Ministry observes World Ozone Day

Qatar, represented by the General Authority of Meteorology and Environment, celebrated the 35th World Ozone Day on Wednesday.

“October 16 is celebrated as World Ozone Day to raise public awareness of the importance of protecting the ozone layer,” Dr. Hassan bin Ali Al-Kaabi, the director general of the General Authority of Meteorology and Environment, said.

He added that air pollutants, like chlorine and bromine, from human activities erode the protective ozone layer. They slowly return to the stratosphere and help in the formation of more ozone.

He pointed out that Qatar’s resources are used in a sustainable way to meet the needs of the present generation and protect the ozone layer.

Qatar Airways welcomes 47 Qatari graduates under Al Darb programme

Qatar Airways welcomed 47 Qatari graduates into the Al Darb Programme, programme by bringing a Junior induction event on September 19 and 20, 2019, at Hamad International Airport, Doha, Qatar.

The Ministry of Education and Higher Education (MoE) and Qatar Airways have signed a memorandum of understanding (MoU) to offer support to 47 graduates who are in line with the Qatarisation programme. The graduates are from various academic fields and will be employed by the national airline.

Qatar Airways vice-president (HRM) Sheikha Ahlam Jassim Al-Kuwari said that Qatar Airways’ commitment to the development of Qatari nationals is one of the core values of the national airline.

The programme aims to increase the number of nationals joining Qatar Airways. It is a plug and play to introduce fresh graduates of different fields to the aviation sector, enhancing professional exposure while maintaining the work-study balance, classroom learning and on-water experience.

The programme is a part of Qatar Airways’ continuous efforts to support the development of Qatari nationals and enhance their career opportunities.

Community College hosts GAC delegation

The Community College of Qatar (CCQ) recently hosted a special delegation from the General Authority of Customs (GAC) on the occasion of National Customs Day.

The delegation’s visit, led by Assistant Director General, Custom Protection and Anti-Fraud Department, Dr. Hazaimeh, was aimed at introducing students and showcasing the different career opportunities at GAC.

The delegation included representatives from various departments and branches of GAC.

The visit was also an opportunity for participants to take a closer look at GAC’s operations and Risk Analysis Department in Doha.

The visit also included a session on the importance of National Customs Day, which is celebrated annually on November 18, and the role of customs in enforcing tax laws and protecting the country’s borders.

Community College students expressed their interest in working for GAC and joining the national airline.

Tanzania is at the epicentre of global poaching and trafficking, which is on the rise in recent years. The cost of environmental crime to developing countries, including Tanzania, is estimated to be $100 billion per year. The criminal networks that drive this trade are highly sophisticated and often operate across borders.

African elephant tusk and rhino horn prices have soared in recent years, driven by demand from East Asia for use in traditional medicine. This has led to a dramatic decline in populations of both species. In Tanzania, for example, the number of elephants has fallen by over 80% since the 1980s.

The government of Tanzania has taken steps to combat poaching and trafficking, including the establishment of the ivory and rhino horn market. However, progress has been slow, and many experts believe more needs to be done.

African tourism is on the rise, with many countries seeing a surge in visitors in recent years. However, the industry is vulnerable to the impact of poaching and trafficking. The loss of key species can have a significant negative impact on tourism revenues and the broader economy.

The Tanzanian government has acknowledged the problem and has taken steps to address it. The country is home to some of the most important conservation areas in Africa, and it is important that these are protected for future generations.

Tanzania has been a leader in the conservation movement, and it is hoped that other countries will follow its example. With concerted effort, it is possible to reverse the trend of poaching and trafficking and protect these magnificent species for years to come.

Australia, China seek to power public inquiry into aged-care sector

Australia and China have pledged to cooperate in a joint public inquiry into aged-care for the elderly, following a series of reports in Australia about the poor quality of care in some aged-care facilities.

The joint inquiry will be led by a judge from each country and will examine the standards of care in aged-care facilities in both countries.

In Australia, the inquiry will focus on the care provided to residents in aged-care facilities, while in China, the inquiry will look at the care provided to Chinese residents.

The joint inquiry is expected to begin its work in mid-2020 and is expected to complete its work by the end of 2021.

The remains of a castle in Pembroke Castle in Wales were uncovered in 2017. The castle is one of the most famous castles in Britain, but dates from an initial dig, archaeologists have revealed. The castle is a major tourist attraction.

They have also uncovered a large building that is concluded to be a stone house. The building has also been found, which suggests a particularly imposing building, and other finds include a curving stone from a solid structure.

The castle was built for the Tudor dynasty, and the finds are expected to shed new light on the history of the castle. The archaeologists believe they are uncovering the remains of a building that was built inside the outer walls of the castle. It is about the two tombs, while the scale of the dig suggests the structure is of considerable height. The team has been carrying out an initial two-week exploration that ended yesterday. What they have found so far is instructive that they will want to return. Pembroke Castle, James Allsopp, who is leading the dig, said.

Macedonians must choose between a new foundation of prosperity and isolation and instability, Foreign Minister Zoran Zaev said today as he announced a referendum on the name-change of his country.

The proposed change, which would rename the country the Republic of North Macedonia, would be put to the international community and IMF creditors when they meet in the new year.

Zaev said the referendum will be held on March 25 and is expected to yield a result of 60% in favor of the name-change.

The name change is also expected to make it easier for Macedonia to join the EU and NATO.

Zaev also announced that he will begin negotiations with the EU for a new round of talks on the country’s accession.

The referendum will be held on March 25.

Main suspect in Haryana gang-rape case arrested

Police yesterday said that one of the three key sus-pects of a gang rape in Haryana had been arrested after the incident.

Special Investigation Team (SIT) chief Nazneen Bhasin said that the victim, a 17-year-old girl, was kidnapped and sedated by two men on September 12 after she was reportedly raped by four men.

Bhasin said that the accused had admitted to the crime and had been arrested.

The victim’s family had reported the incident to the police after her condition deteriorated following the sexual assault.

The victim, a school student, was reportedly raped on September 12 after she was kidnapped and forced to watch porn videos.

Bhasin said that the accused had confessed to the crime and had been arrested.

Theaccused, who belongs to the same village as the victim and was kidnapped, allegedly attacked her with a stone and then gang-raped her in a room in the village.

The family of the victim had contacted the police.

The victim had reportedly been in a “shock” after the incident.

The SIT had registered a case under the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (PSCSO) Act.

Man fills potholes out of love for dead son

AFP

Mumbai

D espite Suresh Bisht's smooth drive through the city, he looks, speaks, and acts like any other man in the city. But for one reason, he is different. Having lost his daughter in a road accident caused by potholes, a morose Bisht, 50, is on a mission to fill up potholes in the city.

To help deal with his grief, Bisht's daughter's school teachers named a scholarship after his daughter, and the local government offered to build a road near his house in her memory. But Bisht refused, saying, "I will spend all the compensation money on filling potholes in the city."

He has so far spent Rs 10,000 of his own savings to fill potholes in the city. "I also don't want anyone else to lose their loved ones as I have," Bisht said.

Bisht, a resident of Chembur in Mumbai, has been filling potholes since the accident. "I am trying to fill potholes along the entire road where the accident occurred," he said.

Bisht's daughter, Saurabh, was just 16 when she died in the accident. He has been filling potholes ever since.

"My daughter used to love walking on the plains of Powai. She was fond of flowers," Bisht said. "When I see potholes, I feel like it is my daughter who is walking on them."

Bisht has filled up over 100 potholes in the city so far. He plans to continue his mission until the city is free of potholes.

"I will not rest until every pothole is filled," he said. "My daughter's memory will keep me going."

Bisht's dedication has caught the attention of the local government, which has promised to support his mission.

"We appreciate Bisht's dedication," said a spokesperson for the Mumbai Municipal Corporation. "We will work with him to ensure that every pothole is filled in the city."
Brazil, Australia to fight any Indian sugar export subsidy

Last week, the Australian government announced that it would launch a dispute at the World Trade Organisation (WTO) over any possible sugar export subsidies by India. The move comes after a complaint was filed by the Colombian government last year suggesting a possible subsidy from the Indian sugar industry.

The Australian government has also tabled a request in the WTO to temporarily suspend India’s sugar export subsidies as a signal that it is ready to proceed with the dispute. The request was part of a broader push by the Australian government to put pressure on India to reduce its sugar export subsidies, which it argues distort the global sugar market.

The Australian government believes that India’s sugar export subsidies are harming its own sugar industry and are a violation of WTO rules. The dispute is expected to be heard by the WTO’s Dispute Settlement Body, which will determine whether India is indeed providing export subsidies and, if so, whether they are consistent with WTO rules.

India has yet to respond to the Australian government’s request, but it has previously denied providing any subsidies and has threatened to retaliate if the dispute is not resolved.

On the other hand, India has argued that its sugar export subsidies are necessary to ensure food security and protect the livelihoods of its farmers. The country’s sugar industry is one of the largest in the world, and any changes to its export policies could have significant implications for the global sugar market.

The dispute between Australia and India over sugar export subsidies comes at a time of increasing trade tensions between the two nations. However, both countries have expressed a desire to resolve the issue through diplomacy, rather than resorting to more confrontational measures.

The Australian government has also sought to engage with India on a range of other trade issues, including agriculture and services. However, the sugar dispute remains a key sticking point in the bilateral relationship.

It remains to be seen how the dispute will be resolved, and whether it will have broader implications for global trade relations. The WTO’s role in resolving disputes between member countries is crucial in ensuring that trade agreements are upheld and that all countries play by the rules.

Meanwhile, the Australian government has indicated that it is prepared to take any necessary steps to protect its domestic sugar industry. The country’s sugar producers have been hit hard by falling prices and increased imports, and are fighting to preserve their livelihoods.

The Australian government’s decision to launch the dispute at the WTO is seen as a strong signal that it is committed to defending its sugar industry and protecting its own national interests. However, the outcome of the dispute remains uncertain, and will depend on the willingness of both countries to compromise and find a mutually acceptable resolution.

The death toll in the aftershocks of Typhoon “Ompong” (International name: Mangkhut) rose to 65 yesterday while scores of others are feared dead as the government rushes to provide aid to those who survived the disaster and those who were recoverable by rescue teams.

Gen. Manuel M. Olendo declared a state of calamity in his province, to expedite the release of funds needed to give aid to those who survived and those who were killed by the typhoon. It is the first time that the province has declared a state of calamity due to a natural calamity.

“With the presence of criteria to be met by the local government within 10 days to request the declaration of a state of calamity, we are not able to do it in time,” Olento said in an interview.

“We still don’t have the official number of casualties as the assessment are still ongoing,” Tolentino told Mindanao Daily Internews.

BPA-free or not, plastic products are considered unsafe

Bisphenol A-free plastics or BPA, which are widely considered food-safe, are in the news, on account of a new research that suggested that even BPA-free products may release estrogen-mimicking chemicals into the environment.

BPA, or bisphenol A, has been in use for decades in various plastic and resin applications. It is a common component in plastic products that show physical signs of wear and endocrine-disrupting chemicals, including bisphenol A, can leach out of plastic products. However, the question of whether BPA-free products are truly safe is still a matter of debate.

In previous studies, that kind of genetic damage has been linked to abnormalities in the lab animals and their offspring. New research has found that the finding also led to new mouse cages, made of a more durable plastic called polysulfone.

t’s unlikely that the current government will be able to handle the rising political storm without the communal unrest being averted, as has been highlighted by the communal unrest precipitated by the National Integration Centre, which the Assam Chief Minister, Sarbananda Sonowal, had been forced to devolve to a committee of ministers, as it is not easy to ascertain the final stance of the party president, Amit Shah.

Sonowal had expressed his concern on the issue of the communal unrest, particularly in the state of Assam, where the Assembly elections were held in March this year. He had said that the state was on the verge of a state-wide agitation, and had said that the party would not be able to contain the situation, unless the political party leader, the Prime Minister of India, Narendra Modi, intervenes and takes appropriate steps to ensure peace and stability in the state.

The situation in Assam is particularly serious, as the state is one of the most diverse and multicultural in the country, with a large number of ethnic groups living in close proximity. The state is also one of the most ecologically diverse in the country, with a large number of species of flowers and plants unique to the region.

The state government has been under pressure to take action against the communal unrest, as it has been highlighted by the recent incidents of violence in Assam. The state government has been accused of being slow in responding to the situation, and of not taking adequate steps to prevent the communal unrest from escalating.

Philippine ambassador visits Al Ahli Hospital

The Philippine ambassador to Qatar, H.E. Mr. Timbayan, visited Al Ahli Hospital today, meeting its senior management. The visit was marked by the signing of a memorandum of understanding (MoU) between the Philippines Embassy and Al Ahli Hospital.

Ambassador Timbayan expressed his gratitude to the management of Al Ahli Hospital for providing world-class healthcare facilities. He said, “I am very pleased to see the high level of care and professionalism here. This is an excellent facility that meets international standards.”

The MoU is aimed at enhancing bilateral cooperation between the Philippines and Qatar in the field of healthcare. It will facilitate exchange of knowledge, training, and best practices in medical fields.

Dr. Ahmed Al-Khalifa, the Director General of Al Ahli Hospital, welcomed the ambassador and expressed his appreciation for the visit. He said, “We are committed to providing the best healthcare services to our patients. This MoU is a step forward in achieving our goals.”

The visit also included a tour of the hospital’s facilities, including the emergency room, operating theatres, and laboratories.

Later in the day, Ambassador Timbayan attended the opening ceremony of the “Art 29” exhibition at the Al-Fareed Art Gallery. The exhibition features works by Filipino artists, showcasing their talents and creativity.

The Philippine Embassy is working closely with Al Ahli Hospital to strengthen ties between the two countries in the field of healthcare.
