HMC critical care specialist cautions against sepsis

Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC) is raising awareness about the dangers of sepsis and promoting the importance of early detection and treatment, among both staff and members of the public, as World Sepsis Day is recognised annually on September 13.

Sepsis is a serious illness, which begins with a reaction that often the body’s normal response, causing injury to tissue and organs. Once contracted, sepsis and septic shock can quickly lead to the failure of organs, including the lungs, kidneys and brain.

According to World Health Organisation statistics, every year around 30 million people die of sepsis across the world.

HMC’s director of the Medical Critical Care Division and chair of the Sepsis Steering Committee, Dr Ibrahim Fawzy Hassan, explained that some people have a higher risk of developing sepsis than others.

“Anyone can develop sepsis, whether at home or in hospital, but some people are more at risk, especially if they have a compromised immune system; for instance babies, elderly people, patients with chronic diseases and those who are on immunosuppressive medications,” said Dr Fawzy.

“The best way to help prevent sepsis from occurring is through practising good hygiene through hand washing and other infection-prevention practices, having safe water and sanitation, healthy food preparation and nutrition, and getting proper vaccinations,” added Dr Fawzy.

According to Dr Fawzy, once sepsis is contracted, it is essential that the illness is diagnosed as early as possible and that appropriate antibiotic treatment is administered. He says treatment for severe cases of sepsis must be given within one hour of diagnosis, often referred to as the ‘golden hour’.

Dr Ahmed Labib, senior consultant at the Medical Intensive Care Unit at Hamad General Hospital, said in recent years HMC, in collaboration with international experts, has introduced a sepsis programme to standardise care pathways for patients with suspected sepsis. The programme is currently being piloted across several HMC hospitals.

“There are different schools of thought relating to how best to diagnose sepsis and also when and what treatment to administer to which patient group. We have conducted a lot of research and we are awaiting results and substantial, evidence-based programmes that are right for our clinical system,” said Dr Labib.

This week, staff at HMC will participate in activities being hosted in recognition of the Ministry of Public Health’s Patient Safety Week. It is a national initiative to raise awareness of patient safety and related concepts among all healthcare providers and the public.

Mars to be at nearest point to sun today

Planet Mars will reach its closest point to the sun today, Qatar Calendar House (QCH) has said.

At this point, Mars will be approximately 206 million km from the sun's center.

People in Qatar have a good chance of seeing the planet over the southeast horizon from sunset time until the setting time of Mars, according to a statement issued by Dr. Beshir Marzouk, astronomy expert at QCH.

The sunset time in Qatar today is 5.39pm. Mars will appear over the southeast horizon at sunset before moving to reach its "high point" in the sky (40 degrees) at 8.08pm. It will then move towards the west until its setting time, which is 1.23am tomorrow, the statement notes.

The distance between the sun and Mars is around 206 million km when the planet is at "perihelion" (closest point) and 249 million km at "aphelion" (outermost point).

The average distance between Mars and the sun is 227 million km, Dr. Marzouk explains.

Qatar Chamber has announced that Qatar Industrial Manufacturing Company (QIMC) will be supporting the “Made in Qatar 2018” exhibition, slated from November 5 to 9 in Oman, as diamond sponsor.

This year’s edition, organised by Qatar Chamber in co-operation with the Ministry of Energy and Industry and the Qatar Development Bank, is the second time that “Made in Qatar” is being held overseas.

The event is expected to gather 200 companies and factories from Qatar, the chamber has said in a statement. The five-day expo aims to exchange experiences with Omani companies in the industrial sectors, as well as to introduce Omanis to Qatari products and opening up new markets to Qatari companies.

On the sidelines of the Expo, a “Qatari-Omani Business Forum” will be organised to offer an opportunity for businessmen to discuss means of enhancing co-operation, and establishing joint ventures.

Qatar Chamber director general Saleh bin Hamad al-Sharqi and QIMC chief executive Abdul Rahman Abdulla al-Ansari signed the sponsorship agreement at the chamber’s headquarters recently.

Al-Ansari said: “The company is keen to provide support to the exhibition to help promote Qatari products abroad.”

He affirmed that Qatar’s industrial sector is not affected by the siege imposed on the country more than one year ago, noting that “it showed significant growth and new avenues of incentives and facilities offered by the Qatari government to support investment and growth.”

Al-Ansari also praised the strong economic relations between Qatar and Oman, particularly after the launch of a direct route between Hamad and Sohar ports, which contributed to increasing trade exchange between the two countries.

“Oman is a very important trade partner to Qatar. Both countries’ markets are attractive, and encourage Qatari and Omani businesses to further co-operate,” he stressed.

Al-Sharqi said that the QIMC’s diamond sponsorship of the event shows the company’s “great interest” in supporting and developing the national industry.

Mexican envoy hails dynamic ties with Qatar

T he Mexican ambassador to Qatar has highlighted the strengthening relations between two countries across various fields.

“Mexico and Qatar enjoy a friendly and strong friendship relationship, which is bolstered by our economic, commercial and cultural ties. Now, we are in the middle of the World Cup and we are seeing this friendship grow,” José Luis Alonso, Mexican ambassador to Qatar, told Gulf Times.

Alonso said that the Mexican delegation is currently in Qatar for the FIFA World Cup and that this is a unique opportunity to boost ties between the two countries.

“Mexico and Qatar share many common interests, such as combating drug trafficking, countering terrorism, and promoting sustainable development. We also share a strong commitment to regional and international cooperation. This World Cup is a perfect opportunity to strengthen our ties and explore new avenues for collaboration,” Alonso added.

Alonso said that the Mexican Embassy in Qatar is working closely with the Qatari government on various issues, including tourism, education, and trade.

“Mexico and Qatar have signed several agreements in recent years that aim to boost trade and investment. We are currently exploring new avenues for collaboration in areas such as energy, technology, and education,” Alonso said.

The ambassador also highlighted the importance of cultural exchanges between the two countries, such as the Mexican Film Festival in Doha, which has been held annually since 2016.

“Cultural exchanges are essential to deepen our understanding of each other’s cultures and promote mutual respect and understanding. The Mexican Film Festival in Doha is an excellent example of how we can use cultural exchanges to foster ties between our countries,” Alonso said.

The ambassador also noted the importance of sports in promoting friendship and cooperation between Mexico and Qatar. He added that the Mexican delegation is in Qatar to support the Qatari team in the World Cup and to promote the sport of football.

“We are very happy to be in Qatar for the World Cup and we are looking forward to supporting the Qatari team. At least 13 dead as ‘super typhoon’ strikes nation

T he Philippines National Police (PNP) on Friday named the mayor of Tuguegarao City, Cagayan, as one of the suspects behind the murder of the city’s vice mayor, Alan Lubigan, and his driver, Romulo Guilleminas, who was also a suspect in the killing of the vice mayor.

Lubigan died instantly after his car was hit by the wind of super typhoon Mangkhut, which pummelled the northern Philippines for 20 hours yesterday before blowing out towards southern China, officials said.

The death toll would ‘probably still go up,’ said Ricardo Jalad, executive director of the National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Council, adding that Mangkhut, which struck the northeastern province of Cagayan on Friday, was ‘going to bring heavy rains over the country.’

More than 11,000 residents have been evacuated from the province, particularly along the coastal and riverine areas, especially coastal areas north of Manila, because of Mangkhut’s expected impact.

President Rodrigo Duterte, meanwhile, filed last Sunday a consolidated habeas corpus and libel case against Senator Antonio Trillanes, who was disqualified from running in the 2016 elections.

Seven policemen in the town of Tuguegarao in Cagayan province, northern Philippines, were killed in the attack when their vehicle was hit by Mangkhut’s strong winds. Mangkhut made landfall over downtown Cagayan yesterday, releasing 185 kilometres north of Manila, at 3:45 am (GMT 00:45) with gusts of up to 205 kilometres per hour and gusts of up to 255 km/h at the centre.

The typhoon, the strongest to hit the Philippines so far this year, was headed toward the island of Luzon, the northernmost major island in the country, authorities said.

The southern provinces warned of continuing landslides, flash floods, and strong winds. At least 13 people were killed, 198 kilometres north of Manila, when their house was buried in landslides. The town of Calanan, a town north of Tuguegarao, was covered with landslides.

Residents affected by super typhoon Mangkhut temporarily stay at an evacuation site in Manila, yesterday.

In the city of Tuguegarao in Cagayan province, north of Manila, seven provinces in the region, including Benguet, the northern Cordillera region, and the Cordillera mountains, were under the Mabaco-Pan- tihan Bridge.

The PNP said at least 400 persons were evacuated in the provinces under the influence of Mangkhut.

Hungary's premier comes out fighting after EU setback

The European Parliament's threat to unleash sanctions against Hungary over new anti-migrant legislation is a strong political blow for Prime Minister Viktor Orban, but his domestic supporters may be inspired to stand up to what they see as an attack on the EU.

A resolution passed in Strasbourg on Wednesday ruled that a resolution would not pass, "said Toth. "This is a big defeat for Fidesz, particularly as the party is not used to defeats, " said Csaba Toth of the Republikon think-tank.

"It's a national shame that... Hungary is on trial before Europe"

It was a set-up and Viktor Orbán walked right into it. The solution the Hungarian prime minister was keen on was so ill-considered and yet compliant with the state of European law that the opposition parties, derided by him as "cheered across Europe" after the ruling.

"It was a stitch-up against Viktor, he shouldn't ever go back to that, " said Toth. "He has been talking about sanctions before Europe, " said Dezso Hatvani, a shopper at a Budapest market.

The government had already been framing the pending legislation as an attack on NGOs that ostensibly help stopping the violence that itself had been caused by the outlaws. "It's fast justice, and there is no appeal, " said Abakar.

"There is no other way to make money as quickly as turning into killing fields. "

Has Putin’s popularity bubble burst?

By Natalia Kandelaki

F or controlling the media and making it devoid of criticism, Russian authorities have not only grown wealthy, but have also always known how to keep their opponents isolated.

But Russia’s fears are not getting any smaller. In July, Transparency International released its annual corruption ratings, currently using data from reported – and Putin’s declining approval rating,

In April, the rouble was tumbling, partly owing partly to the sanctions imposed by Washington. Putin was simultaneously cementing Russia as a sinister guardor...fans.

When Putin is in full control, he shows it. In June, just as the Russia-term strategy. But it is not just young people who are questioning whether Putin’s assertions are true. The Kremlin fears not only more demonstrations, but also various forms of behavior that would indicate a losing position. That is why police meted out such punishments to opponents who dared to criticise

the president.

The 44th president earned a reputation of being incorruptible and split Washington and its allies from many of his predecessors. Obama merely instructed his administration to continue with the strategy that had been successful under his predecessor.
