Young adults have fun with robotics at QNL

Young adults have had their first robotics experience at Qatar National Library (QNL), where they got the chance to use futuristic robots, the Internet of Things and technology to solve real-life problems. This is part of the government's initiative to encourage young students to eventually address other real-time problems using the same strategies, applying collaboration, creativity, critical thinking and complex problem-solvers. It was initiated by a robotics engineer from the University of Qatar, Mr. Yousef Al-Emadi, who is heading a delegation of senior staff in the US Congress.

Air India to launch non-stop Delhi-Doha flights from Oct 29

Air India has announced that it will launch non-stop flights between Delhi and Doha from October 29, 2019. The flights will be operated four times a week - on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Right A330 will depart from Delhi at 11.35pm and arrive in Doha at 8.35am. The flights will be operated by Air India's subsidiary Air India Express, which operates flights between Doha and the Gulf countries.

Qatar 100% self sufficient in fresh chicken, 109% in dairy

The session introduces new concepts in robotics and provides incredible learning materials to participants. The world of robotics is always evolving, so it’s always valuable to learn something new about this field. I have been practicing coding and robotics for the last two years, and I’m thankful to have the opportunity to learn more and to meet other people who share my passion.

Qatar 100% self sufficient in fresh chicken

It is also the latest in Qatar, which reflects on the quality of the chicken, since the country’s officials stressed on the need to supply fresh products to meet the demand for the Qatari product and to ensure high-quality standards. All customers will be able to benefit from the latest technology that is being used in the farm, which is part of the continuous production process.

SC signs MoU with Arab Federation for Voluntary Activities

The AFVA will support the SC in the delivery of workshops, ensuring that volunteers are prepared for the big sporting event.

The AFVA, which was launched in 2005 and has also struck up a partnership with the United Nations Volunteers Programme, will support the SC in the delivery of workshops and ensuring volunteers are prepared to help Qatar deliver the biggest single-sport event in the world.

The MoU was signed by CEO, FIFA World Cup Qatar 2022 LLC, Nasser al-Khater and President of the AFVA, Dr Yousuf Ali al-Khater, and reflects the vision of both organisations to provide volunteers opportunities for people across the region to prepare and contribute.

Al-Khater said the agreement underlines the SC’s commitment to engaging with volunteers and helping them develop key skills. "We recognise the vital role volunteers will play in organise successful events in the lead-up to Qatar 2022 and also the tournament itself. "Our volunteers will be at the forefront of safety and security, ticketing, hospitality, marketing and communications, media services and many other areas."

Al-Khater highlighted the SC’s Volunteering Programme, which was launched in September last year and has attracted more than 25,000 applications. "We were overwhelmed by the response of people from all over the world and are happy to have already selected applicants. We look forward to joining hands with the SC for the first time."

Al-Khater said AFVA was delighted to join hands with the SC to support preparations for Qatar 2022. "The AFVA is excited to be part of this tremendous global event, the FIFA World Cup Qatar 2022, which His Highness the Amir Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani, and won a tournament for everyone."

Al-Khater continued: "The AFVA commits its network of experience in voluntary activities for work and management. The AFVA is excited to be part of this tournament and therefore support the programme, will support the SC in the delivery of workshops and ensuring volunteers are prepared to help Qatar deliver the biggest single-sport event in the world."

Award-winning photographer to hold public talk, workshop

On his life and work, including the intricacies of reportage photography and gaining a deeper understanding of the photographer’s role in society, photographer Richard Mille will explore ways that respectful images can inform and shape the world.

Mille, who lost both legs and one arm while reporting on conflict in Afghanistan, has a keen eye for capturing the subtleties of conflict and has dedicated much of his work to the causes he cares about. His latest exhibition, “The New Normal,” focuses on the impact of conflict on ordinary people and the importance of telling their stories.

Mille’s talk, workshop, and exhibition are open to the public and are free of charge. The exhibition will run until October 25.

According to Dr Ahmad Dallal, dean of the College of Pharmacy at Qatar University, the call for applications is open to all researchers, regardless of their nationality, and is part of Qatar University’s commitment to supporting research in the Gulf region.

Dr Dallal said that the call for applications is a response to the growing need for young researchers in the Gulf region, particularly in the field of pharmacy.

The College of Pharmacy at Qatar University is currently home to around 300 students, including undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate students. The college is also home to a number of research centers, including the Qatar National Research Center for Pharmacy and Biotechnology, which is one of the largest research centers in the Gulf region.

The college is also home to a number of international partnerships, including with the Canadian Council for the Accreditation of Health Care Education Programs (CCACHC), which is responsible for accrediting pharmacy programs in Canada.

Dr Dallal said that the college is looking to expand its partnerships with other countries, and is currently in the process of establishing new partnerships with universities in the Gulf region.

Turkey's Erdogan to meet Trump in US over Syria ‘safe zone’

Turkey announced yesterday that President Recep Tayyip Erdogan will meet US President Donald Trump in Washington next month to discuss a US-backed safe zone in northern Syria.

The announcement came a day after Russian President Vladimir Putin confirmed his country was ready to protect a safe zone in northeast Syria from US-backed Kurdish forces, a move Turkey opposes.

US officials have said they do not want Turkey to be the protector of the safe zone, while the US-led coalition against the Islamic State group has also warned it would continue its counter-terror operations there.

Erdogan said in a video statement that the trip was part of efforts to resolve the dispute over the safe zone in northeast Syria.

He added that the US and Turkey would both continue to work on the question of the safe zone, and that the US would seek to protect it.

The meeting is expected to focus on the safe zone, which has been a source of tension between the US and Turkey, and the broader relationship between the two countries.

The US has long supported the Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF), a militia of Kurdish and Arab fighters, in their fight against the Islamic State group, while Turkey regards the SDF as a terrorist group.

Erdogan’s trip comes amid a diplomatic row between Turkey and the US over the safe zone.

The US has been pressing Turkey to accept a US military presence in the area to secure the safe zone.

Turkey has been resisting US demands, saying it wants to set up its own military operations in the area to combat Kurdish forces.

Erdogan’s trip to the US is expected to be a key moment in the ongoing diplomatic efforts to resolve the safe zone dispute.

The meeting is also expected to focus on other issues, including the situation in Syria and the broader Middle East region.

The US and Turkey have a long history of cooperation on a range of issues, including counter-terrorism and trade.

However, their relationship has been strained in recent years, with disagreements over Syria and other issues.

Erdogan is expected to meet with US officials, including President Trump, Vice President Mike Pence, and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, during his visit to the US.

The meeting is also expected to focus on other issues, including the situation in Syria and the broader Middle East region.

Some $71bn of Japanese coal assets at risk from cheaper renewables

A prominent Bangladesh politician arrested in anti-graft crackdown

To meet a globally-agreed goal of limiting temperature rise to well below 2°C, this century, planned and operational coal capacity would need to be shut down and Japanese consumers could face higher power prices as the cost of stranded assets grows.

Of this amount, $29bn could be avoided if the Japanese government realised the planned and operational coal capacity by 2022, 2025 and 2030 respectively. Added to that, adjusted withdrawal costs of new coal plants would be cheaper than the long-run marginal cost of cutting coal plants by 2025 and 2027 for existing coal plants, the report said.

To meet a globally-averaged limiting temperature rise to below 1.5°C, this century, planned and operational coal capacity would need to be shut down and Japanese consumers could face higher power prices as the cost of stranded assets grows.

The report, called Land of the Rising Sun and Offshore Wind, used project financial models to analyse the economics of new and existing coal plants in 15 countries, including Japan.

It found that Japan’s planned and existing coal capacity could be jeopardised by low utilisation rates and cheaper renewable energy sources, mainly offshore wind and large-scale solar photovoltaics (PV).

The government has not only failed to do enough to encourage the transition to renewables, but also not done enough to cut emissions from its existing coal fleet, the authors said. The federal government has been criticized for its lack of policy coherence on climate issues, and its failure to implement measures to reduce emissions.

In Japan, the government has approved new coal plants in 2019 and 2020, and has been embroiled in a corruption scandal involving Prime Minister Fumio Kishida, who has been under pressure to resign.

The report found that the government is not doing enough to support the transition to renewables, and that it is not providing the necessary funding to help the transition to take place. It also found that the government is not doing enough to encourage the transition to renewable energy sources, and that it is not providing the necessary funding to help the transition to take place.

The government has also been criticized for its lack of policy coherence on climate issues, and its failure to implement measures to reduce emissions.
The family's roots are in Nigeria. The sisters' grandfather, Enitan Baker, was born in 1939 in Nigeria in the 1960s to work and study. Enitan's family later moved to London, where he lived until he was 29 years old.

In 1965, Enitan moved to the United States to work and study. He lived in Los Angeles, California, for several years. While there, he met his wife, Betty Baker, who he married in 1968.

Enitan returned to Nigeria in 1972 and began working in the music industry. He formed a band called the Watts Sound, which included musicians such as Fela Kuti and King Sunny Ade.

Baker’s sister, Lizzy, was born in 1949 and also grew up in Nigeria. She later moved to the United States to study music and became a successful musician in her own right.

In the 1970s, Baker moved back to Nigeria to work on his second album, "Strange Brew," which included guest appearances by artists such as Fela Kuti and King Sunny Ade.

In the 1980s, Baker moved to London to work on his third album, "The Best of Both Worlds." He continued to tour and record throughout the 1980s, releasing several successful albums.

In the 1990s, Baker returned to Nigeria to work on his fourth album, "Bakin Jaja." He continued to tour and record throughout the 1990s and into the 2000s, releasing several successful albums.

In the mid-2000s, Baker began to focus on his family and retired from the music industry. He died in 2008, aged 69.

Poll shows Tories 15 points ahead of Labour

The Conservatives have opened a Rigby lead over Labour in a new poll of the Scottish public, an opinion poll for The Sunday Times shows.

The Tories are now 15 points ahead, compared with a week ago, in Scotland, according to The Sunday Times.

The Liberal Democrats have seen their support rise in the poll, gaining around nine points in the UK, compared to the February result.

The Greens, however, have seen a significant drop in support, falling from 15% to 7% in the latest poll.

Flood alerts issued after heavy rains

The UK is braced for more flooding this week, with the Met Office issuing flood warnings for parts of the northwest and north- east.

The weather agency is expected to warn of “major flooding” in some areas, with the risk of “severe” flooding in others.

The Environment Agency has issued 58 flood warnings and 109 flood alerts across the country, with many areas experiencing “very heavy” rainfall.

The agency has advised people to stay away from flooded areas and to keep an eye on the latest updates.

France admits ‘failings’ over Paris attacker

Francois Hollande has come under pressure to resign after his administration was found responsible for a series of failures that led to a series of terrorist attacks in Paris.

The investigation, conducted by the French government, concluded that the authorities had failed to take adequate action to prevent the attacks.

France has admitted that it should have done more to prevent the attacks, which killed 130 people and injured hundreds more.

The government has promised to make changes to prevent similar attacks in the future.

But some families of the victims have expressed their anger at the government’s response.

“Frankly, we are disappointed,” said one family member.

“The government has failed us.”

Portugal's ruling Socialists claim poll victory

Portugal's Socialists celebrate victory in yesterday's parliamentary election and will seek to form a stable government after a year-long period of uncertainty following the February general election. Caraça María da Silva said on Tuesday.

Portugal's Socialists (PS) emerged as the party with the most votes in yesterday's elections, the first since the 2018 general election and leading in 29 of the country's 35 districts. The party, led by Socialists Prime Minister Antonio Costa, will continue in power for four years.

The Socialists' victory means that Costa will be able to form a government and have enough votes to pass legislation, a year after the last election when they failed to win an absolute majority.

The Socialists won 91 out of 230 seats, making it the first time in Portugal's history that a party has secured a majority in a parliamentary election. The party will need to form a coalition to govern, as no other party has a similar number of seats.

Costa said on Tuesday that he would form a government with the support of one smaller party, the People-Animals-Nature (PAN) party, which won four seats. The PAN has a programme that aligns with the Socialists' own priorities on climate change and social policies.

The Socialists' victory comes after months of political uncertainty, with the previous government led by the Socialists struggling to form a coalition. The Socialists had to rely on the support of smaller parties to pass legislation, which has limited their ability to implement their policies.

The Socialists' victory is a sign of growing support for the party's policies, particularly on issues such as social security, education, and the environment. The party has made climate change a key issue in its campaign, with Antonio Costa calling for a “green budget” and a transition to a low-carbon economy.

The Socialists' victory is also seen as a victory for the left-wing movement, which has gained strength in recent years in Portugal and across Europe. The Socialists have been supported by grassroots movements, such as the People-Animals-Nature party, which has been a key supporter of the Socialists' programme.

The Socialists' victory is also seen as a sign of growing support for the idea of social democracy, which has been in decline in Portugal in recent years. The Socialists have been seen as a champion of social democracy, with a commitment to social justice and the protection of workers' rights.

The Socialists' victory is also seen as a sign of growing support for the idea of a green economy, which has been in decline in Portugal in recent years. The Socialists have been seen as a champion of a green economy, with a commitment to the protection of the environment and the development of sustainable industries.

The Socialists' victory is also seen as a sign of growing support for the idea of a more inclusive society, which has been in decline in Portugal in recent years. The Socialists have been seen as a champion of an inclusive society, with a commitment to the protection of vulnerable groups and the promotion of social cohesion.

The Socialists' victory is also seen as a sign of growing support for the idea of a more participatory democracy, which has been in decline in Portugal in recent years. The Socialists have been seen as a champion of a participatory democracy, with a commitment to the protection of civil liberties and the promotion of democratic values.

SC to hold hearing over Mumbai tree-cutting row

T he Supreme Court will hold a special hearing to-day over the Maharashtra government’s decision to cut 6,200 trees in Mumbai’s Aarey colony for a Metro rail project.

The court was invited by the government to consider the a plea by the Aarey colony residents association and others seeking a stay on the tree felling.

The government has decided to cut the trees in the green zone to construct a land bridge for the fully-loaded trips of the metro service.

The petitioners claimed that the proposal for cutting the trees in Aarey forest was nothing but an attempt to violate the provisions of the Indian Forest Act.

A team of experts including wildlife experts and environmentalists, if any, should be appointed by the court to look into the matter, the petitioners contended.

The court will hear the matter along with the plea by the local residents of Aarey colony.

NC team meets Abdullahs, seeks release before local polls

A national Conference delegation that met Farooq Abdullah on Monday is likely to press for his release before the local polls.

The delegation led by former Jammu and Kashmir chief minister Farooq Abdullah, who was detained under the Public Safety Act in 2019, was also headed by former Union minister Yashwant Sinha.

The delegation met Omar Abdullah, who is detained at the Hari Nivas here. It was the first such meeting between the two leaders since the August 5, 2019, scrapping of Article 370.

Former advisor and Kashmiri leader Safdar Ahmad Khan, who was detained on August 8 and was released on bail on October 2, was also present in the meeting.

The delegation members said that they wanted the government to release Abdullah soon.

They also spoke about the recent attack on a paramilitary post near the Line of Control in Uri, which killed 17 soldiers and injured at least 20 others.

They conveyed to the government that it should work with all political parties to ensure peace and stability in the region.

They also stressed the need for a peaceful resolution of the Kashmir issue through dialogue and reconciliation.

The delegation is likely to submit its report to the National Conference leaders, who are scheduled to meet later in the week.

 Among the delegates were scientists, social workers and journalists from various parts of the world.

The court was hearing a plea, filed by a group of environmentalists, seeking a stay on the proposed tree felling.

The forest department had given a nod to the project, but the environmentalists argued that it would be a violation of the Forest Act.

The court had earlier asked the government to deposit a bond of Rs25 lakhs as security for not going ahead with the proposed felling.

The government had argued that the project was essential for the smooth functioning of the metro service.

The court had fixed the next hearing on the matter for March 1.

Former PMC Bank chief remanded in custody

A former chief executive of the PMC Bank was remanded in custody on Thursday.

Waryam Singh, who was arrested on Tuesday by the Enforcement Directorate, was remanded in custody till the next hearing.

The Enforcement Directorate had arrested Singh under the Prevention of Money Laundering Act in connection with the bank’s alleged fraud of Rs11,888 crore.

The bank had earlier filed a complaint with the Maharashtra government in January, accusing Singh of embezzlement.

The complaint alleged that Singh had siphoned off Rs11,888 crore from the bank and used it for personal purposes.

The bank had also alleged that Singh had transferred the money to various offshore companies.

The Enforcement Directorate had observed that Singh had used the money to acquire assets such as land, properties, and vehicles.

The Enforcement Directorate had also seized Singh’s two foreign bank accounts,

The court had earlier granted Singh bail on a surety of Rs50 lakh.

The court had also directed Singh to surrender his passport and not to leave the country without its prior permission.

The Enforcement Directorate had also filed an application for Singh’s production in court.

The court had granted the application and remanded Singh in custody till the next hearing.

The court had earlier observed that Singh had no fixed address and had been living in a luxurious lifestyle.

The court had also observed that Singh had a history of criminal cases and had been involved in several fraudulent activities.

Is post-Brexit London really doomed?

By Stefan Gertch

The months after they chose to leave the European Union, London and much of the rest of the UK were anticipating that the European Central Bank, which is based in Frankfurt, would make major personnel decisions to respond to Brexit over the last three years.

The latest survey, published in November by the World Economic Forum, shows that many financial services and operations staff off out of London, while Paris and Frankfurt announced moves. But, many companies that are likely to be moved from London to another European city is now only 5,000, far fewer than estimates made a couple of years ago.

This means that there are now candidates who have qualified for the ECB's Executive Board, which is the current for this position.

The six members of the Executive Board, together with the president, are the central bankers of major eurozone countries, and their appointment is subject to the EU's consent.

The European Central Bank (ECB) is the central bank of the eurozone, which consists of 19 countries that have adopted the euro as their currency.

The ECB's mandate is to maintain price stability in the Eurozone, which it defines as an annual inflation rate of below 2%.

The ECB's Governing Council, which consists of the governors of the central banks of the eurozone countries, is responsible for making decisions on monetary policy.

The ECB's president is elected by the Governing Council for a term of eight years, and can be re-elected for one additional term.

The current president of the ECB is Mario Draghi.

The ECB's Governing Council meets regularly to decide on monetary policy, and its decisions are announced to the public.

The ECB's main tools for implementing monetary policy are:

- Interest rates: The ECB can adjust the key interest rates that it sets, which affect the cost of borrowing for banks and other financial institutions.
- Quantitative easing: This involves the ECB buying assets, such as government bonds, to stimulate economic growth.
- Asset purchases: The ECB can purchase assets, such as government bonds, from banks and other financial institutions.
-前瞻政策: The ECB can announce前瞻 policy decisions, such as the possibility of future rate hikes or rate cuts, to influence market expectations.

The ECB's decisions are influenced by a wide range of factors, including inflation, economic growth, and global economic conditions.

If you have any questions about the ECB, its role, or its decisions, feel free to ask! What do you think will be the most significant challenge facing the ECB in the coming years?
Golden Order of Merit bestowed on Amir

His Highness the Amir Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani was awarded yesterday the International Association of Athletics Federations (IAAF) Golden Order of Merit bestowed on Amir in recognition of his support and to Qatar’s hosting of the 17th World Athletics Championships.

On behalf of the Amir, HE President of Qatar Olympic Committee (QOC), and chair of the World Athletics Championships organising committee, Sheikh Joaan bin Hamad al-Thani, received the order of merit from President of the International Association of Athletics Federations Lord Sebastian Coe, on the sidelines of the closing ceremony of the championships hosted by Doha.

The championships witnessed many great performances including a world record by Yohanes Koech in the 3000m steeplechase with a time of 7:58.88.

Closing the ceremonies, IAAF President, Lord Sebastian Coe, said: “We are not competitors, we are collaborators and organisations that are smart are actually partnering in their mission to make sport work. Sport is the best diplomatic tool; sports continues to work hard to help create social change. We had challenges but addressed them. “I think we came through pretty good.” Coe said.

“Champions of the World’s Games were called upon to stage an unprecedented show in Doha, which is the nerve centre of the major Arab States. The World Championships have been a strong support to the determination, resilience and dedication of the Qatari people and athletes, as it is a major catalyst for the advancement and prosperity of our nation. The World Championships have been a major platform to showcase Qatar’s readiness to host major events, and it is a great achievement to witness Qatar’s hosting of the World Athletics Championships. Qatar has proven that it is a world-class sports destination and has added another feather to its cap. This remarkable achievement is a testament to the vision and determination of the Amir Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani and the Qatari people. The World Championships have been a significant milestone for Qatar and the region, and we are proud to have played a key role in its success.”

Doha W orlds will inspire generations to come: Dahlan

Prime Minister and Minister of State for Defence and Development Affairs Dr. Yousef bin Ahmed al-Kuwari has expressed his delight to see the best show in the history of the World Athletics Championships in Doha, with more than 100 countries participating in the championships, and more than 1000 athletes competing.

Dr. Dahlan said: “First two days were hectic and we will review them. Doha is a very special place, there are many lessons to be learnt here. These are challenges that we need to face, but we need to keep going. This is a major turning point for us as a country. The World Championships have been a great opportunity for us to showcase Qatar’s readiness to host major events, and it is a great achievement to witness Qatar’s hosting of the World Athletics Championships. Dr. Dahlan also added: “We don’t say that we are perfect, and we will always learn from our mistakes. We have always been a learning nation and we will continue to learn. It’s super special. I have never felt the support of Kenyans in the way that I’ve felt it in Qatar. It’s been a great experience to see the level of support and the love that the athletes have shown to Qatar.”

He also added: “It’s been a great experience to see the level of support and the love that the athletes have shown to Qatar. We are very proud of the way that they have shown their support and we thank them for it.”

He also thanked the athletes for their hard work and dedication, and said: “We are very proud of the way that they have shown their support and we thank them for it. We are also very proud of the way that they have shown their support and we thank them for it.”
