Awareness activities vital for success of healthcare system, says minister

HE the Minister of Public Health Dr Hanan Mohamed al-Kuwari attended Hamad Medical Corporation’s (HMC) World Sight Day activities at the Ambulatory Care Centre (ACC) on October 10.

Throughout the day, staff from the Ophthalmology Department at the ACC were on hand to offer advice to patients and visitors about how to look after their eyes. They also performed basic eye checks.

During her visit, HE Dr al-Kuwari spoke with members of the ophthalmology team and discussed the importance of their activities.

“I am delighted to have the opportunity to visit the ACC and witness the valuable work being done by the Ophthalmology Department to educate the public about this important health issue. Today’s activity is a prime example of the many events HMC organises each year to raise awareness and educate patients and the wider community about important health topics. "

“This month alone, HMC is running community events on a wide range of topics, including mental health, stroke, care for the elderly and seasonal influenza. Educating the community about the importance of taking control of their health is a vital part of a successful healthcare system," explained HE Dr al-Kuwari.

World Sight Day 2019 aims to stress the importance of having regular eye checks. Dr Deena Safwan Zeedan, ophthalmology specialist, explained: "We recommend all adults have an eye test performed by a qualified ophthalmologist every year. Eye tests not only help to identify deficiencies and weaknesses in people’s vision but importantly, they can identify many diseases that may otherwise go undetected. "

"Cataracts, retinal diseases, glaucoma and diabetes are all common eye conditions that can be detected through eye exams. While some should have a regular eye check, it is particularly important for those with a heightened risk of eye diseases. This includes being over 40 years of age, having a family history of eye diseases, and having a medical condition,

In August this year, the ACC welcomed its first ophthalmology outpatients following the permanent transfer of clinics from Hamad General and Rumeilah hospitals. Dr Khalid al-Jalham, director of the ACC, explained that the move has enabled ophthalmology patients to enjoy the full benefits of a ‘one-stop-shop’ model at the ACC.

"The Ophthalmology Department at the ACC provides highly-advanced services to patients through the delivery of not only clinical but also surgical care. The ACC was the final phase in the move of clinical services to the state-of-the-art new facility, a process that has been ongoing since the first outpatient services opened in 2017," added Dr Jalham.

National institutions’ role not limited to receiving complaints: NHRC

Gulf Times  |  October 15, 2018

Qatar Islamic Bank (QIB), the leading financial institution in Qatar, has renewed its commitment to work with the bank and the Ministry of Administrative Development, Labour and Social Affairs (MADA) to fully co-operate with the Ministry of Administrative Development, Labour and Social Affairs (MADA) to implement its strategy to attract local talent, the bank said in a statement.

Al-Mesalam added, “The National Human Rights Committee (NHRC) has said it is providing advice to local labour laws and environmental policies. The bank has been working to implement the Qatarisation of Business and Human Rights (Protect, Respect and Remedy) within the framework of the Guiding Principles of Business and Human Rights (Protect, Respect and Remedy).”

The bank’s strategy to develop its human resource management system in line with Qatar National Vision 2030, which aims to meet Qatar’s future labour needs, follows the Qatar’s government policy to increase the number of Qataris in the workforce, and enhance the capabilities of Qataris. The bank’s efforts and initiatives will contribute to creating a suitable work environment to attract and retain experienced local employees.

“By providing opportunities for improvement, training and support programs, the bank is ready to fully co-operate with the Ministry of Administrative Development, Labour and Social Affairs in implementing the Qatarisation employment policy,” Al-Mesalam added.

Additionally, QIB has adopted a new recruitment assessment tool aimed at assessing the qualification levels and skills of new employees and ensuring the quality of recruitment. The bank has successfully implemented the new tool in various departments, which is a first-step progressive development initiative designed to build the capacity of Qataris in various departments.

QIB, labour ministry strengthen partnership to attract local talent

The National Human Rights Committee (NHRC) has said that the role of national institutions is not limited to receiving complaints, but they also have the duty of doing positive efforts in rendering assistance to partner of human rights institutions in countries where human rights are for- bidden or are not respected. MADA is considered the corporate assumption of their responsibilities and identi- fying the impact of investment agreements, corporate law and securities regulations on human rights policies in addition to any other related issues such as labour laws and environmental protection.

This view is in line with the UN Special Rapporteur’s report on Principles 14 of the United Nations Global Consultation on the Role of National Human Rights Institution in Facilitating Access to Remedies for Business-related Human Rights Violations, or- ganized by the UN Working Group on Human Rights and Transnational Corporations and other business enterprises of the United Nations in Geneva. Al-Genaidi said that “Qatari human rights institutions are part of non-racial remedies within the framework of the Guiding Principles of Business and Human Rights (Protect, Respect and Remedy), noting that its human rights promotion practice reflects the impracticality of the complaint process, when it is clear that states and companies have no access to information or access to sources of information, through employing qualified and expert staff for legal advice and for disseminating and updating of information. Remedy is not seen as a process in which the NHRC is keen on transparency and it shall not be seen as any form of any project made in their complaints’ process, explaining to the possible

Qatar Charity’s village for displaced Syrians to be handed over in December

Qatar Charity nears the completion of a new model village for the displaced in northern Syria close to the Turkish border. The village, equipped with all the necessary services, will provide shelter for 400 families, and the housing units are expected to be handed over to beneficiaries in December.

The village includes a medical centre, a two-storied school, shops, an artesian well, and a multi-purpose lounge, in addition to other facilities.

The model village comprises 400 50-square-meter residential units for 400 Syrian displaced families.

The village, which comprises 400 50-square-meter residential units, cost 6 million Qatari riyals. It includes a mosque, a medical centre, a two-storied school, shops, an artesian well, and a multi-purpose lounge.

“This project came within the framework of a series of model villages that Qatar Charity continues to build within Syria to provide shelter and necessary services for displaced Syrians,” said Faisal Rashid al Fehaida, Assistant CEO for International Operations and Partnerships Sector at Qatar Charity.

He also noted that the project, which is in the finishing stage, aims at preserving the dignity and privacy of families, restoring a natural social lifestyle for families displaced from their lands, and easing their hardship.

It is worth mentioning that Qatar Charity has provided shelter assistance for the affected Syrian people, including internally displaced persons (IDPs) and refugees in the countries of asylum. The aid includes tents, residential units (caravans) for some camps, house rents, blankets, winter clothes, furniture and other basic needs.

Since the beginning of the Syrian crisis, Qatar Charity has so far managed to establish 11 model villages, which include about 5,492 prefabricated or concrete residential units, to benefit nearly 5,492 families.

It has also implemented other shelter projects, which comprise the provision of 100 temporary shelters and 15 accommodation centers for Syrian refugees in Lebanon, and the replacement of 15 tents by caravans in the Za’atari camp in Jordan.

These projects benefited tens of thousands of displaced Syrian people and refugees at a total cost of 84.5 million Qatari riyals.

The Displaced worldwide: Facts & Figures

The year 2018 witnessed more than 28 million new internal displacements across the world, including 10.8 million displacements due to conflict and violence and 17.2 displacements due to natural disasters in several countries, such as Syria, Yemen, and Somalia.

This figure is according to the Global Report on Internal Displacement (GRID) released in May this year by the Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre (IDMC).

Figures and statistics on the displaced worldwide show that:

- 100 million people do not have houses.
- 1 billion people live in inappropriate places.
- 68 million refugees and displaced persons have had to leave their homes.
- 1 billion people lost their shelter due to natural disasters “in 30 years”.
- 37 million children are displaced worldwide.
- One person fled home every two seconds in 2018.

Expo focus on work of WCM-Q trainee doctors in Tanzania

A photography exhibition documenting a trip that students of Weill Cornell Medicine–Qatar (WCM-Q), a Qatar Foundation (QF) partner university, mostly made to Tanzania has opened in Doha.

‘Experience Tanzania’ – held in collaboration with QF and set to run until December 2, illustrates a service-learning trip which saw WCM-Q’s student learning off to Tanzania to observe, experience, and inspire the local community.

During the visit, the students learned about the history and culture of local people, experienced the Tanzanian healthcare system, visited local schools and orphanages, and formed some of Tanzania’s nationals.

The exhibition was opened by Fatima Mohamed Rajab, the Tanzanian ambassador, who was delighted by the exhibition and how the photographs had captured the beauty of Tanzania’s landscapes and everything else.

“This exhibition re-enacts the real experiences of the students and the abundance of natural resources we were blessed with. That satisfies the hearts of visitors from other countries, as they greatly enjoy the photographic exhibition,” Rajab added.

The exhibition launch was attended by people from across QF and embassies in Doha.

The exhibition, ‘Visual representations are a powerful tool to make a convincing argument’, challenged audiences to reflect on cultural, historical, and political themes.

Mubarak also draws heavily on his family background, as he is the son of the late Sheikh Khalid bin Jabor Al-Attiya, a former Qatari foreign minister and diplomat. His work, which incorporates both figurative and abstract painting styles, reflects his experiences as a child in Qatar and his travels around the world.

By most standards, we are planning for an enrolment of over 1,000 stu-

British Prime Minister Boris Johnson is set to redefine the role of Northern Ireland in the UK, with the aims of reinforcing the peace settlement and protecting cross-border trade.

Johnson's government is to outline plans in the new year to reinvigorate the region's economy and continue the process of Brexit negotiations.

The plans, which have been described as a 'Brexit deal for Ireland', are expected to include a significant investment in infrastructure and technological solutions to help improve the region's economy.

The announcement comes after a meeting between Johnson and Irish Taoiseach Micheal Martin, who have reportedly discussed the need for the UK to guarantee the rights of Irish citizens and to respect the rights and interests of Northern Ireland.

The plans are expected to be presented to the European Union in the coming weeks, with an aim to reaching a new agreement by the end of the year.

Johnson has said that the new deal will ensure that the region remains a part of the UK, while also guaranteeing the rights of Irish citizens.

The plans are thought to include a significant investment in infrastructure, such as road and rail links, as well as technological solutions to improve trade and cross-border cooperation.

The announcement has been welcomed by many in the region, with many expressing hope that it will bring much-needed investment and improved economic opportunities.

Hundreds detained in climate protests

Tens of thousands of people opposed to Catalan independence protested yesterday in Barcelona to celebrate Spanish National Day and show their support for the Spanish government.

The protesters gathered in the city centre, blocking traffic and chanting slogans against the Catalan government and its leader, Carles Puigdemont.

The police estimated that around 20,000 people took part in the demonstration, which lasted several hours.

The protesters carried flags and signs reading “Spain is not your enemy” and “Catalonia is not a threat.”

The police detained more than 200 people, including activists and members of the Catalan National Assembly, on charges of blocking traffic and causing disturbance.

The protesters said they were exercising their right to freedom of expression and assembly, and accused the police of using excessive force.

The Spanish government has refused to recognize the results of the 2017 Catalan independence referendum, leading to a standoff with the Catalan government.

The demonstration was the latest in a series of protests in Spain and Catalonia over the past few months, with the government of President Pedro Sánchez trying to find a solution to the crisis.

The police said they had arrested 200 people, including some leaders of the Catalan National Assembly, who were blocking traffic and causing disturbance.

Shaping a global architecture for the post liberal age

By Dr. Ralph Moss

T he world is in the midst of systemic transformation, which is not limited to economic and financial matters but includes political, cultural, and technological dimensions. This process has been accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic, which has demonstrated the fragility of global systems and exposed the vulnerabilities of international organizations and states. In this new context, the traditional model of liberal internationalism, which was based on the principles of free trade, democracy, and human rights, is facing severe challenges.

One of the most significant changes is the rise of post-liberalism, which is characterized by a shift away from the visions of liberal internationalism. Post-liberalism is a reaction against the liberal order, and it seeks to challenge the dominant role of liberal economics and politics. Post-liberals argue that the liberal order is failing to address the pressing challenges of today, such as climate change, inequality, and authoritarianism.

In the economy, the new post-liberal thinking is reflected in the rise of so-called "neo-liberalism," which is a combination of market-oriented policies and social programs. Neo-liberalism is often seen as a response to the failures of liberal economics, but it is also a threat to democracy and social justice.

In politics, the new post-liberal thinking is reflected in the rise of so-called "post-liberalism," which is a reaction against the liberal order.
