Broken supply chains threaten ruin at a growing number of small firms

Bloomberg
New York

A growing cohort of smaller companies that supply mid-tier manufacturers says some payments are now being delayed for weeks, for the first time in a decade of reliable cash flow. As a result, the number of small manufacturers that are making cash payments is rising, and many are reaching their limits on the total amount of cash they can manage to make.

The situation is particularly dire, with many firms saying they have not seen a demand for their products in the past year, and many are struggling to pay employees and suppliers.

Bannon, a leading supplier in the industry, said its CEO and Chief Financial Officer said they now have to spend more time on cash management and are not able to invest in new equipment or growth.

Bannon: "We are facing a difficult time and need to focus on cash flow. We have to prioritize our cash and make sure we have enough to pay employees and suppliers. Our inventory levels have been low and we are not able to order new equipment. We are also seeing a decline in sales and have to focus on marketing and sales to attract new customers."

Technical analysis of the QSE index

The QSE index lost 0.8%, versus the week before. It closed at the 11,949.75 level. The index created a bearish signal in short-term, as it is the bearish engulfing candlestick formation. Itself is a small candle, the close below the 12,000 level suggests the strength of resistance at that level. As a result, we conclude that the volatility would increase in the coming weeks. Our support remains around the 11,400 level.

Definitions of key terms used in technical analysis

Relative Strength Index (RSI) - RSI is a momentum oscillator technical measure that measures the speed and change of price movements. The 30-70 zone is considered as healthy. If the RSI approaches 0 or 100, it is indicating that the index may be getting oversold or overbought and therefore likely to bounce back. MACD Moving Average Convergence Divergence Indicator - The indicator consists of the MACD lines and a signal line. The divergence or the convergence of the MACD line with the signal line indicates the strength in the momentum during the upturn or downturn, as the case may be. When the MACD crosses the signal line from below and trades above it gives a buy signal. The reverse is the situation for a bearish trend.

Oil prices dive on surging Covid-19 cases in Europe

Oil prices fell on Friday below $80 a barrel as surging Covid-19 cases in Europeamped up demand concerns, sending oil prices down to their lowest levels since mid-November. The oil market has been volatile in recent weeks as the global economy warms up to the prospect of vaccines, but US authorities have also warned about the possibility of new restrictions to curb the spread of the virus. The world's biggest economies are hoping the Covid-19 vaccination program will help boost the global economy and reduce the risk of further lockdowns. The optimism has also been supported by a number of OPEC+ countries that have agreed to cut production.

Gas prices also fell on Friday after the UK government announced new restrictions to curb the spread of the virus. The move comes as the UK has reported its highest daily number of Covid-19 cases since the start of the pandemic. The US has also seen a surge in cases, with more than 1 million new infections reported last week. Meanwhile, in Asia, Japan and South Korea have also reported new cases.
