self-sacrifice, and it is a way for Muslims to connect with one another and with their faith. The Hajj is also a time for Muslims to celebrate the unity of the Islamic community and to demonstrate their commitment to the principles of Islam. The Hajj is an opportunity for Muslims to reflect on their lives and their relationship with Allah, and it is a time for them to renew their commitment to the principles of Islam.

The Hajj is performed by Muslims who have the means to do so, and it is a test of their faith and their commitment to Allah. Neighbours carry burden of S Sudan’s fleeing millions

South Sudan has effectively been at war since December 2013

By Sean O’Grady / IRIN

When a million South Sudanese refugees have now crossed the border to Uganda it is the world’s largest humanitarian crisis. Over 1 million refugees are currently in the camps in and around Uganda, with another 1.5 million internally displaced in South Sudan. The question is what will happen next?

The United Nations refugee agency (UNHCR) has warned that the numbers are increasing dramatically. The flow of people into Uganda is coming under strain and to continue, without strengthening an already weakening operating environment, an unprecedented humanitarian operation, with an expected high number of refugees and displaced people from South Sudan, is required to ensure that UNHCR can deliver on its mandate and provide protection to address the current humanitarian crisis.

South Sudan is a state that has been in a state of civil war since December 2013. The conflict has resulted in the displacement of millions of people, with over 4.5 million people internally displaced and over 1 million refugees in neighboring countries.

As the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) has stated, the situation in South Sudan is “without a doubt the world’s most urgent humanitarian crisis.”

Funding is a major concern for the humanitarian community, with donor funding significantly below the requested amount. As of this writing, only 33% of the required funding has been received.

The challenge of providing aid in South Sudan is complex and daunting. The country is plagued by violence, instability, and lack of access to basic services. The humanitarian community is working tirelessly to provide assistance to those in need, but funding shortfalls continue to hinder their efforts.

South Sudan has been one of the most neglected humanitarian crises in recent years. The country has faced multiple challenges, including civil war, political instability, economic downturn, and the COVID-19 pandemic.

According to the United Nations, the needs of South Sudanese refugees and internally displaced people are vast.

The situation is urgent and requires immediate action. The international community must step up its efforts to provide the necessary support to those affected by the conflict in South Sudan.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) has called for an urgent increase in funding for South Sudan to ensure that the humanitarian response can continue.

The United States has also expressed concern about the situation in South Sudan and has pledged additional funding to support the humanitarian response.

The situation in South Sudan is complex and requires a multi-faceted approach. The international community must work together to provide sustainable solutions to address the root causes of the conflict and support the recovery and stabilization of the country.

The United Nations has also called for an inclusive political process to be initiated, with all parties to the conflict engaged in the dialogue.

The United States has also called for an immediate and sustained ceasefire, allowing humanitarian aid to reach those in need.

Who wants to deregulate finance?

A quarter of the more than 150,000 studies in the UK each year are caused by brain strokes.

Dr. Luisa Cani, the co-author of the study, said: “When someone goes for a CT scan or an MRI and there is no visible cause, it’s unusual that doctors know exactly why those people have strokes. In 95 percent of cases, we are not sure of a further stroke, which could be dangerous.”

“Being able to quantify cholesterol levels in patients is a really exciting project. In this new MRI technique, doctors could identify early signs of atherosclerosis and provide more information on their clinical relevance,”

The study was published in the journal JAMA Neurology on Monday, and led to the development of a scale that predicts patients’ risk of stroke.

The researchers said the new method can measure the amount of cholesterol in the carotid arteries 24 hours after surgery. After the operation, the patients were monitored with the MRI technique and found that the new method was better at detecting the remaining plaque, the greater the risk of a stroke.

The same team confirmed and extended their findings in another study of 1,050 people published in PLOS ONE.

The one-worrying factor, though, is that some US banks have implemented the new standards but not the rest of the world. M Sunny

Saudia Arabia’s military presence appears to be a “focal point of withdrawal” from conflicts worldwide, indicated an official, the energy ministry and members of parliament.

Last week, a series of events took place in Saudi Arabia that suggested that the country’s major role in regional politics is declining. The events included the withdrawal of military forces from Yemen, the end of a campaign to drive the Houthis out of the country, and an official statement by the Saudi government that it will not support a coalition against Iran.

The withdrawal from Yemen marks a significant change in Saudi Arabia’s foreign policy. The country has been a key ally of the United States in the region, and its involvement in Yemen has been a key part of its efforts to contain Iran’s influence. The withdrawal from Yemen is seen as a setback for the fight against Iran, and it has raised concerns about Saudi Arabia’s ability to maintain its position as a regional power.

The end of the campaign to drive the Houthis out of the country is also seen as a setback for Saudi Arabia. The campaign has been a key part of Saudi Arabia’s efforts to maintain its influence in Yemen, and its success has been a key part of its efforts to contain Iran’s influence. The campaign has also been a key part of Saudi Arabia’s efforts to maintain its position as a regional power.

The official statement by the Saudi government that it will not support a coalition against Iran is seen as a setback for the fight against Iran. The statement was seen as a rejection of the US-led coalition against Iran, and it has raised concerns about Saudi Arabia’s ability to maintain its position as a regional power.

The events last week suggest that Saudi Arabia is facing a significant challenge in maintaining its position as a regional power. The country’s military presence appears to be a “focal point of withdrawal” from conflicts worldwide, indicated an official, the energy ministry and members of parliament.

Qatar-based event management companies have increasingly become a fixture since the beginning of the Gulf crisis, Saana Suhaimi, a communications expert, told the Do Uradio talk show Haqeeqat. ponding.

Qatar’s role in the region, which has been a key part of its efforts to maintain its position as a regional power, has been weakened by the Gulf crisis. The crisis has also been a key part of its efforts to contain Iran’s influence.
