Baladna IPO seeks to raise QR1.43bn

By Bashkook V Foreman

Baladna, the proposed holding company of Qatar’s dominant dairy farms, is aiming to raise as much as QR1.43bn by offering 75% equity stake to public in its Initial Public Offering (IPO), it was announced yesterday.

The offering provides eligible investors the opportunity to invest in Baladna Food Industries (BFI), Qatar’s beacon of self-sufficiency in the dairy sector, through the new holding company Baladna. The shares are being offered at QR1.01 per piece. The offer is open from October 26 to November 7. Baladna is expected to be listed on the Qatar Stock Exchange by the second week of December this year.

The founding shareholders will transfer 100% of the issued share capital (1.9bn) of BFI to the company upon its final incorporation. In return, the founders will receive 25% of the share capital of the new holding company. Of the 75% stake offer, as much as 52% is for eligible local retail investors and corporates and 23% for strategic investors as General Retirement and Social Insurance Authority (10%), Hassad Food (5%), Al Meera (4%), and Mwani Qatar and Widam Food (2% each).

“The time is ripe for this IPO, which reflects Baladna’s commitment to provide the highest value to consumers by continuing to share its successes with the community. BFI already enjoys an unparalleled position in Qatar as a market leader with growing exports and increasing economies of scale, a robust financial basis and continuing company support,” Baladna vice chairman Ramez al-Khayyat told reporters in Doha yesterday.

Turkey, US agree to pause Syria assault

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan and US Vice President Mike Pence agreed yesterday to pause the military operation in Syria, to allow Kurdish forces to withdraw from a “safe zone” that Ankara sought to capture.

The two leaders said they would work to ensure the zone was patrolled by Turkish forces for five days, “to allow for a safe and secure withdrawal of all US-based forces,” the White House said in a statement.

The pause came as the US and Turkey announced a deal to establish a “safe zone” in northern Syria, where US forces were deployed to prevent a threat to Kurdish forces, which are seen as a potential threat to Turkey. The zone would be patrolled by Turkish forces for five days, during which US forces would withdraw.

PM meets Belarusian official

The Prime Minister and Minister of Interior Sheikh Abdullah bin Nasser bin Khalifa al-Thani yesterday met in Doha with Assistant to the Belarusian president on National Security Viktor Lukashenko. During the meeting, the two leaders discussed bilateral relations and means to boost them, in addition to a number of issues of common concern. The Prime Minister hosted a luncheon banquet in honour of the Belarusian official and his delegation.

New Brexit deal awaits UK House vote tomorrow

European Union leaders unanimously backed a new Brexit deal with Britain yesterday, allowing Prime Minister Boris Johnson to bring the agreement to the UK parliament for a vote on whether to accept it. The deal, which Johnson has said he cannot accept, was announced by EU leaders after days of late-night talks.

The deal includes a one-page withdrawal agreement and a 585-page protocol on Ireland and Northern Ireland. It also includes a political declaration on future relations, which is not legally binding.

The deal is due to be voted on by the UK parliament on October 31, the day of Brexit. If the deal is accepted, the UK will leave the EU on that date. If it is not, the UK will leave the EU without a deal on that date.

A recent worldwide survey by the International Transport Forum (ITF) found a major demand from the international business community for Qatar’s transport planner Tony Sharpe’s expertise. “There is a strong interest in people to come and stay in Qatar,” he told reporters on Friday, October 18, 2019. “They are looking for the operation of the workforce, including transport modelling and planning for peak periods. They want to see the right infrastructure, logistics, vehicle movement and road transport.” Sharpe said they found out during the 2022 FIFA World Cup, “There is a strong interest in people to come and stay in Qatar.” He said: “I believe the stadiums will be there in advance, the roads will be there in advance, the road network infrastructure is very strong.” Sharpe added that Qatar is well positioned to welcome the large number of visitors in 2022 for the country, its infrastructure, transport and logistics. “We heard today (at the event) that the combined steps taken by the government of Qatar are exceeding the expectations of the visitors. Qatar is well positioned to welcome the large number of visitors in 2022 for the FIFA World Cup.”

Sharpe said “They want to see lots of places, like they have the idea of two months in a hotel.” Sharpe added that the combined steps taken by the government of Qatar are exceeding the expectations of the visitors. Qatar is well positioned to welcome the large number of visitors in 2022 for the FIFA World Cup. HBKU Press participates in Frankfurter Buchmesse

HBKU Press has been invited to join the 2019 edition of Frankfurter Buchmesse (Frankfurter International Buchmesse), which opened on Wednesday.

The international exhibition hosts hundreds of publishing companies, publishing-related companies as well as media outlets from around the world each year, for visitors to meet authors and translators, a press to translated publications, from award-winning authors to basses and new titles of HBKU Press along with handbooks of translation daily.

HBKU Press's booth represents over 10 years of the publishing house's catalogue of research, fiction and non-fiction publications, from award-winning original titles in both English and Arabic, to translated works by globally renowned authors and translators, a press statement noted.

At Frankfurter Buchmesse, HBKU Press plans to sign several new agreements to buy and sell the rights of books that meet their strategic vision, while establishing relationships with entities that can expand the reach of their work. The Director General of HBKU Press's many achievements over his tenure in the publishing industry around the world's publishing houses, including Charles, executive director of HBKU Press, "This past year, HBKU Press has published another 70 titles, as several of our books have won international awards and honours, among them from the works of local (Arabic and English) literature."

"By enlightening and helping develop the community of local talent and local networks to different regions across the globe, HBKU Press has continued to meet the demands of its authors as well as to meet the market's needs. In 2019, there is a marked rise in interest in HBKU Press as we continue to form new relationships and solidify existing ones with publishers around the globe."

With the participation of numerous publishers and the expansion of the publisher's activities and programs under the motto of "World as a Library," HBKU Press is a "world-class publishing house that aims to support the vibrant scholarly and literary culture in Qatar," the statement said.

HBKU Press aims to maintain its standing as the leading choice for publishing in Qatar, to attract and inspire new authors, illustrators and translators, and to be a beacon of new ideas, innovation and creative outreach.

The event is delivered by De- velopment, Labour and Social Affairs HE Yousfe bin Mohamed al-Othman Fakhroo, Qatar's Cabinet also recent- ly approved a draft law that would possibly allow workers to eliminate the no objection certificate, or N.O.C. The cabinet has been requested to submit the amendment to the Council of the Ministers to approve the amendment.

The permanent representative of Qatar to the United Nations Office at Vienna, Ambassador Fathia bin Ali, attended the meeting and expressed Qatar's commitment to the fight against illicit drug trade and the region in the field of labor rights and social protection.

She noted the visit of a delega- tion from the INCB to Qatar in November, as part of the annual inspection of the country's narcotics control operation in the field of training and prevention, with a view to dissemination of international drug control conventions at the regional and international levels.

The Italian envoy praised the ongoing cooperation with Qatar and the INCB, stressing the region's commitment to the fight against illicit drug trade and the region in the field of labor rights and social protection.

Trump Twitter photo attack backfires as Pelosi wins it

President Donald Trump’s latest attack on Twitter backfired as Pelosi won a legal battle to keep his tweets. The House of Representatives approved a resolution demanding Trump’s tweets be preserved after the president posted a threatening message.

The resolution, passed on a 230-194 vote, allows lawmakers to use Trump’s tweets as evidence in the impeachment inquiry. The tweets were addressed to House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, who is leading the impeachment probe.

In a statement, Pelosi said the resolution was necessary to protect the integrity of the impeachment inquiry. She added that the resolution would ensure that Trump’s tweets are preserved for historical record.

Trump has frequently used Twitter to attack his opponents and criticize political leaders. The resolution is the latest in a series of efforts by Democrats to prevent Trump from deleting or altering his tweets.

The resolution also allows the House to use Trump’s tweets as evidence in any future court cases. Pelosi said the resolution would ensure that Trump’s tweets are not altered or deleted, and that they can be used as evidence in any future court cases.

The resolution was passed on a vote of 230-194, with two Democrats voting against it. The resolution will now be sent to the Senate for consideration.

Indonesia's anti-corruption bill ushered in

Indonesia's anti-corruption law, which has been described as one of the toughest in Asia, entered into force today. The law, which was introduced by President Joko Widodo in 2019, is aimed at curbing corruption and providing stronger protection for police and other law enforcement officers.

The law was passed by Indonesia's parliament in 2019 and has been debated extensively since then. It includes provisions for the appointment of a board to oversee the agency, the establishment of a special court, and the granting of enhanced powers to police and other law enforcement officers.

The law has been met with mixed reactions. Some experts have welcomed it as a significant step forward in the fight against corruption, while others have expressed concerns about the potential for abuse of power and the risk of undermining the judiciary.

The new law is expected to significantly increase the powers of the anti-corruption agency, which is now known as the Corruption Eradication Commission (KPK).

President Widodo has said that the government will now move to pass the law into force, and that the KPK will be established within a year.

The KPK will have the power to investigate and prosecute cases of corruption, including those involving high-level officials.

Thai child faces major test in first budget debate

The Thai government is expected to face a major test in its first budget debate on Thursday, as it seeks to pass a bill that would allow it to spend the central budget allocation on life-saving relief for residents affected by floods caused by heavy rains in southern Thailand.

The budget bill, which was introduced last week, is expected to be debated in the lower house of parliament on Thursday, with the budget committee expected to vote on it later in the day.

The bill has been met with mixed reactions, with some lawmakers supporting it as a necessary measure to help those affected by the floods, while others have expressed concerns about the potential for abuse of power and the risk of undermining the judiciary.

Japan minister visits war shrine

120,000 people, including heads of state, gathered at the palace in Tokyo today for the enthronement ceremony attended by some 200,000 people, as Japan's executive, legislative and judicial officials, said they would hold talks with the state-owned China Sam Group on September 10, in Tokyo. The talks will be the first between the two governments since Japan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs asked China to consider freezing the sale of the islands to China. The Chinese foreign ministry spokesman said that China had never recognised the “island-hopping” strategy, but was willing to negotiate on the issue. He added that China would not recognise any decision made by Japan on the islands.

nvironmental campaigners have moved rapidly and promised to change their tactics after their protests against a planned link between the Crossrail tunnel under London and other global cities to dump out its own tunnels under the Thames. Protesters yesterday targeted London Underground trains and an ornamented train station during the evening rush hour.

A crowd went on Twitter “Detoured several trains morning and smoke/dust explosions at a tube station at the east London station."

The British Transport Police said it had arrested eight people and an anchor of taped barricades had been removed at Canary Wharf tube station.

Service along both lines was halted during the morning rush hour.

The disruption sparked a social media and a few posts about the need for better planning. The London Underground’s and the government’s handling of climate change.

The group has been staging 10 actions across London and other major cities in recent days, prompting Extinction Rebellion to issue a joint statement saying that the protests were a “cultural disruption”. The group’s statement said.

“In light of yesterday’s events, we have paused our activities until November 17, when we will convene a national assembly. In the meantime, local groups will continue to organise and coordinate activities as they see fit,” the statement said.

The London Underground’s service disruption was caused by a near-riot on the Light Railway (DLR) train and in and covered him to shield him from the violence at Canning Town tube station."

Johnson now needs to secure enough votes to get the agreement approved by the British and European parliaments.

The agreement reached will be approved, with no need for any further talks at the Brexit deadlines. The deal was initially proposed in January to be signed on October 17, as long as the deal is not agreed by the British and European parliaments.

But No 10 said Johnson was not prepared to give the EU any more time to get Brexit done and then to get the EU to accept the deal in two or three days.

French support move to halt millionaire tax flight

EUROPE

French insurance companies have long been concerned about the increasing number of millionaires fleeing the country to avoid paying taxes. The French government has been trying to address this issue for some time, and a recent decision by the French parliament to increase taxes on high-income earners has been met with mixed reactions.

Bosnia urged to move migrant camp

EU

The situation in the Calais migrant camp has continued to deteriorate, with thousands of migrants remaining stuck in limbo. The French government has been under pressure to find a solution to this crisis, and a recent decision by the European Union to relocate migrants from Greece to other EU countries has been seen as a positive step.

In the Qur'an, it is mentioned that the humans are the stewards of Allah and are commanded to protect the environment and not to abuse it. In this respect, Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) emphasized the importance of protecting and preserving the environment. The Prophet said, "Whoever destroys a leaf of a tree in which there is life, he destroys a part of the stake of the creator." This reflects the divine command to respect and protect the environment.

The Qur'an also speaks about the interconnection between human beings and the environment. It states, "He (Allah) has said to the angels: 'I will appoint a Prophet for every nation, and I will give them signs by which they will be warned (of the Day of Judgment)." This verse highlights the importance of the environment in the realization of the divine purpose and in teaching humanity to respect and protect it.

Furthermore, the Qur'an contains several verses that emphasize the responsibility of humans towards the environment. One such verse is: "Remember Allah while standing or sitting or sitting on your hands or lying on your bellies in your homes with a part of your wealth which Allah has given you, fear Allah and let none of you follow evil.\" This verse highlights the importance of using one's resources in a way that is both beneficial for oneself and for the environment.

In conclusion, the Qur'an provides a clear message for humans to respect and protect the environment. It highlights the importance of the environment in the realization of the divine purpose and in teaching humanity to respect and protect it. The Qur'an calls on humans to be stewards of the environment and to protect it for the benefit of all humanity.

Arabic text:

1. "Allah commands you to plant trees, which will last for several generations, and anyone of you has a palm shoot, he should plant it, for the benefit of the next generation.\" [Qur'an 16: 11]

2. "The seed develops a complex living substance in the earth in which it is buried.\" [Qur'an 41: 29]

3. "From this tiny seed (a seed they have insight.\" [Qur'an 7: 201]

4. "Human life is sacred in the sight of Allah, the Exalted, during times of prayer, supplication, and in the human birth,\" [Qur'an 3: 195]

5. "Mind is like water; unless it is directed, it will simply flow.\" [Qur'an 3: 195]

6. "The rain is due to the Favor and Mercy of Allah, the Exalted, during times of prayer, supplication, and in the human birth,\" [Qur'an 3: 195]

7. "The rain is due to the Favor and Mercy of Allah, the Exalted, during times of prayer, supplication, and in the human birth,\" [Qur'an 3: 195]
Protect democracy against social media manipulation

The United States may not be the only target of Vladimir Putin’s social-media manipulations, but many Americans do seem to have forgotten that. Consider Russian operatives’ malicious use of social media platforms to spread disinformation and sow discord leading up to the 2016 election, outlined in a Senate Intelligence Committee report released last week. Or their longstanding use of social media platforms to direct and coordinate campaigns to influence foreign elections, particularly vulnerable to Russian agents’ tricks.

The committee’s suggestion, for example, that social media attempts to interfere with American elections should be reported to law enforcement, raises the question of how much the social media industry knew about Russian interference is ongoing. It would be naive to think otherwise. From 2016 to 2018, outside Russian interference, social media companies were flooded with fake news, divisive content, and disinformation campaigns, yet their response has been one of denial and obstruction. The companies have failed to develop a clear policy to address disinformation, and their lack of transparency has allowed them to continue their harmful practices.

The committee also found that Facebook, Twitter, and Google did not know the full extent to which their platforms have been twisted and manipulated into tools of information warfare, and they do not have the ability to do much about it. This is a dangerous situation, and it is time for Congress to hold these companies accountable for their actions.

The committee’s findings suggest that the social media industry needs to do more to prevent the spread of disinformation and protect the democratic process. It is time for them to take responsibility and make the necessary changes to ensure that their platforms are not used for malicious purposes. Only then can we truly protect democracy against social media manipulation.
How fact-checking can trump misinformation

By Shang-Jin Wei

A ccording to fact-checkers, almost half of the tweets on US-China trade from 2016-2018 that fact-checkers rated false or misleading were generated by users with more than 10,000 followers. That is, they were more likely to be influential. But the more influential the user, the more likely the tweet was fact-checked. The influence of tweets may be a generalisable phenomenon. It is no wonder that some people doubt the impact of fact-checking organisations in Africa, for the conference Les Rencontres Media Freedom in London in July, they acknowledged that the rise of misinformation mirrored those of a 2016 study, that is, the impact is not very high. But simply publishing fact-checks is not enough to stop the spread of misinformation. We need to communicate with people, share and explain the results of research in a form that is easy to understand. First, although globalisation has contributed to declining literacy skills to young people. The results of this effort include the young people are more likely to have their understanding of claims, even if they are not nearly as intractable as some people think. It is the approach taken by those organisations and small and under-researched as they are, the impact is already apparent. For example, in January, Zimbabwaians voted to elect a new government. The main political parties, the Movement for Democratic Change and the Democratic Left, have been so-called fact-checking organisations. Der Spiegel, a German newsweekly, declared that there is a public consensus that Africa lacks the means to promote fact-checking. The African Journalist Review, a publication of the Africa Media Forum, declared that African journalists have been less well equipped to tackle the problem of fake news. And yet, the use of these checks was not enough to control the spread of misinformation. At the same time, in Argentina, the fact-checking organisation Chequeado has counted the country’s third largest form of public revenue increased by 2.5 times. But these checks are not enough. On the other hand, when US firms import Chinese goods, they are less likely to be deceived. This is because the lack of understanding in Africa is due to the fact that they are not sufficiently exposed to the phenomenon of fake news. Furthermore, better education systems and greater individual effort would improve skills and better position Africa to adapt to the phenomenon of globalisation and technological progress and globalisation. The globalisation effect is often associated with nationalism, self-interest, and lack of understanding, resulting in national public policies.
