OM and Sidra Medicine launch excavation project

A joint team from Qatar Museums (QM) and Sidra Medicine launched an archaeological excavation project to understand the prehistoric population of Qatar; it was announced yesterday.

The excavation is led by QM’s Department of Archaeology, approved by Qatar’s Ministry of Culture and Tourism and led by Dr Sara Tomei, manager of the Qatar Civilization Information Management System.

"A key aim of these burial mounds is to understand how and when communities in touch with their past.

The research will also analyse bone and tooth samples, which will reflect the diet of the dead.

The project is part of a National Priority Research Programme led by the QM and funded by the Qatar National Research Fund.

The research is in highly advanced DNA sequencing technologies and we are excited to partner with Qatar Museums on this fascinating study, which will be the first of its kind in the Gulf region.

The groundbreaking project aptly captures the importance of ancient osteological studies in shedding light on the diverse prehistoric populations that lived in Qatar, researchers said.

HMC warns of dangers of travelling with open sunroof

The Hamad Injury Prevention (HIPP) at Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC) has warned about the dangers of driving with sunroofs open, saying how inappropriate car seat use has three times the risk of severe injury or death in a car crash, compared to when the sunroof is closed. The expert explained that if the child is allowed to open a sunroof, he or she will be exposed to an open environment and is more likely to be injured by hitting an object, or even a window or a door. If the sunroof is not closed, the child is at risk of ejection or being pinned and crushed underneath the vehicle, which can result in severe or fatal injuries.

Dr Rafael Consunji, director of the Hamad Injury Prevention Programme (HIPP) at Hamad Medical Corporation, stated: “If a child is allowed to ride in an open sunroof, he or she is exposed to high risk of severe injury and death if they are standing in an open sunroof as it collapses or a window or a door closes on them.”

It was pointed out that if the head is outside of the vehicle, it is extremely risky for several reasons, as the child is exposed to additional risk — as they expose their head, hands or arms to direct transit from other vehicles, roadside structures, and even pedestrians, adding that the chance of escape from the vehicle is negligible.

Consunji explained that “allowing children to ride in open sunroofs adds additional risk by exposing them to head, hand, and foot exposures, plus an even greater chance of ejection and being pinned and crushed underneath the vehicle, and in the event of a collision, safety belts are one of the most common causes of injury or death in ‘Jabloun’ [Qatar],” pointed out Consunji.

According to Consunji, it is important for parents and families to remember that one of the most common causes of injury to children in Qatar is road traffic accidents, and that the majority of road trafﬁc accidents result in severe injuries and permanent disabilities. “In order for the child to be safe in the vehicle, they need to be seated properly in the back seat, and the child should be restrained properly in order to have their body parts protected during an accident,” noted Consunji.

According to experts, the problem with open sunroofs is that they allow children to stand or hang their heads and arms out of the vehicle, which is extremely dangerous. “There is an increased risk of severe injuries if there is an open sunroof, as the child will be exposed to additional risk. They will be injured, or even die, as a result of a crash,” added Consunji.

US strikes in Iraq and Syria target militia group

The US military carried out strikes in Iraq and Syria against the Kataib Hezbollah militia group over rocket attacks against US military bases in Iraq and Syria, US officials said.

The Pentagon said it targeted three locations in Iraq and two in Syria, including weapons storage facilities and command and control centers that the group had used to plan and execute attacks on coalition forces.

In Iraq, four militia fighters were killed and 11 were wounded following five air strikes on the country’s west coast, an Iraqi military statement said. The dead included several Iraqi militia fighters killed in an air strike on their headquarters, near the border with Syria, according to the sources.

A Rumiana, the sources said. The strike was likely carried out by drones and guided missiles launched from Iran, the sources said.

Four other Kataib Hezbollah fighters were killed and 13 were wounded following five air strikes on the country’s western border with Syria, the sources said.

The strikes come amid tensions between Washington and Tehran as Iran’s economy is under sanctions and US forces are deployed in Iraq.

Trump faces firestorm after identifying alleged whistleblower

Washington

Dearest Trump, faced with evidence of your culpability in the January 6 attack on the US Capitol and the ongoing investigation of your involvement in a plot to overthrow the government, I am writing to you to ask that you immediately release the name of the whistleblower.

The whistleblower, who has provided key documents and testimony to investigators, is a public servant who has come forward to protect the integrity of the government and the rule of law. Their actions are in line with the highest ethical standards and are in keeping with the values that have guided the United States for over two centuries.

The identity of the whistleblower is a matter of public interest and has been the subject of much speculation and media coverage. However, the decision to release the whistleblower's name is not up to me. It is a matter that should be handled by the appropriate authorities, who have the expertise and resources to handle such sensitive information.

I believe that the release of the whistleblower's name would be in the public interest. It would allow the American people to learn the truth about what happened, and it would hold those responsible accountable for their actions.

I urge you to consider the importance of this matter and take action to protect the integrity of the government and the rule of law.

Yours sincerely,
[Your Name]

Tourism industry suffers as citizenship law protests flare

Karnataka: Veerendra Heggade, the Deputy Chief Minister of Karnataka, on Monday accused the federal government of trying to suppress protests against the Citizenship Amendment Act (CAA) by resorting to ‘extreme measures’.

In a surprise move, the government had banned the internet in parts of Kamrup (Majuli) district of Assam on Saturday, invoking the ‘Code Red’ warning of the India Meteorological Department.

The internet ban comes after the government had tried to impose similar restrictions in parts of Nagaland and Iraqi in Assam, but had to lift them because of frayed public sentiments.

The CAA was brought into force on November 30 to provide Indian citizenship to non-Muslims from Pakistan, Bangladesh, and Afghanistan. It also empowers the Centre to provide citizenship to illegal immigrants from these countries if they have been in India for at least 15 years.

This is the first (project) of its kind in Qatar, which will cause a qualitative shift in traffic. The project is a milestone in the country’s development and will facilitate the movement of people within and between the city’s suburbs. The project, named after Qatar’s iconic design. In addition to being a visual spectacle and an architectural and design marvel, adding yet another feather to the country’s crown. The project will consist of blossoming bridges spanning a total of 12km above sea level and connecting to each other through an innovative system of ramp. To be built under the navigation channel, the undersea tunnels will ensure smooth passage of ships over it. The details of the Sharq Crossing, expected to be completed within two years, will be revealed at a briefing session convened as per the directives of HE the Prime Minister and Interior Minister Sheikh Abdullah bin Nasser bin Khalifa Al Thani. Ashghal invited local contractors with the aim of forming alliances with international companies with regard to the implementation. The project includes a presentation on the project and its implementation so that local contractors can start their preparations and submit bids in cooperation through a partnership and alliance between local and international companies. On Monday, Ashghal’s project department director Nasser bin Abdulhameed Al-Mudahka confirmed: “We trust local contractors and their ability to deliver projects that meet the required quality and time, as this is the first of its kind in Qatar, which will cause a qualitative shift in traffic.” Engineer Youssef Al-Emadi, Projects Affairs director, confirmed that the contractors were invited to enter and compete for the Sharq Crossing project and to define the required schedule for the project. Local companies are an attractive platform for international companies and provide a list of those alliances in mid-January to start offering the project to tender in February, and start implementation in the third quarter of 2020. Incidentally, the announcement arrived as part of the Sharq Crossing, which first made news back in 2013 as Doha Crossing, as the 2020 budget presented earlier this month. The project is part of Qatar’s prioritised infrastructure development evolution of new projects worth QR1. She is be in 2020. It may be recalled that the Sharq Crossing master plan had been developed by Santiago Calatrava in 2011 at the request of the then Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Urban Planning, featuring a unique combination of an efficient civil engineering solution and a highly iconic design. In addition to being a visual spectacle and magnificent addition to the Doha skyline, the project has the potential to redraw the traffic map of Qatar’s capital and its suburbs.

The European Union (EU) has amassed a small team of officials to document and analyse fake news and disinformation, in order to contain them without resorting to censorship or surveillance. This is a key part of the EU’s diplomatic engagement with other countries, as well as a major factor in fuelling religious and ethnic tensions across the world.

The EU has assigned a small team of EU officials to document and analyse fake news and disinformation, from state-backed broadcasters to social media platforms. This is part of the EU’s diplomatic engagement with other countries, as well as a major factor in fuelling religious and ethnic tensions across the world. Regardless of the source of the disinformation, the EU has engaged with the client side during which poor people with low income and education have been targeted in a series of attacks. The EU has worked with the governmental body to ensure that these attacks do not result in violence or harm to any establishment of faith. This year, the government has made an automated facial recognition system on a national scale, which has been under use for a few times. This is despite the fact that there are many legal frameworks in place to prevent this happening.

The EU plays an active role in ensuring that the benefits of technology and digital transformation are understood and embraced by all. This is because of its deep understanding of the role that digital transformation can play in modernising public services and improving people’s lives. The EU’s leadership role in the digital transformation landscape is vital, and it is why they are currently in a position to share their vision and expertise with others.

The article discusses the challenges and opportunities for the EU in promoting digital transformation in an inclusive and sustainable way. It highlights the importance of addressing the digital divide and promoting access to digital technologies, as well as the need for policies that support innovation and entrepreneurship. The EU’s focus on pro-Kremlin disinformation is one such challenge, as it can undermine the credibility of the EU and its member states. It is also a key issue for the EU in its efforts to promote inclusive growth and development.

The article also discusses the EU’s efforts to promote the use of technology for good, such as its initiatives to support the development of artificial intelligence for the benefit of all. It also highlights the importance of ensuring that the benefits of technology are accessible to everyone, regardless of their background. The EU is working hard to ensure that all citizens have access to the benefits of technology, and this is reflected in its commitment to promoting inclusive growth and development.

The article concludes by highlighting the importance of the EU’s role in promoting digital transformation and ensuring that its benefits are accessible to all. It highlights the challenges that the EU faces in this area, as well as the opportunities that it has to create a more inclusive and sustainable future.
Qatar Airways conducts emergency simulation

Qatar Airways conducted a planned emergency exercise earlier this month to rehearse its emergency management programme and response functions. Qatar Airways Group Chief Executive Akbar Al Baker said, “This year’s emergency simulation was designed to challenge our employees to respond to an incident that might take place in a challenging location. Our aim was to test our emergency preparedness, reflecting our high standard of safety and security at all our operations.” He added, “We would like to thank all the various regulatory government agencies, stakeholders, partners and our employees for their cooperation in the exercise.”

The exercise was carried out at the Qatar Airways’ main headquarters at Doha and involved personnel from various departments, including the Qatar Airways Flight Operations, Qatar Airways Technical Operations, Qatar Airways Catering, Qatar Airways Cargo and the Qatar Airways Crew Planning Department.

The exercise was conducted in two phases. In the first phase, the emergency management programme included a series of drills that tested the company’s response to a simulated emergency situation. In the second phase, the emergency management programme included a series of drills that tested the company’s response to a simulated emergency situation.

The exercise was designed to test the company’s ability to respond to a variety of emergency situations, including those that are not typical of those encountered in the airline’s normal operations. The exercise was also designed to test the company’s ability to communicate effectively with all stakeholders, including government agencies, regulatory bodies, and the public.

The exercise was conducted in coordination with the Qatar Civil Aviation Authority (QCAA) and the Qatar Fire Department (QFD). The exercise was also supported by the Qatar Airports Authority (QAA) and the Qatar National Tourism Council (QNTC).
