Q ater poses a competitive edge over other producers to be the liquefied natural gas (LNG) market leader in the foreseeable future, Qatar Energy Minister HE Abdulaziz bin Hamad al-Attiyah said yesterday.

Qatar, he said, currently supplies 40% of LNG demand in the world while the LNG demand is expected to double by 2024.

In 2018, Qatar launched the world’s largest LNG plant in the North Field complex of the Persian Gulf.

Qatar Energy has announced that it has contracted to sell 50 mn tpy of LNG to the UK for a period of 20 years.

He said: “Qatarian track record, having the world’s largest LNG supply over the past more than two decades as well-established, it has undoubtedly inverted across the entire LNG value chain and has established a name for being available LNG supplier to all our customers around the globe, served by its own largest 16mn tonnes per annum (tpa) to the UK market.”

The statement pointed out that the Trump-Kim meeting was a historical precedent promising the further easing of tensions on the Korean Peninsula.

The leaders’ joint statement did not make mention of sanctions on North Korea and Qatar expressed satisfaction over the further easing of nuclear tensions on the Korean peninsula.

“Achieving a comprehensive and satisfactory solution for a peaceful and stable peninsular balance,” the statement said.

Sidra prepares to open Children's Emergency Dept

Following the opening of its main hospital nearly six months ago, Sidra Medicine is now preparing to mark the next milestone in its development as Qatar’s leading provider of paediatric care, with the opening of its Children’s Emergency Department (CED) in early July.

The new CED will add capacity to Qatar’s existing healthcare facilities – such as the five Paediatric Emergency Centres (PECs), which will remain open – and complement those services already available at Sidra Medicine.

“This is a major milestone in our journey towards delivering a world-class centre for children’s services in Qatar and our aim to become a beacon of healthcare excellence for children, young people and women,” said Sidra Medicine chief executive Peter Morris. “We are immensely grateful for the support from our healthcare partners and from the government of Qatar.

“As a result of our collaboration, and with the help of our highly skilled and dedicated staff, we have made tangible contributions to the delivery of the very highest standards of care.

“As we open the Children’s Emergency Department, we aim to educate and engage with the people of Qatar about these new services and to help families access the right care in the right place.”

In a press statement, Sidra Medicine said that the CED will provide emergency care and treatment for children requiring life-saving intervention or immediate attention – such as in cases of severe trauma and major medical and surgical emergencies – free of charge.

Sidra Medicine, a member of Qatar Foundation, organises its emergency care system “according to best international practice as outlined in the Emergency Severity Index”, the statement notes.

Triage staff will determine the urgency of treatment and the appropriate level of care required.

Children who require non-urgent care – including upper respiratory issues like sore throats and coughs, rashes or low-grade fever – should continue to seek treatment with their regular healthcare provider, as they normally would.

Should patients choose to come to Sidra Medicine for treatment of cases that are considered non-emergencies, its Children’s Urgent Care Clinic will treat patients in order of medical urgency and require a charge of QR550 to be paid for consultation.

Before the official opening announcement for Sidra Medicine’s CED is made, members of the public should call 999 in the event of an emergency.

Hamad Medical Corporation will dispatch the appropriate transport service for patients.

To complement the upcoming opening of its emergency facilities, Sidra Medicine is launching a community education campaign that will include community workshops as well as direct and social media messaging.

We hope for more returns of this memorable occasion and wish that Qatar always enjoys security, welfare and prosperity under the wise leadership of His Highness The Amir.

Domestic violence no more cause for asylum: Sessions

By Joseph Bannister, Reuters

WASHINGTON (Reuters) -

A small number of victims of domestic violence may be allowed to apply for asylum in the United States, if new guidelines issued by the Department of Homeland Security are followed. The guidelines state that victims of domestic violence must prove they were受虐, and that the perpetrators were under a legal duty to protect them.

The guidelines are likely to make it difficult for many victims of domestic violence to seek asylum in the United States. The guidelines also state that victims of domestic violence must be able to prove that the violence was committed by someone who was related to them, or by someone who was acting on their behalf.

The guidelines were issued by the Department of Homeland Security and are likely to be challenged in court. The guidelines are expected to take effect in September.

Trump-Kim meeting hailed as first big step

Trump surprises with announcement on ending war

US President Donald Trump surprised officials on both sides, with the US military forces in Korea, this week with his announcement that he would meet with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un.

The meeting, which will take place at the end of their historic US-North Korea summit, at the Capella Hotel on Sentosa island in Singapore yesterday, is set to be a landmark event in the relationship between the two countries.

In a statement, the US president said he had formed a strong bond of trust with Kim, and that he would meet with him on June 12.

The meeting was announced on the heels of a letter from Kim to Trump, which expressed his desire to meet with the US leader.

The meeting is expected to focus on denuclearisation, as the US has offered to begin the process of removing nuclear weapons from the Korean Peninsula.

Threats of war

The meeting comes as tensions between the US and North Korea have escalated, with both countries threatening to use military force.

The US has imposed sanctions on North Korea, while the country has conducted a series of nuclear tests and launches of ballistic missiles.

Prospects for peace

The meeting is seen as a potential turning point in the relationship between the US and North Korea, with both countries expressing a desire for peace and denuclearisation.

However, the meeting is also seen as a risk, with some experts warning that a breakdown in talks could lead to a new conflict.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the meeting between Trump and Kim is expected to be a significant event in the relationship between the US and North Korea, with both countries expressing a desire for peace and denuclearisation.

The outcome of the meeting remains uncertain, with some experts warning that a breakdown in talks could lead to a new conflict.

The range of forecasts for London prices this year was wide — from -5% to +5%. The market price for the average home is currently £650,000 in London, according topropertiess.co.uk, a website that tracks prices in the city. The average price in the capital has remained relatively stable over the past 10 years.

However, the housing market has been hit by Brexit uncertainty, with many buyers delaying decisions as they wait to see how the UK will leave the EU. This has led to a significant increase in the number of properties available for sale, which is putting pressure on prices.

The Bank of England has forecast that the economy will grow by 1.2% this year, slightly lower than the 1.7% growth expected in 2020. This could put further downward pressure on house prices, as the economic outlook remains uncertain.

The survey of 30 housing market specialists found that prices will fall a modest 1% this year — much slower than the 4.8% fall forecast for 2018. This could be due to a combination of factors, including high levels of borrowing and low interest rates, which are making it easier for buyers to purchase homes.

The fall in prices is expected to affect all areas of the country, with some cities and regions experiencing steeper declines than others. The report suggests that London could experience the biggest fall, but prices in other parts of the country may also be affected.

The survey also found that the number of properties available for sale has increased, which is putting pressure on prices. This could be due to a combination of factors, including high levels of borrowing and low interest rates, which are making it easier for buyers to purchase homes.

The death of Britain's relations with Russia since the murder of Jo Cox, another female constituent, has been caused by the far-right extremist group National Action, which has been under investigation by British police since the murder.

The defendants, it was alleged, had been planning and practicing the attack for months, and had already bought and trained a driver for the attack. While the driver planned to carry out the attack on behalf of National Action, he was also instructed to use a device to seek revenge against a police officer.

Fatima Bhutto awaits apology from controversial TV shows and interviews

L ater this month, ABC’s crime drama Quantico was harvested for its season finale, mirroring the plight of several Indian film stars currently facing a rigorous parliamentary hearing. The episode received a lot of social media backlash, with people criticising ABC for promoting a show that made fun of a serious issue.

In the episode, the protagonist, a young Indian woman who goes to Pakistan to study, is depicted as naive and unworldly, and her actions are portrayed as a result of her limited experience. The episode was criticized for its portrayal of the relationship between India and Pakistan, with some activists calling for a boycott of the show.

While the network and Choo-choo have defended their position, many India fans are now hoping for a public apology, with a group of fans gathering outside the show’s set to demand an apology.

Tanvi, a 27-year-old Indian fan, who worked on the set of Quantico, said, “I feel like they’re trying to erase our culture. This show shouldn’t have been made.”

In Pakistan, the episode sparked a debate on foreign portrayal of the country, with many people expressing their frustration on social media. The Pakistani government has also criticized the show, with Foreign Minister Shah Mahmood Qureshi calling it a "mishandled and disrespectful portrayal of the country and its people.”

Bhutto stressed that it is time that mainstream media stop promoting this kind of apologetic and fear-based content. He added that people might want to try "a new way forward" and "a new narrative that celebrates Pakistan’s culture and heritage, rather than diminishing it."

The US central bank can’t help raising its benchmark rate

The European Central Bank has raised its benchmark rate by 0.25 percentage points, to 1.75% — the highest level since the global financial crisis.

The ECB’s decision is the second rate hike in less than three months, following a 0.125 percentage point increase in July.

The ECB said the increase in the benchmark rate reflects the stance of monetary policy taken at its July meeting and the assessment that monetary policy is appropriately accommodative.

The ECB also announced a new bond-buying program to help ease the impact of the recent rise in the benchmark rate.

Nourishing cities with nature

By Corin Ratti

Futurist and architect known as Le Corbusier, was Édouard Jeanneret, an architect and urban planner who in 1922 created the concept of “ symbolism”, which he defined as residential areas with high-rise buildings, open spaces, parks, factories, and gardens. In the 1920s and 1930s, European cities experienced a growth in population that led to the development of suburbs and satellite towns, which were often built on the outskirts of the city. In the West, was changed by the construction of residential areas, which were typically designed to be self-sufficient and independent of the surrounding environment. However, while some of these areas were successful in terms of sustainability and efficiency, they also had negative impacts on the environment and health. In the last few years, the concept of “ green architecture” has gained popularity, with architects and designers creating buildings that are in harmony with the natural environment. This includes the use of sustainable materials, the incorporation of green spaces, and the design of buildings that are energy-efficient. In the last few years, many designers and architects have been inspired by the principles of green architecture, and have created buildings that are not only beautiful and functional, but also environmentally sustainable. In conclusion, the benefits of green architecture are numerous, and include improved air quality, reduced energy consumption, and increased biodiversity. As more people become aware of the importance of sustainability, it is expected that green architecture will continue to gain popularity and play a significant role in shaping the future of our cities.

Qatar possesses ‘competitive edge’ in LNG market

On the LNG market, the minister said, “There is no LNG supply glut. There may be a surplus of some 400-500 tonnes per year (tpy) of LNG in the world. In addition, the bullish LNG market this means that the market is expected to tighten, and the global LNG market is expected to tighten by 2024. With regard to market fundamentals, the challenge for the LNG industry today is to find a balance between buyers’ pursuit of competitive prices and producers’ need to maintain sufficient capital and cash flow for LNG development. The former makes buyers and investors need to be comfortable with the level and sustainability of future prices to determine the sustainability of LNG projects, not only offer the best but also cycle, but we will also provide support short-ages and values for on-loads and off-loads.”
