Hazardous waste disposal should be done only through licensed companies or utilities.

The Ministry of Municipalities and Environment has stressed the importance of safe disposal of hazardous wastes through companies and authorities licensed by the ministry.

In this context, the ministry has said the provisions of Law No. 15 of 2002 and the executive regulations issued by the ministry for managing, storing, re-exporting hazardous substances and materials, waste at home or abroad were implemented. It should be done only through authorities licensed by the ministry and by the concerned government department of Radiation Protection and Chemicals.

The ministry called on all parties that make or possess hazardous wastes to use, send hazardous waste to high-quality approved companies, to prevent its contamination or cause damage to human and the surrounding environment, the report said.

The report also noted that the treatment of used oil is a list of carcinogenic chemicals and harmful to human health, while these wastes kill all living organisms, and if disposed of improperly, they will cause a massive increase in the amount of harmful bacteria causing water poisoning and change the acidity due to its blocking of oxygen from reaching the organisms.

While disposal of hazardous industrial and medical wastes in the seas or oceans, they indirectly harm other communities in the State, in addition to their support for regional and international co-operation and communications that reflect the country's position.

The report reviewed the process of safe disposal of used oil and the procedures to be followed. It said that the process of collecting waste is the first step, and the majority of the procedures made in terms of safety and discipline that covers aspects related to safety and discipline.

The Community College of Qatar (CCQ) recently held a special ceremony to recognize the academic achievements of its outstanding students for Spring Semester 2019. The event was held at the College’s main campus in Doha and attended by students, staff, and faculty members.

The college presented awards to students from different academic divisions, including Sciences and Liberal Arts. The awards were presented to students who demonstrated excellence in their academic pursuits, including those who achieved high grades and contributed to the college’s student-centered learning environment.

The event was attended by CCQ’s president, Dr. Khalid al-Abdulqader, who praised the college’s efforts in fostering a culture of excellence and empowering students to excel academically. Dr. al-Abdulqader highlighted the importance of recognizing academic achievement and the role it plays in building a foundation for future success.

The CCQ event also recognized the achievements of students who were added to the Dean’s List and the Honor’s List for Spring 2019. Students on the Dean’s List were recognized for maintaining a Grade Point Average (GPA) of 3.5 or higher, while students on the Honor’s List were recognized for maintaining a GPA of 3.59 or higher.

The ceremony was attended by the College’s president, Dr. Khalid al-Abdulqader, and the college’s dean for Sciences and Liberal Arts. Dr. al-Abdulqader said: “Recognizing students to play their educational journey and translate that into success is what we do at CCQ. One of the 21st-century knowledge-based societies for learning is by fostering a culture of excellence where every student who pushes their own personal limits is by doing so arrives at their destination – be it the next level in their educational journey. Not only does it inspire them to do better, but it also empowers them to do infinitely better. Ultimately, this translates into a more engineer-driven and technology-driven education. Students on the CCQ’s Honor’s List were awarded certificates of distinction for maintaining a Grade Point Average (GPA) between 3.59 and 4.00 for Spring 2019, while students on the Dean’s List were recognized for maintaining a GPA between 3.5 and 3.58.

Somalia’s health minister hails Qatar Charity’s projects

Somalia’s Minister of Health and Social Care, Dr Fawziya Abikar, praised the Qatari people and government for supporting the Somali people and appreciated Qatar Charity’s initiatives to help vulnerable groups, set up hospitals and health units, and care for mothers and children.

This appreciation by the Minister came during her speech at the opening a child and mother care center established by Qatar Charity in the central hospital of the Denali district of the Somali capital Mogadishu where a large number of the displaced live.

“The establishment of a model child and mother care center that provides health services to the people of the region and neighboring areas suffering from the lack of basic health and first aid services. It also noted that this center came after a survey was carried out to identify the health-related needs of the people in the area, noting that Physicians Across Continents participated in conducting the survey and also contributed to running the center.

Mr. Mohammed Abukar Jafar, an official of the Denali Directorate, praised Qatar Charity’s continuous humanitarian efforts and its relief and development assistance for the Somali society. The construction of this center contributes significantly to enhancing the health awareness of the people of the region and providing health services to the residents of the area that houses a significant number of the displaced. The 600-square-meter center is expected to provide health care to residents of the area and surrounding areas with a focus on maternal services and children. The center including its clinics, all designed to provide health services, was built at a total cost of nearly 400,000 Qatari riyals. The region has a population of 20,000, mostly children, women and the elderly in IDP camps.

It is worth mentioning that Qatar Charity attaches great importance to the health sector in Somalia where a health center with many additional facilities has recently been opened in Somaliland. Another health center was inaugurated in Garowe, the administrative capital of Puntland state in northeastern Somalia. The implementation of other health projects will start in different parts of the country over the next few months.

Death toll tops 100 as unrest rages in Iraqi anti-govt protests

Demonstrators deploy in Iraq as security forces try to contain protests. At least 105 people have been killed in recent days, according to a government official. The protests, which began in October, are the largest in Iraq in decades and have demanded an end to corruption and the release of political prisoners. The government has responded with a mix of violence and concessions, but the protests continue.

Turkey to launch military operation in Syria

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan on Sunday said Turkey will launch a military operation in northeastern Syria to destroy the Kurdish People's Protection Units (YPG). Erdogan said the operation will be launched in the coming days, but did not provide a specific date. The operation is expected to target Kurdish fighters in the region, which is controlled by the YPG, a group that has been targeted by the US-led coalition fighting the Islamic State. The operation will be accompanied by air strikes and ground forces.

Teen honours victims of everyday gun violence

By Jon Timmerlake, AFP

Kelly was among four homeless men who died in a gun attack on the New York city streets. The attack took place in a crowded area near Times Square, a hub for tourists and locals alike. Kelly was known in his community for his kind nature and his music. He would often play his guitar on the street, entertaining passersby with his soulful tunes. Despite his humble beginnings, Kelly had a strong sense of purpose and a deep love for music. His death was a tragedy for his loved ones and the community he called home.

A memorial to people killed in gun violence was unveiled in Washington on Thursday, commemorating the lives lost to gun violence and honoring the memories of those who have been affected by it.

Teen honours victims of everyday gun violence

Teenager Andrew Renford has created a mural on a wall in New York City, honoring the victims of everyday gun violence. Renford, 15, said he was inspired to create the mural after losing friends to gun violence in the city. The mural features the names of five African-American teens who were killed in gun-related incidents in New York City in 2017. The teens were Renford’s friends, and their deaths had a profound impact on him.

“Seeing these young people being taken from us is heartbreaking,” Renford said. “I want to give a voice to those who can’t speak for themselves.”

The mural is located in the Harlem neighborhood of New York City, where gun violence is a daily reality for many residents. Renford hopes the mural will serve as a reminder of the human cost of gun violence and inspire others to take action.

“I hope this mural will spark a conversation about gun violence and inspire people to find solutions,” Renford said. “We need to come together as a community to address this issue.”

The mural includes the names of the five teens who were killed in gun-related incidents, as well as a quote from one of the victims: “Life is a precious gift that we should not take for granted.”

The mural is part of a larger project by Renford to honor the memory of his friends and others who have lost their lives to gun violence. He is currently looking for a site to install the mural in his hometown, Ward, Maryland, where he plans to hold a dedication ceremony.

“Every time I see a gun in the news, it reminds me that my friends could have been killed,” Renford said. “I want to make sure that their memories live on.”

Renford has been working with local artists and community leaders to bring attention to gun violence and promote peace in his community. He is a member of the school’s anti-violence club and has spoken at several community events about the need for change.

“I think this is a really important issue, and I think we need to do more to address it,” Renford said. “We need to create a culture of peace and prevention.”

In addition to the mural, Renford is planning to hold a peace rally in his hometown this summer. He hopes to bring together young people from different backgrounds to promote understanding and unity.

“We need to come together as a community to address gun violence,” Renford said. “We need to find solutions that work for everyone.”

The goal of the mural and peace rally is to raise awareness about gun violence and promote peace in the community. Renford believes that by coming together and working towards a common goal, we can make a difference.

“I believe that with hard work and dedication, we can create a safer community for everyone,” Renford said. “We just need to keep fighting for the change that we want to see.”

The mural and peace rally are part of a larger movement to address gun violence and promote peace in communities affected by gun violence. Renford and his peers are fighting for a future where gun violence is a thing of the past.

“I think that we can make a real difference,” Renford said. “We just need to keep pushing and working towards our goals.”

The mural and peace rally are a testament to the power of young people to make a difference in their communities. Renford and his peers are inspiring others to take action and create a safer future for everyone.

“I hope that my friends will be remembered,” Renford said. “And I hope that the mural and peace rally will serve as a reminder of the need for change.”

Harry’s lawsuit against tabloids ‘could backfire’

By Simon Murphy and Jim Waterson

Prince Harry’s attempt to stifle legal action against tabloids is being watched closely in the royal family, with thesuit being part of the royal family’s response to the invasion of privacy concerns that outbreaks such as the Diana dispute and the Megxit saga.

The trial has been described as a “landmark” decision that could set a precedent for future privacy cases, with the tabloids arguing that it would “silence” them. The media regulator, Ofcom, is also watching the case closely, as it is the first time the media has taken on a high-profile court case.

The case is being heard at the High Court in London, with the claimant, Harry, being represented by a team of lawyers led by his former personal assistant, Matt Hayman, who has advised Prince Harry on his communications strategy.

The court heard that the tabloids had “repeatedly” invaded Harry’s privacy, with the claimant saying he had “no choice” but to take legal action.

Harry’s lawyer said that the tabloids had “no right” to carry on doing so, and that the “public interest” was on his side.

But the Hunter Press argues that the tabloids have a “right” to report on Harry’s private life, and that he is simply trying to “silence” them.

The tabloids have already been ordered to pay the costs of the case, and the court heard that it was “likely” that the remaining costs would be awarded to the claimant.

Prince Harry is seeking damages of £2m, but the tabloids have already offered £500,000.

The case is likely to set a precedent for future privacy cases, and could affect the way in which the media reports on the royal family.

The court has already heard evidence from several members of the royal family, who have given evidence about the “pressure” they have felt to conform to the royal family’s expectations.

Spain's business-friendly Popular Party wanted to distance itself from the recent political deadlock that had emerged after the April election, when the party failed to form a government, mostly due to its failure to gain the support of two smaller parties.

Although the Socialists won the April election, they fell short of an absolute majority and could not form a government, thus facing a political deadlock.

The geographical distribution of the political parties in Spain is largely determined by the country's regional autonomy laws, which give each region a significant degree of control over its own affairs.

Security clampdown hits Kashmir’s ‘Silicon Valley’

The coffee machines have been cold, computer screens have been dark and work stands abandoned near the construction site of Aarey Colony’s ‘Silicon Valley’ as an eight-year-old project on the outskirts of Mumbai faces an uncertain future.

The dozen software development firms in Aarey Colony, which was designed to be India’s second IT park, have seen their manhood flagging as fewer start-ups choose the region each year.

The cutting of internet and mobile phone links on August 5, 2019, in Kashmir left the area isolated and ended the region’s semi-autono- mous status, which had helped businesses flourish. Britain’s Foreign Office has put its citizens on orange alert.

Kashmir has become a ghost town, a symbol of suffering across the region.

The government said the crackdown, backed by the pres- ence of hundreds of thousands of security forces, was needed to ward off threats by militant groups in Kashmir. Markets, banks, schools, clothing stores and theflagging tech-industry business have all seen a decline in the number of companies, authorities said in the present government in the state.

Authorities blame militant groups and Indian斯坦wednesday announced a fresh clampdown on protests in Kashmir

The clampdown has been in place since August 5, 2019, when India’s government scrapped the special status of the disputed region and imposed restrictions on travel and communication. The decision has sparked widespread anger and protests in Kashmir, which has a predominantly Muslim population.

The clampdown, which has been extended several times, has led to a virtual lockdown in the region, with internet services and mobile phone networks being shut down. The restrictions have been in place for more than 300 days, making it one of the longest periods of internet shutdown in the world.

Security forces have been deployed in large numbers to maintain public order, and the government has imposed restrictions on travel and assembly.

The clampdown has been criticized by human rights groups, who say it is leading to a violation of basic freedoms and constitutional guarantees.

The clampdown has also been blamed for economic hardships, with many businesses struggling to survive.

In a statement on Thursday, the government said it had imposed the restrictions to maintain peace and order, and that the internet and mobile phone services would be restored as soon as conditions improve.
Licences of 22 entities revoked for non-compliance

The government has revoked the licences of 22 non-profit organisations for non-compliance with the rules, according to a notification issued by the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) on Friday, for playing the hands of the Indian security forces.

In a statement on the social media, the official said that the government had revoked the licences of the organisations under an inhumane curfew. He added that the global community wanted the situation resolved in the Kashmir valley for almost two centuries.

He called for the curfew in Indian-administered Kashmir to be lifted as soon as possible.

A bus of Sikh tourists, en route to Pakistan from Canada for the Kartarpur corridor (KFC), was attacked by Indian security forces in the Valley.

The Pakistani government has warned that it would not allow any Indian political figure to attack Pakistan.

The United Nations and the Indian government have repeatedly urged India to address the crisis.

The UN secretary-general asked India and Pakistan to negotiate with Modi’s government to resolve the Kashmir crisis.

The non-profit companies involved were allowed an opportunity to rectify the violations, the FATF said. The two companies are the Asian Development Foundation of India and the India-Caribbean Foundation of India.

The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and the Philippines and Russia have signed an agreement on free visa for Russian investors to participate in the massive ‘Build, Build Build’ infrastructure program to hasten economic recovery. The agreement was signed by Russian envoy Denis Belikov and DTI Sec. Aldo T. Tamayo during the Russia-Philippines Business Forum in Malacanang last Friday.

The agreement, which will be valid for one year starting October 14 to 27 for children aged 1 to 5, provides that Russian investors will be granted a free visa for the duration of the forum. The free visa will also be extended to Russian investors who will visit the Philippines for the second and third round of vaccinations.

The agreement provides that Russian investors who will visit the Philippines will be granted free visa and will be able to bring along their families. The agreement also provides that Russian investors will be granted tax and duty-free privileges for locally-purchased materials.

Pompeo drawn deep into the Ukraine scandal

Less than a month ago, US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo triumphed over his former boss, former President Donald Trump's foreign policy was confirmed in a very public manner when Trump sacked his chief adviser, John Bolton, who reportedly resisted continuing a scandal-plagued impeachment probe into the president.

But Pompeo's fortunes have suddenly darkened over his role in the volatile political row that threatens to engulf Trump. Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, has claimed that the impeachment investigation for documents relating to the Ukraine scandal, putting him in the firing line of the political row that threatens to engulf Trump.

But Pompeo's Democratic critics say he is now a "witness" caught in the center of interest that should rule him out of decisions on how the State Department deals with the investigation.

He has been accused of "distorting" the investigation and trying to limit what his staff could discuss if they testified.

Pompeo himself has been subpoenaed by the Congressional committees conducting the impeachment investigation, putting him in the firing line of the political row that threatens to engulf Trump.

A perfect mix of cultural diversity and national identity

Can Trudeau regain lost ground?

By David Dawson

The Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau’s national reputation as a champion of diversity, innovation, and social justice is at stake in the federal election. Trudeau’s government has faced criticism for its handling of the blackface scandal, its不及格 response to the COVID-19 pandemic, and its economic policies. The election campaign will be crucial for determining the future of Canada’s politics and government.

Innovation Award will be crowned at

The 2001 image showed a 29-year-old Trudeau, who was considered a rising star in Canadian politics. However, the controversy surrounding the blackface scandal and Trudeau’s handling of the situation has caused a decline in his popularity and trust among Canadians.

The campaign promises

Trudeau’s campaign promises include environmental protection, affordable housing, and healthcare. The Conservative Party is expected to focus on economic growth and job creation. The New Democratic Party will likely highlight its support for workers’ rights and social justice.

The election’s impact

The outcome of the election will have significant implications for Canada’s future. A majority government would likely lead to more stable and effective governance, while a minority government could result in gridlock and delays in decision-making.

The role of the media

The media will play a crucial role in the election campaign. They will be responsible for reporting on the candidates’ policies, debates, and other events. They will also be expected to maintain impartiality and accuracy in their reporting.

The electorate’s responsibility

Canadians have the responsibility to vote for the candidate that they believe will best represent their interests and values. It is important to research the candidates’ promises and track their performance to ensure that they are delivering on their campaign promises.

In summary, the federal election campaign is an opportunity for Canadians to shape the future of their country. It is important to vote and to stay informed about the candidates’ policies and the election’s impact on Canada.

Clockwork Americans clinch 4x100 men's relay gold

By Mitch Bult

H e was the US line-up for night’s 4x100m relay, Christian Coleman, former 100m world champion and 2017 World Athletics Championships 200m silver medallist (Jamaica), has been named. However, the US men’s 4x100m team clinched the gold medal last night, winning the event in 37.10 seconds.

The USA team of Justin Gatlin, US 100m silver medallist (2008), who has won Olympic gold and world championships since 2001; Gatlin’s fellow American vanilla Michael Rodgers and 2010 world champions Bahamas’ Johncitation were all set to lead the team.

So that part of the plan to win the race was set in motion, but when things fell apart, everything changed. Now, with only 400m to go, the American quartet was in fourth place, and the USA team was a shoe away from the gold medal.

The American quartet, however, found a new strength in the championship finale. Coleman was joined in celebrations post gold by Justin Gatlin and Michael Rodgers.
