Ministerial group to supervise National Development Strategies

The Cabinet’s regular meeting, chaired by HE the Prime Minister Sheikh Abdullah bin Nasser bin Khalifa al-Thani, approved a draft decision by the prime minister to form a ministerial group for general supervision and follow-up of the National Development Strategies. Following the meeting, which was held at the Amiri Diwan, HE the Minister of Justice and Acting Minister of Interior Sheikh Abdullah bin Khalifa al-Thani said that as per the draft decision, a committee called the “Ministerial Group for Public Supervision and Follow-up of National Development Strategies” shall be established.

This group will be entrusted with a number of functions, including general supervision, follow-up and evaluation of the performance indicators and rates of achievement of the National Development Strategies. It will also ensure that plans, programmes, projects and implementation mechanisms are aligned with the goals and priorities of the National Development Strategy. The Cabinet also approved draft decisions by the Ministry of Municipality and Environment on the quota system for import of Hydrochlorofluorocarbons (HCFCs).

The Ministry of Municipality and Environment prepared the draft resolution within the framework of completing the issuing of the necessary decisions to activate the provisions of Law No 19 for 2015 on the issuance of the common system on ozone-depleting substances for the GCC countries, and in accordance with the provisions of the 1985 Vienna Convention for the Protection of the Ozone Layer and the 1987 Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer. The Cabinet moreover approved a draft agreement for economic, trade and technical co-operation between the governments of Qatar and Somalia.

The Cabinet reviewed the comments by the ministers and some entities about the proposals of the committee concerned with studying the phenomenon of bad cheques, and the views of the Ministry of Justice in this regard. The Cabinet took the appropriate decision.

US senators urge Trump to suspend N-talks with Saudi Arabia

WASHINGTON

Both Republican and Democratic lawmakers have voted to suspend US-kingdom talks in Riyadh. The senators have called for a halt to talks and seek broader discussions on human rights issues and the Middle East. The senators, led by Senator Marco Rubio, said the talks should not proceed without addressing human rights violations.

US lawmakers have expressed their concerns about the US-kingdom partnership and have called for a moratorium on arms sales and other economic aid to Saudi Arabia. The senators have also called for an end to the arms sales to Saudi Arabia, which has been a key partner of the United States in the Middle East.

The senators have cited reports of human rights abuses and the involvement of Saudi Arabia in the Yemen war as reasons for their vote. They have also expressed concerns about the kingdom's role in the war on terrorism and the support it provides to extremist groups.

The US Senate's vote to suspend talks follows a similar move by the House of Representatives last week. The senators have called for a moratorium on arms sales to Saudi Arabia and for a halt to economic aid.

The Senate resolution, introduced by Senator Bob Corker, calls for a halt to all arms sales and other economic aid to Saudi Arabia and for a halt to all direct and indirect military assistance to the kingdom. The resolution also calls for a halt to all direct and indirect economic aid to the kingdom.

The resolution, which was introduced by Senator Bob Corker and co-sponsored by Senator Marco Rubio, was passed by a vote of 98-0 in the Senate. The resolution is expected to be soon signed into law by President Barack Obama.

The resolution is a response to the kingdom's role in the war on terrorism and the support it provides to extremist groups. The kingdom is also accused of human rights abuses and the involvement in the Yemen war.

The resolution also calls for a halt to all direct and indirect economic aid to the kingdom. The resolution is expected to be soon signed into law by President Barack Obama. Sudanese rebel leader Machar returned to mark peace deal

The first thing Machar did when Machar was released from prison in South Sudan was to return to the capital to celebrate a peace deal. More than a year after he was forced into hiding, Machar returned to Juba on Tuesday to mark the one-year anniversary of a deal with his former boss, Salva Kiir, that ended six years of civil war in the world’s youngest nation.

Machar, who is the leader of the South Sudan People’s Liberation Movement and Army (SPLA), was detained in July 2016 by Kiir’s government after he was accused of plotting a coup. The two men had long been allies but fell out in 2013, with Kiir accusing Machar of attempting to overthrow him.

Machar addressed the media on Tuesday, saying he was returning to the capital to mark the one-year anniversary of the peace deal.

“I am back to Juba to celebrate a peace deal that ended six years of civil war in South Sudan,” Machar said.

The deal was signed on September 21, 2018, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and ended the civil war, which began in 2013 and claimed the lives of an estimated 400,000 people.

Machar, who was released from prison in July 2019, said he was returning to Juba to celebrate the deal and to meet with Kiir to discuss the implementation of the agreement.

The deal called for a power-sharing government, with Machar serving as vice president and Kiir as president. However, the deal has been mostly ignored, with neither man stepping down and both men maintaining control over their respective regions.

Machar’s return to Juba is likely to be met with skepticism from many South Sudanese, who have grown tired of the political bickering and the lack of progress towards a lasting peace.

Despite the deal, violence continues to flare up in South Sudan, with clashes between government forces and rebel groups still occurring.

Machar’s return to Juba is also likely to be met with criticism from the international community, which has been pushing for the implementation of the deal and for the release of political prisoners.

In a statement, the United Nations said it was “deeply concerned” by the return of Machar to Juba, noting that the deal had not been implemented and that the country was still “far from peace.”

The UN called on all parties to the conflict to “cease all hostilities and to engage in good-faith negotiations to achieve a lasting settlement.”
T he movement of a jailed Ni- gerian activist and former journalist has been delayed because he is suffering from serious medical conditions, the president of the African Union (AU) has said.

Dr Nkosazana Dlamini-Zuma, who is in charge of the AU’s Peace and Security Council, said Dr Omoyele Sowore, who was arrested in August, has been transferred to a hospital in the Fiji Islands.

"Dr Sowore has been transferred to a hospital in Fiji because of his health condition," Dlamini-Zuma said in a statement.

Sowore, a prominent activist and journalist, was arrested in August on charges of sedition and incitement to undermine the government.

But his arrest has sparked widespread protests in Nigeria, with thousands of people rallying in support of the activist and demanding his release.

Dlamini-Zuma said the AU was monitoring the situation closely and had condemned the arrest of Sowore.

The AU has called for the release of all political prisoners in Nigeria and for a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

"The AU reiterates its support for the rights of activists and journalists in Nigeria," she said.

"The AU will continue to monitor the situation closely and provide any assistance needed to ensure that the fundamental rights of activists and journalists are respected in the country."
Boston gangster's death probed as homicide

Two Boston police detectives investigating the death of James "Whitey" Bulger, whose death has been ruled a homicide, said Tuesday that they are "nearing the end" of their investigation. The detectives said they have interviewed over 1,000 people and have reached a conclusion that will be made public in the near future.

Japan's nuclear industry growing, yet scholars warn it's fraught with technologi- cal and regulatory problems.

By NIKI SHIBATA in Tokyo

Japan's nuclear industry is seeing a resurgence, with the government providing financial incentives to restart reactors. However, experts warn that the industry faces numerous challenges.

The government has set a goal of generating 22% of its electricity from nuclear power by 2030. This is based on a recent analysis showing that nuclear power has become the world's third-largest source of energy, after coal and gas.

The government has announced plans to relicense eight reactors across the country since 2007 and 2011 after a stint in 2006 and 2007. The reactors were damaged during the 2011 earthquake and tsunami, and the government has committed to decontaminating them.

The safety reviews of PWR reactors (pressurized water reactors) have taken time, but they have resulted in progress on BWR reactors (boiling water reactors). The older BWR technology is being dismantled, and the reactors are being dismantled on-site.

"The nuclear industry is growing, and we are seeing a return of nuclear power," said Hideaki Kikkawa, an energy studies professor at Tokyo University of Science. "We are making progress toward decontamination at the disaster sites, and the government is taking this seriously."

The safety reviews of PWR reactors have taken time, but they have resulted in progress on BWR reactors. Some experts argue that the government is taking the necessary steps to ensure the safety of nuclear power.

Government eyeing Brexit deal by Nov 21, says minister

Britain’s closest neighbors have the most to lose from the EU referendum – and Leave voters in the UK may be facing the same fate too.

The government is eyeing a deal by November 21 to end the UK’s membership of the European Union, insiders said yesterday.

Downing Street sources said there were indications of a framework deal being put together by British and EU negotiators.

But the sources added that the parties were far from达成 an agreement, with the next step being to confirm the mandate of the current government.

The government has set an informal deadline for the end of the year for a deal to be signed, with a formal agreement expected to be signed by late November.

The sources said the government was “eager” to land a deal by the end of the month, with talks continuing through the weekend.

The government is also keen to land a deal before the end of the year, with a vote on the deal expected to be held in Parliament by the end of the year.

The sources said the government was “very confident” of landing a deal before the end of the year, with a vote on the deal expected to be held in Parliament by the end of the year.

The Paris-based European Union finance ministry will release next week a white-paper document, according to a European Union official who wishes to remain anonymous.

The paper, which is intended to outline the fiscal implications of the EU's common currency, aims to address the issue of how to ensure that the euro is stable and sustainable in the face of increasing debt levels in peripheral countries.

It will be submitted to the finance ministers of the eurozone countries for their consideration, and the results will be published in a report to be presented to the EU's economic and financial council in March.

The paper will also discuss the implications of the eurozone's fiscal crisis for the EU's economic policies, as well as the possibilities of creating a eurozone-wide fiscal union.

Government has destroyed Patel’s legacy, says Congress

The opposition party has also alleged the government of creating a “false narrative of terrorism and espionage” by calling the statue a “bastion of terrorism and espionage”. Government spokesperson Randeep Surjewala, who has been touting the statue as a tribute to Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, says: “The only mantra to fulfill his legacy would be to work together for the welfare of the people and the development of the country. Only this can give true tribute to Sardar Patel’s legacy.”

Prime Minister Narendra Modi, speaking on the anniversary of Patel’s birth, said he was looking forward to the new statue as a “true tribute to Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel”. He added, “The future of the country is in our aspirations and is as huge as this statue. The only mantle to fulfill this is for all those who believed in Patel’s legacy and are working for the welfare of the people. This is something which is at the heart of our work.”

Vivek Ranjan Singh, a former police officer, said: “The prolongation of the victim’s journey cannot be appropriated. Those who try to do so are distorting. Those who try to do so are doing so for their own political and ideological gain.”

Actors Anupam Kher and Alia Bhatt have also spoken out against the proposed statue. Kher, who was awarded the Padma Shri for his contributions to film and theatre, said: “The only mantra to fulfill Patel’s legacy would be to work together for the welfare of the people and the development of the country.”

Bhatt, who played the role of Kathi Kamleth in the 2017 biopic Queen, said: “The only mantra to fulfill Patel’s legacy would be to work together for the welfare of the people and the development of the country.”

German Chancellor Angela Merkel is the de facto leader of the European Union and, in the wake of US abdication, of Western liberalism. Her announced departure in 2021 will come as a shock to both the continent and the world as a whole when it comes to the liberal trajectory of thought that has guided the continent for nearly three-quarters of a century. Merkel’s leadership and political genius represented a crucial balance in the transatlantic relationship, a necessary and important part of the military and political foundations of the liberal order.

Angela Merkel’s brief time as leader of the free world is coming to an end. But she was not strong enough to lift it. Not without her strong will. She was not able to lift it. Not without her political and economic liberalism that American presidents once occupied but that have since been cast aside. But she was not strong enough to lift it. Not without her strong will. The delegitimising effect of such attacks on the media and other forms of criticism has been devastating. He has, in fact, been one of the most critical individuals in the world, and his leadership has been fundamental. The danger comes when no new framework emerges to guide our leaders in their decisions. The current pushback from Washington against a business-as-usual approach to foreign policy is similarly shortsighted.

A history of murderous politics

By Jeffrey D Sacks

hat was one of the most significant events of the late 20th century? How modern history has instigated the murder of the former US president, John F. Kennedy? How did the Kennedy assassination take place? The answer is: Yes. It did. It took place.

The assassination occurred at an off-the-books political rally in Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963. The assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, shot and killed Kennedy as he rode in an open convertible car along the motorcade.

The assassination has been the subject of much speculation and conjecture over the years. Some believe that Oswald acted alone, while others believe that he was part of a larger conspiracy.

The investigation into the assassination lasted for years and involved multiple government agencies, including the FBI, the CIA, and the Warren Commission. The commission concluded that Oswald had acted alone and was not part of a larger conspiracy.

However, many people still believe that there was a conspiracy involved. Some evidence suggests that Oswald was part of a larger group of people who were involved in the assassination.

Despite the ongoing debate, the Kennedy assassination remains one of the most enigmatic events in American history. It continues to capture the attention of scholars, researchers, and the general public alike.

America's plutocrats are winning

eat sleeping bags, or sleep sacks, are becoming more popular for keeping babies warm while in the crib or bassinet. Some parents use them to prevent sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS), but there is still much debate about their effectiveness.

The baby sleeping bag is a type of sleep sack made of soft, breathable fabric. It is designed to keep the baby warm and cozy while they sleep. Some parents believe that sleep sacks are a safer alternative to traditional blankets, as they prevent the risk of suffocation.

However, there are concerns about the potential health risks associated with using sleep sacks. Some studies have suggested that sleep sacks may increase the risk of sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS), while others have found no evidence of a link.

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) recommends against the use of sleep sacks for infants under 6 months of age. The AAP states that sleep sacks are associated with a higher risk of SIDS, and that parents should consider using a crib mattress that is firm and free from any loose bedding.

In response to these concerns, many parents are choosing to use sleep sacks instead of traditional blankets. However, it is important to note that there is still much debate about the effectiveness of sleep sacks and their potential health risks.

America’s plutocrats might be safer than blankets

By Thomas Hyland

People have been using "baby sleeping bags" or "sleep sacks" for several decades, but only recently have they gained widespread popularity. These bags are designed to provide a safe and comfortable sleep environment for infants.

Since 1997, the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD) has been conducting research on the use of sleep sacks. The NICHD found that sleep sacks have been associated with a lower risk of SIDS compared to traditional blankets.

The NICHD also found that sleep sacks have a number of other benefits. They can help reduce the risk of overheating, they can provide a sense of security, and they can be used as a transition from a crib to a bed.

Despite the benefits of sleep sacks, there are also some concerns. Some parents worry that sleep sacks may be too warm for their baby, or that the baby may become too hot inside the sack.

The AAP recommends that parents monitor their baby's temperature while using a sleep sack. They also suggest that parents should make sure the sleep sack is not too tight and that the baby is able to move freely inside the sack.

With so many factors to consider, it's clear that sleep sacks are a controversial topic. However, the evidence suggests that they may be a safer alternative to traditional blankets, and they continue to gain popularity among parents across the country.
HMC opens Sealine Clinic for ninth consecutive year

Hamed Medical Corporation (HMC) yesterday opened its Sealine Medical Clinic, located in the north-western part of the country near Marsa Al Amal.

This is the ninth consecutive year that HMC has operated the clinic, which will begin receiving patients at 1pm today and will remain open every weekend until April 28.

Al-Maktoum, chief communications officer at HMC and project manager for the Sealine Medical Center, said HMC operates the clinic each year to ensure medical care, and specifically emergency medical services, be available during the busy camping season.

"Today's opening of the Hamad Medical Clinic at Sealine signifies the beginning of what will be dubbed as another busy camping season. Our annual opening of the Sealine Medical Clinic demonstrates HMC's commitment to providing the best possible healthcare to campers in the Sealine and surrounding aras," said al-Khater, who is also chair of the Ministry of Public Health's Healthcare Commissioner Committee.

HMC, the Ministry of Municipality and Environment, and the Ministry of Health's Healthcare Commissioner Committee work together to ensure healthcare services be available for residents and visitors, "said al-Khater.

The Sealine Medical Clinic, located very close to the camping areas, on the same site where it has been located for the last four years. The clinic is located close to popular camping areas to facilitate easier access, should healthcare services be required by residents or visitors," said al-Khater.

"As a result of ongoing collaboration between HMC and Qatar Tourism Authority, we have 11 ambulances stationed at the Sealine area during peak times, including Fridays, Saturdays, and during holidays. These will be on ambulances, five 4x4 emergency vehicles stationed at the Sealine Media Clinic, and our LifeFlight services will also be available for more critical cases," said al-Khater.

The Ambulance Service is ready to transport emergency cases from the desert to the clinic, or to the helicopter landing area, as required.
