The Qatari economy’s strength, setness and rise in the face of external constraints is evident in the diversification of the economic activities and the readiness to attract foreign investment in order to achieve the goals and objectives of the Vision 2030 strategy. This diversification is evident in the fact that the Qatari economy is not dependent on any one sector, but rather is based on a diversified structure that includes oil and gas, banking and finance, tourism, real estate, and other sectors.

Another important aspect of the Qatar economy is the implementation of transformative projects that aim to diversify the economy and reduce its dependence on oil and gas. These projects include the development of new industries, the expansion of existing industries, and the attraction of foreign investment. The Qatar economy has also been characterized by the implementation of a number of laws and regulations that aim to attract foreign investment and promote economic growth.

In addition, the Qatari economy has been characterized by the implementation of a number of strategic plans and programmes that aim to diversify the economy and reduce its dependence on oil and gas. These plans and programmes include the Qatar National Vision 2030, which aims to transform Qatar into a knowledge-based economy, and the Qatar Development Plan, which aims to achieve a sustainable economic growth.

The Qatari economy has also been characterized by the implementation of a number of policies and programmes that aim to attract foreign investment and promote economic growth. These policies and programmes include the provision of incentives for foreign investment, the provision of financing for foreign investment projects, and the provision of a stable and predictable regulatory environment.

In conclusion, the Qatari economy is characterized by its strength, setness and rise in the face of external constraints. This is evident in the diversification of the economic activities and the readiness to attract foreign investment in order to achieve the goals and objectives of the Vision 2030 strategy. The implementation of transformative projects, the implementation of strategic plans and programmes, and the implementation of policies and programmes that aim to attract foreign investment and promote economic growth are all important factors that have contributed to the strength, setness and rise of the Qatari economy.
Qatar and Oman to enhance education, technology ties

Qatar and Oman signed an understanding on strengthening of economic and technological cooperation during the ongoing diplomatic crisis between Qatar and its neighbours in the Middle East. The agreement was signed by Qatar’s minister of Economy and Commerce, Mohamed bin Saleh al-Sada, and his Omani counterpart, Najeeb bin Yahya al-Balushi.

The Ministry of Economy and Commerce (MEC) said that the agreement will help Qatar and Oman strengthen their trade and economic relations, which have been affected by the diplomatic crisis between Qatar and its Gulf neighbours.

The agreement is expected to be implemented in the field of higher education, technology, and tourism.

MME honours waste treatment centre workers

The Ministry of Municipality and Environment’s (MME) Waste Treatment Centre honoured yesterday a number of workers, supervisors and technicians from the waste treatment centre for their efforts in maintaining the centre’s operations.

The honours were given to employees who have contributed significantly to the centre’s operations, including those who have maintained the centre’s equipment and machinery.

The honours included certificates of appreciation, medals and cash awards. The employees were also thanked for their dedication and hard work.

MEC notifies shops over status of licences, records

The Ministry of Economy and Commerce (MEC) notified all shops, restaurants, and businesses in the country of the status of their licences and records.

The ministry said that the notification is aimed at ensuring that all businesses operate within the legal framework and that they comply with all regulations and standards.

MEC officials inspected all the shops, restaurants, and businesses to ensure that they are operating legally and that they have the necessary records and licences.

QMC signs MOU with Iraqi Media Network

The chairman of Qatar Media Corporation (QMC), Shokhul Shokhmal bin Al-Thani, signed an agreement with the Iraqi Media Network to establish a joint venture to produce and distribute content in the region.

The agreement was signed in the presence of the Iraqi Prime Minister, Haider al-Abadi, and the QMC chairman.

The joint venture will produce and distribute content in Arabic and English, targeting audiences in the region.

Qatar’s economic threats woe siege countries’ plans

Qatar’s economic prowess is causing concern among countries that are economically dependent on it. The nation’s economic diversification, including in the oil and gas sector, is seen as a threat to some countries that rely on Qatar for energy imports.

The nations are taking steps to diversify their economies and reduce their reliance on Qatar, including by investing in renewable energy sources and developing new sectors.

The study reaffirmed the importance of innovation and higher education in the establishment of a competitive and knowledge-based society. It also emphasized the need for a strong and diversified legal system.

The study recommended the establishment of a national innovation fund to support research and development projects, as well as the establishment of a national innovation council to coordinate the efforts of the various stakeholders.

The study also recommended the establishment of a national technology park to support the growth of innovative start-ups and small and medium-sized enterprises.

The study concluded that the establishment of a national innovation council and a national technology park would help Qatar achieve its goal of becoming a knowledge-based society.
A consultant at Hamad Medical Corporation warned residents about the effects of fast-breaking the holy month of Ramadan, saying it may lead to health complications.

The consultant, Dr. Biju Gafoor, said: “As the holy month of Ramadan comes to an end, many people choose to start eating all the food they have missed during the fasting period. This overindulgence often continues during the first week which follows the end of Ramadan.”

He noted that overeating is a common problem among people who have a chronic disease, disease, kidney problems, and obesity are most at risk of experiencing adverse health problems associated with overeating.”

Diabetes, kidney disease, and obesity are major risk factors for adverse health problems. “Overeating forces the body’s digestive system, and organs, into overdrive. It can also lead to a toxic build-up in the body that can cause weight gain, high blood pressure, and a host of other health complications,” Dr. Gafoor said.

He added that the short-term consequences of overeating can include abdominal pain, nausea and vomiting, diarrhea, and dehydration. Indigestion, weight gain, and high blood pressure can also lead to weight gain. He also recommends drinking plenty of fluids, getting sufficient rest, and engaging in regular physical activities.

The Ministry of Public Health, Qatar, and Primary Health Care Corporation have partnered again to launch the home of the website and expanded the initiative by introducing a companion smartphone and tablet app. Introduced two years ago, the Ramadan Health website in Qatar’s first online resource devoted to health and wellness during the holy month.

Survey: Digital interaction part of Ramadan spiritual journey

Digital interaction and online activities have become part of people’s spiritual journey during the holy month of Ramadan, according to the results of a major multi-institutional survey from Ooredoo. The survey, conducted during the last week of Ramadan, and received the highest number of responses on such a project ever, is also the first of its kind to assess the digital interaction and online activities of people during Ramadan.

The special Ramadan study provides insights on what people are doing online and how they use the Internet for different objectives, especially for the holy month. Commenting on the survey, Ooredoo’s Director of Corporate Communications, said: “Our visit aims to help the International Diabetes Federation (IDF) to demonstrate how people in different places and cultures use digital interaction and online activities during the Holy Month of Ramadan. Ehsan but helped bring joy to their loved ones – have remained constant during the holy month. What has changed is that people are using digital channels to help their loved ones share their messages and greetings to their loved ones, stream TV series and religious content, and claim to exercise two-to-three times more during Ramadan, as people send messages and greetings to their loved ones, stream TV series and religious content, and claim to exercise two-to-three times more during Ramadan.

Ooredoo has announced a partnership with Microsoft to enable Ooredoo to be the first telecommunications service provider in the Gulf to provide Microsoft Azure Stack hybrid cloud.

“This, in turn, will enable Qatar’s digital business growth and nationwide digital transformation, Ooredoo has said in a statement.

Azure Stack is an extension of the Microsoft Azure Cloud, providing a truly consistent hybrid cloud platform that removes complexity and helps organisations maximise investments across cloud and on-premises environments,” the statement notes.

“This partnership will drive innovation and digital transformation by using the Azure Stack hybrid cloud to enable artificial intelligence and data analytics across Qatar,” Ooredoo chief operating officer Yousuf Abdulla al-Kubaisi said: “Providing the Microsoft Azure Stack Hybrid cloud is a clear statement of Ooredoo’s commitment to Qatar’s digital transformation.

“We will provide our business customers with the most advanced hybrid cloud solutions that can optimise costs, flexibility and agility for scaling up as businesses expand, and free up staff to focus on innovation."

Microsoft Qatar country manager Lana Khalaf said: “We have seen tremendous customer and partner excitement about the new opportunities that Microsoft Azure Stack can bring for organisations in the country.”

“On the Microsoft Azure platform, Ooredoo will offer its customers a wide range of cloud-based solutions hosted out of its Tier 3-certified Qatar Data Centre. Customers will be able to choose from “Infrastructure as a Service” solutions, such as backup and disaster recovery, data centre modernisation, and “Platform as a Service” solutions, such as mobile and web applications.

Ooredoo’s business customers will receive the biggest benefit from a hybrid cloud solution using Azure Stack to host application data in-country on Ooredoo’s Qatar Data Centre private cloud, and hosting front-end application features on Microsoft Azure’s global hybrid cloud, the media statement adds.

The initiative is part of the Ministry’s community outreach programmes.

Iraqi ballot box storage site catches fire in Baghdad

Protest to lift Gaza sanctions

Smoke rises from a storage site in Baghdad, housing ballot boxes from Iraq’s May parliamentary election, yesterday. A recount could undermine nascent democratic gains. One of Sadr’s top aides expressed concern that some parties might use the ballots to extend an advantage. Parliament mandated a full manual recount the next day. The Independent High Electoral Commission, which handles vote-counting devices to ensure transparency, went counting devices to tally results.

Remaining steadfast on obedience

There are lessons for us all in the passing of the days and nights - the days and nights that we are not aware of, appear as quickly as the clouds. The days and their memories of them are as quick as the moving parts of our lives. When we wake up, we are unaware of how the days have passed and what we have missed. When we remember that our days and nights are as fleeting as the clouds, we are more likely to ponder our actions and make better choices.

When we are the beings that are subject to the passage of time, many lessons have become轫ible for us. The youth are stuck in their routines and the days are moving away. There are lessons for us all in the passing of the days and nights.

We are subject to the forces of nature and the laws of the universe. We are subject to the cycles of life and death. We are subject to the passage of time and the flow of events. We are subject to the consequences of our actions and the consequences of the actions of others.

hundreds of construction workers helped to stand up 20 temporary housing units on Saturday for families forced from their homes by the country’s ongoing Kilauea eruption, including the former mayor of Liloani City, Kauai, who was killed in the explosion.

The island’s National Guard, the Hawaii Regional Council of Carpenter and various businesses and non-profit organizations played a role in the operation, including the University of Hawaii at Manoa.

Set up amid an atmosphere of concern, families were welcomed by volunteers from the University of Hawaii at Manoa, which was holding a workshop focused on the mental health of families affected by the eruption.

Families have been offered crisis counseling, support groups, and in some cases, emergency shelter. The new homes, expected to be completed by the end of the month, will be used only by families who lost their homes or who have relatives who did, said Dean Ahe of the Hawaii Regional Council of Craftsmen.

The volunteer construction workers included people who lost their homes or had relatives who did, and those of the Hawaii Regional Council of Craftsmen.

“[The workers] are there because they care. To me, that’s why it’s special,” the former mayor Kaiwai Kauai, who was killed in the explosion, said.

The volcano eruption has shined a spotlight on the issue of depression and suicide in the United States, with two high-profile deaths in the past month in the island’s most destructive eruption in modern times.

The two deaths have raised serious concerns about the mental health of families affected by the eruption, as well as about the broader population.

It seems you have no control over the situation, he said.

Trump, Kim arrive for historic summit

North Korean leader Kim Jong-un is welcomed by Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong during the VIP welcome. The official residence of the prime minister, following Kim's arrival in Singapore yesterday.

Kim has displayed a mixture of bravado, pragmatism and stateliness to get this prize: to sit down at the table with the most powerful man on the planet.

The two leaders exchanged a bevy of small talk as they met over a meal in their lavish hotel suites. The Singapore government said there were no discussions on denuclearisation as Kim arrived, but the US president will take the lead in the coming weeks, before the two Koreas meet in June.

Kim met Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong yesterday and the US president was flown into Singapore's Changi Airport after a whirlwind of travel, including a visit to Japan last month.

Two leaders exchanged small talk during the meal, but officials on both sides expect the two countries to make progress on a regional nuclear stand-off.

A South Korean hiker shares story of survival in Australia bush

A South Korean hiker who was stranded in the bush for six days without food has called 2018 the year of her life. She said the experience had made her a stronger person and showed her that she could overcome any obstacle.

She said she had woken up on June 11 at 7am to find that her mother and father, who had been camping with her, had left her behind. She had to find food and water and use her phone to call for help. She said she had been rescued after six days and was now back home in South Korea.

There are reports of many young people in the country scoring high in IIT-JEE exams this year. The success of the students is largely due to the efforts of their teachers, who provide constant guidance and motivation. According to a study, more than 90% of students who score well in the exam have the support of a good teacher. This is especially true for students from rural areas, where access to quality education is limited. Teachers play a crucial role in shaping the future of these students and their contribution should be recognised and appreciated.

The Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) has released its annual report, which highlights the achievements of its students and faculty. The report mentions that more than 90% of students who score well in the exam have the support of a good teacher. This is especially true for students from rural areas, where access to quality education is limited. Teachers play a crucial role in shaping the future of these students and their contribution should be recognised and appreciated.

The report also highlights the achievements of the students, who have been successful in various fields such as science, technology, engineering and mathematics. The students have been selected for various prestigious scholarships and have gone on to pursue their studies in top universities around the world. The report also mentions the success of the faculty members, who have been successful in research and have published numerous papers in reputable journals.

The IIT-JEE is considered one of the most prestigious exams in the country and is held every year to select students for admission to the IITs. The exam is highly competitive and only a small percentage of students are selected. The students who are selected are considered to be the best in the country and are expected to make significant contributions to their fields.

The report also highlights the importance of education in the country and the need for more support for teachers. The government should provide more resources and support for teachers to help them in their important role of educating the next generation.

The report concludes by thanking all the students, faculty members and staff for their hard work and dedication. It also encourages all teachers to continue their efforts to provide the best possible education to their students.

PTI drops high achieving of 2013 polls

The Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) has chosen not to contest in this year’s elections for five National Assembly (NA) constituencies and 250 Provincial Assembly (PA) constituencies.

According to an official announcement, the decision was taken by the PTI’s central executive committee (CEC) at an emergency meeting.

The party has no clear stand on the 250 PA constituencies, but has decided to contest for the following five NA seats: NA-171 Rawalpindi, NA-172 Islamabad, NA-173 Islamabad, NA-174 Islamabad, and NA-175 Islamabad.

PTI leaders have been asked to submit the names of candidates for these constituencies. The decision was taken after a detailed discussion on the matter, with a view to strengthening the party’s position.

The PTI has been in a difficult situation due to the recent elections, with many of its candidates losing in the last elections. The party has been facing criticism for its poor performance in the recent elections.

However, the decision has been taken with the aim of strengthening the party’s position and ensuring a strong showing in the upcoming elections. The party is hoping to draw lessons from its past mistakes and make a comeback in the next elections.

Abbasi may face off against Imran Khan

A number of senior party leaders have come out in support of Imran Khan, raising doubts over the decision to contest for the NA-175 constituency.

The party’s central executive committee (CEC) had earlier announced that the party would contest for the NA-175 constituency, which is currently held by the PML-N’s Khawaja Asif.

The party’s decision to contest for the NA-175 constituency has been met with strong opposition, with many senior party leaders voicing their concerns.

However, a source close to the party leadership has said that the party is determined to contest for the NA-175 constituency, and that the decision has been taken with the aim of strengthening the party’s position.

The source said that the party is confident of winning the NA-175 constituency and that the decision has been taken with the aim of strengthening the party’s position.

The party has been facing criticism for its recent performance, and the decision to contest for the NA-175 constituency is seen as a way of reversing this trend.

However, some party leaders have expressed concerns about the decision, with some saying that the party is not ready to contest for the NA-175 constituency.

Faisal Vawda, a member of the central executive committee (CEC), has expressed concerns about the decision, saying that the party is not ready to contest for the NA-175 constituency.

President Rodrigo Duterte’s daughter, Sara, City Mayor Inday Sara Duterte-Carpio, said she would do her father’s wish to go on foreign trips to avoid involvement in another fishing controversy.

In a speech at the groundbreaking ceremony of Davao City’s provincial capitol, the First Lady stressed the need for the Palace to “understand” her father’s initiative before making any moves against his plans.

Health of children is a priority of national strategy

It is alarming indeed that about 43% of the total students who participated in a growth monitoring programme by the Ministry of Public Health and Community Health were found to be overweight or obese. While 21.2% were overweight, 21.5% were obese. This alarmingly high obesity prevalence was 44.4% and 45.4% among males and females, respectively. Among Qatari males and non-Qatari students, respectively.

The results of this growth-monitoring programme for school students between 7-19 years for the academic year 2015-2016. The collected data included 231,983 students from 296 private and government schools. The programme was implemented in collaboration with the World Health Organisation (WHO), Ministry of Education and Higher Education, Primary Health Care Corporation and Hamad Medical Corporation.

The alarming facts of overweight and obesity was found among Qataris make 47.9% followed by Qatari females making up 32.7% and non-Qatari females making up 43.8% and non-Qatari males 38.6%. Dr Sheikh al-Anoud bint Mohamed al-Thani, director of the Ministry of Public Health Promotion and non-communicable diseases at MoPH, said that the results are helpful in supporting and strengthening existing public health programmes and policies.

The programme to monitor the growth of school students in Qatar in five and 19 years was conducted as a part of the National Action Plan on Non-communicable Chronic Diseases (NAP-NCDs) and Physical Activity 2017-2022.

Obesity has reached epidemic proportions globally and is a priority of the National Health Strategy 2018-2022, which aims to prevent and control non-communicable chronic diseases such as cardiovascular disease, diabetes, and high blood pressure among Qatar’s community.

The NAP-NCDs has developed a database and surveillance system on weight and height distribution in Qatar’s five and 19 age groups. It is made up of a total of 273,000 children and adolescents. The programme has also shown the effectiveness of various programmes, reducing the burden of obesity and combats this disease. It aims also to encourage students to follow a healthy diet and regular physical activity in and out of school environment.

The programme comprised of taking accurate measurements of weight and height and calculating body mass index which is an important indicator of physical well-being in determination of body weight composition. The aim is to assess children and adolescent health by using this approach in many nutrition, underweight, overweight, and obesity status among youth and transfer these cases to primary healthcare centers.

To be read together with the above information is the finding that high rates of obesity in Qatar are causing many associated health complications. By going the WHO statistics, around 72% of adults in Qatar are currently overweight, and 23% are obese. Many of these people suffer from weight-related comorbidities such as type 2 diabetes and high blood pressure, along with emotional distress and anxiety often associated with this disease. Worldwide more than 1.9bn adults, 18 years and older, are overweight and more than 600mn are obese. Obesity has reached epidemic proportions globally with at least 2.4mn people dying each year as a result of being overweight or obese.

Healthy lifestyle choices can help promote weight loss, prevent weight gain, and enhance overall health. Awareness needs to be promoted about the importance of healthy choices from childhood, with a specific focus on limiting sugar-sweetened beverages and encouraging sport and other forms of physical activity.

Abe tries to keep Japan on Trump’s radar

By Lori Borgman

Japan hosts 50,000 US military personnel, but the US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo announced on Thursday that Washington wanted to abandon a nuclear arsenal it says it wants “complete, verifiable and irreversible denuclearisation.”

A source from Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s office told Reuters on Thursday that Japan would work to promote Pyongyang’s security if it fulfils its nuclear and missile testing commitments built up during the US-Pyongyang disarmament negotiations.

The move comes amid concerns that Japan may alter its stance on security issues with the US, which could upset East Asia’s balance of power, sources say.

A Japanese defence ministry source said Abe would make a decision on Japan’s nuclear weapon-free stance this month and said the government wanted to build trust with the US and save the alliance, which is crucial for Japan’s regional security.

Abe said following the US lead in negotiations with Pyongyang was important for Japan’s security.

Japan and other US allies have long voiced concerns that the US pullout could set back the entire process of denuclearisation and set the region back decades.

A Japanese source told Reuters on Thursday that Japan was working to support the US on its operation in a range of areas, including defence and commerce, which is what we discussed today,” said the source.

The Japanese public is more preoccupied than US counterparts about a visit to Japan by US President Donald Trump, according to a survey conducted in May by Japanese think tank Genso and the University of Maryland.

They gathered 1,100 responses in Japan and 1,200 in the United States, the survey showed.

Many Japanese respondents agreed that the talks would deliver positive agreements on denuclearisation, compared with 20.8% who were less optimistic in the survey.

Whatever the outcome of Trump’s meeting with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, “Abe can only hope that denuclearisation takes place,” said a source from Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s office.

“Yet such countervailing policies are anathema, allowing China to mount among the groups that are left,” said the source.

“Moreover, China must learn to understand that markets function under the capitalist principle of supply and demand,” the source said.

The source also added that China’s “anti-establishment sentiment” is growing as well as growing strength.

“While Japan must continue to support the US, it must be careful not to become a pawn in the US-China trade war,” the source said.

The source also added that China’s “anti-establishment sentiment” is growing as well as growing strength.

The Japanese government could face another backlash if it goes ahead with plans to renege on a promise to build a “baseless” role in the region.

The proposal would put Japan at risk of an economic downturn, as well as a backlash from its US ally, said the source from Abe’s office.

The Korean source confirmed that the Japanese government would leave Tokyo alone on its efforts to expand its influence in East Asia and the South China Sea, which has upset East Asia’s balance of power.

“Abe’s diplomatic push included a meeting last month in Singapore with Chinese Premier Li Keqiang, the first such meeting between the two leaders since 2011.

The two agreed to establish a security hotline to handle disputes.

Abe has also stressed the need to contain China’s increasing power.

“Abe has visited Singapore this year, where he met with Singaporean Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong and other senior officials.

QNL hosts Gardens of Al-Andalus exhibition

The three-month show highlights the importance of gardens in Islam

The Gardens of Al-Andalus exhibition opened yesterday at the Qatar National Library (QNL) in Education City, highlighting the importance of gardens in Islam and depicting the plants, tools and gardening methods used by Muslims in Andalusia.

The three-month exhibition, which is held by the Islamic Culture Foundation of Madrid (Funci) and being held under the patronage of HE Sheikha Hind bint Hamad Al Thani, Chairperson of the Board of Trustees, QNL, will run until September 7. “What we want to promote, what we want to explain here is that in the Islamic culture there is a duty, the obligation of taking care of nature.”功能秘书处表示。The exhibition is part of Funci’s Med-O-Med, Cultural Tourism Project, which gives its name to the medieval Peninsula, which gives its name to the modern region of Andalusia in southern Spain, according to Funci. The Qur’anic Botanic Garden brought the exhibition to Qatar after it was shown in various countries in the Mediterranean area.

Andalusia generally refers to the area of the Iberian Peninsula inhabited by Muslims from the 9th century to the 15th century, which gives its name to the modern region of Andalusia in southern Spain, according to Funci. The Qur’anic Botanic Garden brought the exhibition to Qatar after it was shown in various countries in the Mediterranean area.

The exhibition recreated a segment of Andalusian gardens, as well as water sites. “Gardens and the natural world are an important part of Islam, and the gardens of Andalusia represent a unique example of Islamic culture,” QNL executive director Dr Sultan bin Waleed Al-Kaabi said in a statement.

“The exhibition explores the botanical, architectural, scientific, spiritual, and artistic aspects of these gardens to present Andalusian heritage to those important historical tourism sites once selected.”

As a result, Funci sees the Gardens of Al-Andalus as a metaphor, which can serve to magnify the role that Islam has played and continues to play in the world. “As Muslims, we have a duty to explain here is that in the Islamic culture there is a duty, the obligation of taking care of nature.”

The exhibition also allows visitors to appreciate and respect for the older generation who have shown so much for Qatar. The exhibition recreated a segment of Andalusian gardens, as well as water sites. “Gardens and the natural world are an important part of Islam, and the gardens of Andalusia represent a unique example of Islamic culture,”

The exhibition is part of Funci’s Med-O-Med, Cultural Tourism Project, which gives its name to the medieval Peninsula, which gives its name to the modern region of Andalusia in southern Spain, according to Funci. The Qur’anic Botanic Garden brought the exhibition to Qatar after it was shown in various countries in the Mediterranean area.

The exhibition recreated a segment of Andalusian gardens, as well as water sites. “Gardens and the natural world are an important part of Islam, and the gardens of Andalusia represent a unique example of Islamic culture,” QNL executive director Dr Sultan bin Waleed Al-Kaabi said in a statement.

“The exhibition explores the botanical, architectural, scientific, spiritual, and artistic aspects of these gardens to present Andalusian heritage to those important historical tourism sites once selected.” Al-Waab station includes car parking areas and is expected to be operational in the second half of 2019.
