Qatar Charity Ifarts to benefit 2,900 special needs people in Gaza

Israeli troops kill four Palestinians

It repelled around 10,000 Palestinians who crossed the border on March 30, would continue until Palestinian leadership applications submitted by 70,000 refugees are approved. UN Security Council picks five new members

UN Security Council is to elect five new members, Belgium, Ireland, Japan, South Africa and Ukraine, for terms of two years.

The Security Council is made up of 15 members: 10 elected by the General Assembly and five permanent members, including the US, Britain, China, France and Russia.

The permanent members have veto power, which is the key to the council's influence and its ability to act.

The new members will replace countries that have completed their terms, which are due to expire in 2020. The outgoing members are Belgium, Germany, India, South Africa and Ukraine.

The council's current permanent members are tasked with upholding the United Nations' charter and other peace agreements, and are required to work closely with the Security Council.

The election will take place later this week, the UN said.

The Security Council is the main forum for international decision-making on peace and security issues.

The five new members will be elected by the General Assembly, which is made up of 193 countries.

The election process involves a series of votes, with each country having one vote.

The council's work is focused on preventing armed conflict and responding to security threats, with the aim of maintaining international peace and security.

The permanent members of the Security Council are expected to support the new members in their work, and to work closely with them on issues such as terrorism, piracy and nuclear proliferation.

The election of new members is seen as an opportunity for the council to represent a more diverse range of countries and perspectives.

President Donald Trump is expected to attend the UN General Assembly in September, where he will speak to the council.

The election process is expected to take place on Friday, with the new members expected to take up their seats in January.

Austria to expect up to 60 imams

By Mauro Noce, AFP

Austria is expecting 60 new imams to arrive in the country, including 5,000 in the next two years, a German official said on Wednesday.

“Those who exploit their faith and mislead others should be expelled!”

In the past, Austria has had problems with imams engaged in illegal activities, such as prostitution and drug trafficking. The government is taking measures to ensure that new imams are properly vetted and supervised.

Austria said yesterday that it has decided to close seven mosques in the country, including one in Vienna, after a new case of terrorism.

Meanwhile, Austria’s interior minister has announced the closure of seven mosques in the country, including one in Vienna, after a new case of terrorism.

The move follows a similar decision by the German government to close seven mosques in the country earlier this year.

The mosques are expected to be closed for six months, during which time the remaining 50 mosques will be inspected.

The move comes after a series of terrorist attacks in Europe, including the 2016 attack in Nice, France.

Austria has a large Muslim population, with around 100,000 Muslims living in the country.

The closures are expected to take effect in the coming weeks.

Meanwhile, the German interior minister has also announced a new package of measures to combat extremism, including an increase in funding for counter-extremism programs.

The government said that the new measures were necessary to prevent the spread of terrorism and to protect the country’s security.

India rate hike upsides Modi’s election year budget maths

First rate hike in four years to push up government borrowing costs; higher rates may hit economic recovery, widen fiscal deficit; weak rupee, higher oil, deficit increase chances of further hikes.

By Suvashree Choudhury and Manoj Kumar

The Indian central bank’s first interest rate hike since Prime Minister Narendra Modi came to power could have come at a worse time for a government grappling with spending constraints, voter discontent in the rural heartlands and rising oil prices.

Higher interest rates are likely to add to the fiscal deficit pressure on the government’s interest financing cost, leading to a fall in the rupee and potential risks.

The stock market has held up so far, but some analysts caution that concerns over a looming fiscal surplus could trigger equity outflows as well.

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) raised its key repo rate on Wednesday by 25 basis points to 3.5%. – the first increase in nearly four years – to spur infl ation beyond its 4% medium term target.

The move comes after a sharp fall in the rupee and potential risks.

The government’s spending plans have already been threatened by a lack of buyers.

RBI governor Urjit Patel said on Thursday that India’s fiscal deficit pressure has been weakening in recent months, with the economy growing at its fastest pace in nearly two years.

RBI was expected to hike interest rate on Wednesday, as inflation remains above its medium-term target of 4% and the rupee has slid to a three-year low.
