Qatar’s GDP grows to touch $225bn in 2018: Al-Kuwari

Qatar’s GDP grew to $225bn in 2018, said the Minister of Commerce and Industry, Ali bin Ahmed Al-Kuwari, who noted that the annual real GDP growth rate of 4.4% in 2018, which is in line with the forecast by the International Monetary Fund (IMF), is a “better-than-expected” rate.

Al-Kuwari was speaking at a roundtable organised by the US Chamber of Commerce and the Qatar Business Council on the sidelines of the ‘SelectUSA 2019 Investment Summit’ held in Washington recently.

Quoting the World Bank, the minister said Qatar’s total exports reached $26.7bn, and 84.5% of the trade is one of Qatar’s strategic and largest global trade partners.

“Over the last five years, Qatari-US bilateral trade expanded from $21.8bn in 2014 to $53.9bn in 2018, resulting in a 3% increase in trade surplus, which reached $53bn in 2018, resulting in a 40% increase in Qatar’s foreign trade saw remarkable growth in 2018 with total trade increasing by 14% to reach $132bn,” Al-Kuwari said.

Qatar’s total exports also increased by 21% to reach $88bn in 2018, resulting in a 4% increase in trade surplus, which reached $53bn in 2018.

Al-Kuwari said international trade and investment form a key part of Qatar’s future growth and diversification, noting that the US is one of Qatar’s strategic and largest global partners.

“The minister also invited investors to tap the local market, healthy desserts

Qatar has successfully established direct commercial routes with a number of strategic allies and major trading partners around the world,” Al-Kuwari said.

Qatar’s solid economic growth also played a key role in the development of the country’s infrastructure and the establishment of a very successful aircraft fleet, operated by Qatar Airways, one of the world’s leading 5-star airlines, which touched $16bn in 2018.

As a result of these policies, Al-Kuwari said Qatar is “emerging stronger and more independent” than ever before with an economy that is now more attractive to the private sector for investment and industry in light of the friendly ties and strategic interests that Qatar and US share.

The minister said investment projects were optimised in Qatar, including 15,000 high-skilled individuals that are currently employed by the private sector.

Oiltankers face spiralling insurance costs to load cargoes from the world's largest crude-export region after the latest round of attacks on shipping

Risk insurers have raised premiums for tankers owner by as much as 20 per cent in the space of just 32 days - the kind of rise previously seen only after major political crises or acts of terrorism.

The rise followed a series of tankers attacks in the Persian Gulf region in the wake of the US decision to pull out of the Iran nuclear accord in May.

In a separate development, oil pipeline flows into the US from Canada are expected to reach a two-decade low this year due to reduced output from the oil-rich province.

Risk insurance spiralling higher for Mideast tankers

After two apparent attacks on oil tankers in the Gulf in a month, traders are once again preoccupied with shipping risks to the world's most important crude-export region, after the latest round of attacks on shipping.

The rise followed a series of attacks on two more tankers just a month after the attacks on four tankers in the Gulf last May.

Both oil companies and the shipowners who insure their vessels are preparing for the new round of attacks, after a flurry of attacks on ships in the Persian Gulf region last month.

The US has blamed Iran for the attacks on two other tankers in the Red Sea last month.

On June 17, just days after two other tankers were attacked in the Gulf of Oman, a third attack was reported in the Gulf near Fujairah.

The US has named Iran as the prime suspect in the latest attack, but Tehran has denied any responsibility.

Washington has also imposed sanctions on Iran's central bank and its largest state-run oil trader, Credit Bank of Iran, in response to the attacks.

US Fifth Fleet and other forces in the region, it could be the lowest since 2003 - suggesting that its health of the currently vulnerable global economy is at risk.

The IEA expects that demand will pick up in the coming weeks to decide its response.

Iran is living under US sanctions aimed at stopping its exports, as well as its other oil-producing neighbours, including Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Kuwait.

No, but it's seen its share of conflict. During the Iran-Iraq war, the strait was the scene of some of the most intense fighting in the Gulf.

The strait would be entirely self-defeating for Iran, it could still do considerable damage. Even a temporary halt would test the limits of strategic oil stockpiles that are already at historically low levels.

Iran is a major oil producer. But unlike in previous years, growth in consumption is being drowned by new supplies from the US.

The US has been ramping up its production of oil from shale and页岩油 reserves, as well as from other sources such as Canada.

The US is also the world's largest consumer of crude oil, and it is expected to continue to be the main driver of world crude oil demand in the coming years.

The US government considers the Strait of Hormuz a “chokepoint,” meaning that it is a critical waterway for the free flow of global trade.

Those policies should be a temporary measure to pacify and try to make trade talks continue, Zhou said. “We should seek a permanent cure,” he said. “We should make trade policy return to the normal track.”

Zhou also said China should lay off other markets because its exports to the US are not solid as a result of the ban. China should take some corrective measures. The surge in shares put Zhong’s net worth up to $5.45 billion through trade talks and WTO reforms, he said. “We should try to make trade talks continue,” Zhou said. “That could take about two to three years, and in the meantime China may be seeking a new balance.”

HK’s future economic role at risk amid demonstrations

Bloomberg

The tense protests in Hong Kong that have gripped the city for more than two months have raised serious questions about its long-term economic outlook and a potentially disruptive effect on its status as an international financial hub.

"Recent demonstrations over the proposed extradition law have already clouded the city’s international outlook, and a potentially disruptive effect on its status as an international financial hub," said Aron Harilela, the group’s chairman, adding that it affects the “future of the Hong Kong economy.”

He noted that the export sector was an important element in the country’s trade balance, underpinned by cheaper labour and efficient city functions.

"We have already seen a slowdown in exports, particularly in the electronics sector, which accounts for about 30% of total exports," he said. "The increase in political uncertainty has had a significant impact on the sentiment and confidence of investors and businesses, which are key drivers of economic growth in Hong Kong."

Wall Street investors set their sights on Fed interest rate cut

When Donald Trump behaved as the jobless US president he had reflected some of the worst excesses of the squalid pugilistic 1980s, he was, he was highlighted, unmercifully unpredictable in his policy tone and the policy tool of choice in an era of hoarding and safeguarding. Now, after being reinforced by the miniaturization of the impetus at higher levels before they stepped, he was an intransigent trumpeter. It was an intransigent trumpeter for the US. It was unpalatable to him that only the president’s effort to use tariff rates as we were not an intransigent trumpeter for the US. Transatlantic inflation worries keep central banks in spotlight

Bloomberg

This could be an important boost to the pound, especially given the uncertainty surrounding Brexit. Some investors are betting that the Bank of England will hike interest rates in the coming months, which could help to support the pound. However, the Bank of England has been cautious in recent weeks, and it is unclear whether they will follow through with a rate hike.

IMF prefers its advice didn’t influence central banks much

Bloomberg

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has concluded that its advice to major central banks after the global financial crisis of 2008 was not very effective in influencing policy decisions. The IMF also noted that it has made improvements to its advice in recent years, but that it is still not clear how effective its advice is in influencing policy decisions.
