Partial lunar eclipse today

The last lunar eclipse of the year takes place today (Monday) and will be visible from Qatar, Qatar Calendar House (QCH) has said. The partial lunar eclipse will be visible throughout a large portion of Asia, Africa, Europe, Australia, the Indian Ocean and Atlantic Ocean, according to QCH astronomer Dr Beshir Marzouk. Qatar residents will not require astronomical telescopes to see the partial lunar eclipse, while the penumbral phase is hard to see with the naked eye and advanced equipment is needed to see this. The total phase of the lunar eclipse will be over Qatar by 8.30pm on Monday, adding that the partial phase will end at 9.10pm and the penumbral at 10.50pm. The overall duration of the lunar eclipse will be five hours and 45 minutes, while the partial phase will last for two hours and 15 minutes.

Al Wakrah joins Unesco network

Al Wakrah city has joined the Global Network of Learning Cities of Unesco’s Institute for Lifelong Education as a member, the Ministry of Municipality and Environment (MME) has announced. This marks an achievement for the ministry, represented by Al Wakrah Municipality, and has been made possible due to its efforts to spread sustainability concepts and partnerships with social organisations, according to a press statement from the MME. The director of Unesco’s Institute for Lifelong Education welcomed the accession of Al Wakrah city to the Global Network of Learning Cities, as the city has put in place the necessary standards to acquire such membership. In the application for the membership, the municipality affirmed the importance of education in implementing Qatar National Vision 2030 and in resolving the difficulties faced by world governments.

The Unesco Global Network of Learning Cities is an international policy-oriented network providing inspiration, know-how and best practices. Learning cities at all stages of development can benefit greatly from sharing ideas with other cities, as solutions for issues that arise in one learning city may already exist in other cities. Meanwhile, the MME informed that Al Daayen Municipality’s Gardens Section has held an event on dates. It features an exhibition of dates and various types of palm trees in addition to a lecture on the nutritional value of dates. At the end of the event, boxes of dates were given out to the participating employees and visitors. The ministry also said 10.8 tonnes of dates were sold on Saturday at the ongoing second Local Dates Festival in Souq Waqif. The festival is set to conclude on August 12.

The event will be part of the international mindsports scene.

We are very excited to be hosting the first edition of the Qatar Mindsports Championships in the Middle East, aiming to take over the organising and delivery of the event in Qatar, and for enthusiasts of all ages and countries to become part of the global mindsports scene.

The Marriott Marquis City Center Doha, official and partner hotel of the championship, is the largest hotel in Qatar, managed by the Marriott International Hotels group, and is the official partner hotel of the championship.

Tickets director Matthew Shalhoub said: "In addition to hosting the event, we have been keen to offer the stretcher and transport the athletes to the venue, and to offer the hospitality and accommodation to the participating athletes."

The event was hosted by the Qatar Tourism Authority (QTA), in cooperation with the Ministry of Culture and Sports.

“Driving the 488 Spider on the track and in the city were unbelievable experiences but the tale of handling it around short obstacle course will be really mind-blowing."
Kheesa Interchange revamp to reduce commute time

The revamp of Al Kheesa Interchange will improve traffic flow along the major arterial road between Al Khor and Al Shamal. The revamp includes the construction of a new interchange to serve areas such as Al Kheesa, Umm Slal Mohamed and Al Khor. The project, worth QR80 million, was implemented by Ashghal to improve traffic flow and reduce travel time for road users in this area.

The official opening of the Al Kheesa Interchange was held on Sunday. The opening ceremony was attended by the Ashghal’s Expressway department manager Yousuf al-Emadi, who said this was the last major infrastructure project in the area. The official said the development of the North Road Corridor is a vital part of the project that connects both the western and eastern zones of Qatar. The interchange will improve traffic flow and help reduce traffic density, he said.

The new interchange is an important part of the North Road Corridor Enhancement project, which is part of the Central Municipal Council’s efforts to improve the services provided by the municipal council to the citizens of Al Kheesa and Al Khor. The road will also serve the areas of Al Khor, Lusail and Al Khor, which are currently undergoing rapid development.

The Al Kheesa Interchange is one of the most important traffic nodes in the central region of Qatar. It is also a vital part of the planned North Road Corridor Network. The new interchange will improve traffic flow and reduce travel time for road users, making it easier to connect to and from North Road.

The road linking Ashghal and North Road has been completed, providing a direct link between the two and connecting them to the interchange. The road will help reduce congestion and improve traffic flow in the area.

Palestinian family faces Jerusalem eviction after half century

A new family faces eviction in Jerusalem, a city that is the capital of two states, Israel and Palestine. The Palestinian family lives in Sheikh Jarrah, a neighborhood that has been the subject of numerous evictions in recent years.

Background:

Sheikh Jarrah is a neighborhood in East Jerusalem that has been the site of numerous disputes over land ownership and eviction. The family in question, the Ayoub family, has lived in their home for over half a century.

Current Situation:

The Ayoub family is facing eviction from their home in Sheikh Jarrah, a neighborhood in East Jerusalem. The family has lived in the home for over half a century, and they are now facing the prospect of being forced out of their home.

Government Response:

Israel's Supreme Court has ruled that the family has until [date] to vacate the property. The court decision was based on a claim by a private developer that the home is located on land that was expropriated by the state for development purposes.

Community Response:

The Palestinian community in Sheikh Jarrah has expressed outrage at the eviction order. The family's lawyers have appealed the decision, and there are ongoing protests in support of the family's right to remain in their home.

International Response:

The international community, including the United Nations, has expressed concern over the eviction and has called for a peaceful resolution to the dispute.

Conclusion:

The Ayoub family's eviction is just one of many cases of forced evictions in Sheikh Jarrah and other neighborhoods in East Jerusalem. The issue highlights the ongoing tension between Israel and the Palestinian Authority over control of the city.
Twelve worshippers were shot dead in a Baptist church in Nigeria, in the latest of a series of deadly attacks in the northeast. More than 50 others were injured after Boko Haram, the insurgent group responsible for many of Nigeria's worst atrocities, launched a surprise attack on the church in Ozubulu.

The bodies of at least 40 others were recovered from the scene, including women and children. The church was one of several targets of Boko Haram last week, as the group continued its campaign of terror across the region.

Witnesses said that the attackers, who arrived in trucks and on motorcycles, began shooting as worshippers were gathering for Sunday service. They said that the attack lasted for more than an hour, leaving the church filled with smoke and debris.

A local activist said most of the casualties were ethnic Tiv, a Bantu ethnic group, near Calabar, in Nigeria's Cross River state. The activist said that the attackers were targeting people who were not members of the Tiv ethnic group.

The Nigerian government has launched an investigation into the attack, and has ordered security forces to take immediate action to prevent similar attacks in the future. However, many residents of the region have lost hope in their government's ability to protect them from Boko Haram's violent campaigns.

Dozens killed in ethnic violence in eastern Congo

The government of the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) has confirmed that at least 12 people were killed in ethnic violence in the province of South Kivu, near the border with Rwanda.

The violence erupted after a land dispute between two ethnic groups, the Twa people and the Luvungi. According to the government, the conflict was sparked by the Twa people's demand for access to land and resources in the area.

The government has deployed military forces to the region to try to restore order and prevent further violence. However, many residents of the area have lost faith in the government's ability to protect them.

The DRC is one of the most conflict-prone countries in the world, with a history of ethnic and political violence dating back to the 1960s. The government has been accused of failing to provide adequate security to its citizens.

Killed and dumped in wells: the horrors of Jammeh's regime

Zimbabwe opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai was killed and dumped in a well, along with his political rivals Nkosana Mhlophe and Tendai Biti, in the latest of a series of violent attacks in the country.

The opposition leader had been targeted by the regime of President Robert Mugabe, who has been in power for 37 years, and has used political violence and repression to maintain his hold on power.

The attack is thought to be the latest in a series of crackdowns on political opponents, as the regime prepares to hold a constitutional conference later this year.

The opposition has been calling for a peaceful transition of power, but the regime has refused to consider any form of political opposition. The International Community has called on the regime to respect the rights of its citizens, and to allow for a peaceful and democratic transition of power.

Parents need to stop kids bingeing on social media

The government department responsible for safety online has announced that online safety must be a priority for schools during the summer holidays. The announcement comes as the number of children accessing social media has increased significantly over the past year.

"We need to ensure that children are safe online," said the department. "We are seeing an increase in the number of children using social media, and we need to ensure that we are doing everything we can to protect them.

"Parents need to be aware of the risks that their children face online, and they need to be proactive about ensuring that their children are safe."

French prosecutors have solved an 18-month investigation after a man tried to blow up the Eiffel Tower with a fake bomb. The suspect, a 25-year-old Romanian, was arrested in August and has now been sentenced to five years in prison. The Eiffel Tower, a symbol of French culture and tourism, was closed briefly during the investigation as a precaution. The suspect, who had a history of psychiatric issues, was prevented from carrying out his plan due to the timely intervention of police officers. The incident highlights the ongoing threat of terrorism in France and the importance of security measures at popular tourist destinations.

Austria

Austria has imposed a cap on special military pensions for the military and the European Union member state will miss 1,000 lei ($260.32). Tutuianu, a former chairman of the Romanian Union Union, said. The average pension stands at 3,292 lei ($856.98) per month, Tutuianu said.

Scotland

A Scottish police officer has been lauded for stopping an attack on the Eiffel Tower last year. The officer, who was off duty, confronted the suspect and disarmed him before he could carry out his plan. The officer’s quick thinking and bravery have been praised by colleagues and the public, highlighting the importance of vigilance and community involvement in preventing acts of terrorism.

Congress faces existential crisis after string of losses

A five-year-old girl, who was among those killed in the multi-storey building collapse in Bhiwandi, died on Wednesday, taking the toll to seven.

The girl, Asha, 5, was at her home in the fourth floor of the building that caved in at around 8pm on Monday. She was trapped along with her cousin, 7-year-old Jignesh. Jignesh died on the spot while Asha was taken to hospital but died on Wednesday.

Chraitar had been using the building for an event and did not have a permit for any such gathering, Thane collector said.

"Despite repeated visits by civic department, no report of any permission was found," the collector said.

The incident happened near the Bhiwandi railway station. The cause of the building collapse is yet to be determined.

The Bhiwandi police have registered a case of culpable homicide in connection with the building collapse and an investigation is underway. The hospital has handed over the bodies to the relatives.

National President of Congress Party Rahul Gandhi has condoled the death of the victim.

"Taking note of the distressing news of the Bhiwandi tragedy, Congress President Rahul Gandhi has expressed his deepest condolences to the bereaved family. The incident is a stark reminder to all of us of the urgent need to build better and safer structures. Our heart goes out to the family as we mourn this terrible loss. Let's ensure that such tragedies do not happen again. We are standing with the bereaved family," Rahul Gandhi's spokesperson said.

Diplomatic coup for China in sea row

China yesterday sealed a diplomatic coup in its campaign to stimulate multilateral consultations against its emergent claims to the South China Sea when Southeast Asian nations issued a diluted statement on the dispute and agreed to Beijing’s terms on it.

The release of the statement came shortly after the ministers and Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi and ASEAN’s high officials met on a framework for conducting negotiations and, according to the code of conduct with China be “legally binding.”

President Rodrigo Duterte has called on the military to hire additional personnel to combat the rising number of threats to national security, including the presence of the Maute militant group in Marawi City.

The President, speaking at the Black Mountain Jail in Cebu City on Friday, said the government has authorized the military to hire more personnel to bolster the security forces.

“We have seen the government’s commitment and seriousness in plowing funds on infrastructure,” Duterte said.

Bangladesh plans new unit to fight terrorism

The responsibility for counter terrorist actions will move to the new unit

By Mizan Rahman

Bangladesh is set to form a new ‘Anti-Terrorism Unit’ with modern arms, ammunition and hope that the special police unit will be able to do so successfully. “We want to root out militancy from the country and hope that the special police unit will be able to do so successfully,” said a police official.

The new unit will also have a research wing to conduct research on militancy and other blames. At present, the CTTC conducts anti-militant drills and tackles terrorist-related crimes. It has carried out anti-militant drills in the drive to a militant attack. Fifty-seven armed militants have been killed and 41 others were captured. The CTTC has also been able to seize huge amount of ammunition and weapons.

The CTTC is currently in charge of anti-militant drives while over 50 cases have so far been investigated.

The political gridlock long fuelled by America’s right-left divide has now become entrenched within the Republican Party, which controls both houses of Congress and the White House.

By Michael Spencer

In the summer, as his steps down, there is space in our political discourse where one of the key voices promoting our nation’s divided future is the one who seems to be reaching out for a break from the polarised politics that have long defined it. The politicians, activists, and figures who have dominated our political landscape for so long are among those who have long been the architects of our political divide.

The Brazilian has ambitions beyond fattening his bank balance

Neymar looking for more challenges at Paris St. Germain

Barcelona fans have not taken kindly to Neymar leaving the club, with posters appearing outside Camp Nou denouncing him as a “traitor” and a “mercenary”, but in heading for Paris-Saint Germain the winger has made a brave decision.

The money paid by Qatar-backed PSG is eye-watering, with the 222mn euro transfer fee stumped up. This money could have moved to any other side in the world and instantly instantly sending the player to China or Europe. The big money is flowing from Qatar, from the Bernabeu to Old Trafford, to Parc des Princes. Overseas loans are increasingly common, with the 222mn euro transfer fee stumped up. Recovery is not resolution

The Federal Reserve’s ongoing ultra-low interest rate may also be contributing to the ongoing recovery. But some economists argue that the rate is too low, and that it is helping to drive inflation and asset prices higher. Others believe that the rate is too high, and that it is slowing the economy.

The Federal Reserve’s low interest rate policy may be contributing to the ongoing recovery, but some economists argue that the rate is too low, and that it is helping to drive inflation and asset prices higher. Others believe that the rate is too high, and that it is slowing the economy.

During the 2008 financial crisis, the Federal Reserve lowered interest rates to near zero in an attempt to stimulate the economy. This was followed by quantitative easing (QE), a policy that involves the purchase of long-term bonds to further lower interest rates and increase the money supply. The goal of this policy was to help stimulate the economy and prevent a deeper recession.

Some economists argue that the Federal Reserve’s low interest rate policy has helped to drive asset prices higher and contributed to the ongoing recovery. This is because lower interest rates make it cheaper for businesses and consumers to borrow money, which can lead to increased spending and investment. Additionally, lower interest rates can help to stimulate the housing market, as people are more likely to buy homes when interest rates are low.

However, other economists argue that the Federal Reserve’s low interest rate policy has also contributed to inflation and asset price inflation. They believe that the low interest rate policy has inflated asset prices, such as stocks and housing, and that this has put upward pressure on inflation. Additionally, some believe that the low interest rate policy has contributed to economic imbalances, such as a housing bubble, and that this could lead to future financial crises.

Regardless of whether the Federal Reserve’s low interest rate policy is considered a success or a failure, it is clear that the policy has had a significant impact on the economy. The policy has helped to stimulate the economy and prevent a deeper recession, but it has also contributed to inflation and asset price inflation. As a result, it is important for policymakers to carefully consider the trade-offs of the policy and to implement it in a way that maximizes its benefits and minimizes its risks.

Siege lies versus hard truths

The lies and rumours spread by the siege states have been exposed and discredited by facts and evidence over the past two years. Qatar has proved that its commitment to the principles of human rights, freedom of thought, expression and association has not been compromised by the siege. Qatar has shown the world that it is a beacon of hope and a model of how a country can overcome challenges and maintain its sovereignty and independence.

NBK Holding launches national ‘Journey of Glory’

NBK Holding, the leading Qatari financial institution, launched its national ‘Journey of Glory’ campaign to mark the 20th anniversary of the establishment of the National Human Rights Committee (NHRC). The campaign, which is part of the National Human Rights Committee’s 20th anniversary celebrations, aims to raise awareness of human rights issues and promote the values of tolerance, diversity, and respect for all.

Qatar’s economy continues to grow, with the country’s GDP expected to reach $138 billion this year, up from $118 billion in 2020. The country’s strong performance is driven by its diversified economy, with the hydrocarbon sector accounting for about 40% of GDP.

Blockade boosts industries in Qatar

Al Janur

The blockade of Qatar by some of the Arab Gulf states a few years ago created challenging opportunities for the country. Qatar’s industries have diversified away from oil and gas, and have started to focus on other export-oriented industries such as construction, tourism, and financial services.

Qatar has also become a hub for innovation and technology, with the country’s government investing heavily in research and development. The country’s Silicon Oasis has attracted many tech companies, including Facebook, Twitter, and Google, which have set up offices in Qatar.

Qatar’s strong performance is also evident in its agricultural sector, with the country producing enough food to meet its domestic needs.

The economic effects of the blockade have been mixed, with some sectors benefiting from the lack of competition, while others have struggled.

The blockade has also had a positive impact on Qatar’s healthcare sector, with more resources being directed towards healthcare and education.

The blockade has also led to a focus on domestic production, with Qatar increasing its local content rates to over 80%.
