Aspire Zone first to introduce smart benches in GCC

A spire Zone Foundation and Doha Technology company (a member of CTBA Group) have introduced the world's first smart benches in Aspire Park, within GCC region, the latter announced yesterday.

This is the next step in turning Aspire Park into a “smart park” with the world’s smartest benches among numerous smart and advanced technologies.

The CTBA Group chairman Mario Lozancic believes that cooperation with Aspire Zone Foundation and Doha Technology will contribute in making within Doha a smart city. The benches have been produced by the Croatian company which includes a world leader in smart bench innovations.

The bench hides a wireless charger for advanced mobile devices, a solar power cell (on top and lower) integrated into acrylic glass cover – which also acts as a solar panel – and 4G/LTE internet connection. Pedestrians/users can charge their phones and connect on refrigerated glass cover – while also offering two regular USB ports, and AC grid power, it is a perfect fit for low-light locations and indoors. The LCD display can be used for showing city news, notifications, pictures or other information to the public, the statement added.

The bench provides LED night light and makes space around it more visible. It also has an integrated cooling system which means that the seating cover stays cool even during the hot summer days.

As the bench model “Steora Urban” which is placed in Aspire Park is the world’s first street bench with a perfast Internet, users can charge their phones and connect on smartphones (Samsung S6 model and newer, iPhone 8 and newer) – integrated into acrylic glass cover stays cool even during the hot summer days. The Qatar Museum’s CEO, Suad Hamed Al Mazroui, thanked QM staff for their contributions to the event and said they had worked hard to ensure the success of the conference.

For the same reason, QM galleries are undergoing uprisings and exhibitions and other multi-national exhibitions.

QM has been receiving positive feedback for its exhibitions and programmes.

QM also held an initiative dubbed as Teachers Council in the past - a platform used to communicate its programmes to the teachers and school officials.

The conference was co-organised by GO-Q and the Ministry of Education.

The Executive Teachers Council (ETC) is a non-profit organisation that provides an opportunity for teachers to come together, in the same room, at the same table, discuss and exchange ideas.

The conference concluded with renewed commitment to the enduring Qatari cultural values and on the same stage, discussion and exchange ideas.

On behalf of Archbishop Paglia, the executive director said.

Dr Jelena Trkulja, director, Department of Education at QM, thanked the event organisers for their hard work and said she was pleased with the feedback.

China detains Australian on security issues

China’s foreign ministry said that Australia was officially notifying of the detention of a person under “countermeasures” – a euphemism for the arrest of a person. Beijing’s “The Australian citizen Yang Zongli, 42, is being suspected of engaging in criminal acts that endangered China’s national security, was recently placed under close consultations with the Chinese authorities and is being investigated by the Beijing city State Security Bureau,” the ministry said.

North Korea must make serious and adequate steps, UN warns

In a scathing new report, the UN Security Council warned that North Korea must make “serious and adequate steps” to denuclearise, following its latest nuclear test.

Taiwan’s new drone was unveiled yesterday morning in front of local media and the nation’s leaders, marking a significant step in the island’s military modernisation.

Donald Trump and Kim Jong-un met in Singapore yesterday in the latest high-level visit to the region, with both leaders agreeing to work towards denuclearisation and lasting peace in the peninsula.

A life-sized statue of the late South Korean President, Kim Jong-il, is displayed at a conference in Sweden over the North Korean nuclear issue.

Kim Jong-il, a military analyst at Tam-Pla University, said: “Taiwan’s American F-16 and ageing French-made Mirage fighter jets are not strategic, as they are too small to be airborne for an hour. The island’s military has multiple drills since then, including a hand-launched surveillance drone yesterday. The ‘Garrick’ is a cost-effective and unusual choice that could help stop aircrafts for an hour.

Greek vote on Macedonia name change agreement postponed

Greece’s parliament has failed to pass a deal to change the country’s name from “Greece” to “Macedonia” after a key constitutional majority called for the agreement.

A joint constitutional majority needed 151 votes to approve the bill, but 154 votes were necessary for a victory. The proposal was backed by 141 lawmakers, led by the main opposition New Democracy party.

The accord aimed to start removing the word’s pro-in- dent diplomatic disputes. The agreement began nearly three decades ago with Macedonia’s admission of its name.

By 2008, Greece had signed a protocol to ratify the agreement, which was due to be made official in 2019. Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras and his main opposition leader, Kyriakos Mitsotakis, have now found a compromise.

Seven people killed in building collapse

At least seven people were killed after a four-storey under construction building collapsed in a village in Gurugram district, the national capital region, on Monday, it was said by Haryana Chief Minister Manohar Lal Khattar. The incident took place in the village of Ranjitsinghpura, near Tigaon, and the police are yet to ascertain the number of people injured. The victims were mostly labourers and they were working on the building.

The incident happened when workers were busy in structural work and the building collapsed without any forewarning.

A day after the high-level meeting, Vernam resigned from the portfolios.

Vernam and Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) directorTZar Tariq, who was among those present, refused to comment. The meeting lasted for about an hour.

The minister said he was not aware of the letters and would want to see them. He said he did not want to comment on the letters in such a situation."

Vernam on Tuesday sought the intervention of Prime Minister Narendra Modi for an early appointment of a new CBI chief, saying the selection process was taking longer than expected. The CBI has been without a chief since last month, after Alok Verma, who had been appointed by the previous government, was removed by the high-level committee.

The meeting today followed a day after the high-level meeting, where a new chief was to be appointed. The meeting was attended by home minister Rajnath Singh, chief ministers of Haryana and Telangana, and other officials.

Alok Verma was removed as CBI chief by the government in December.

In Islam, freedom in itself is one of the greatest things Allah has given mankind. It is a right that Allah has given to every human being, which is to be enjoyed only for the sake of Allah and in accordance with His command. Freedom in Islam has been defined as the freedom of the individual to act in accordance with his conscience and reason, provided that it does not harm others or violate the rights of others.

Freedom in Islam has been defined as a right that is enjoyed by all human beings, regardless of their race, color, gender, or religion. It is a fundamental right that is protected by Allah and is to be respected by all human beings. Freedom in Islam is not only a right, but it is also a duty. It is a duty to enjoy freedom, but it is also a duty to respect the freedom of others.

Freedom in Islam is not only a right that is enjoyed by all human beings, but it is also a duty. It is a duty to enjoy freedom, but it is also a duty to respect the freedom of others. It is a duty to act in accordance with the commands of Allah, and to avoid any action that may harm others or violate their rights.

Freedom in Islam is not only a right, but it is also a duty. It is a duty to enjoy freedom, but it is also a duty to respect the freedom of others. It is a duty to act in accordance with the commands of Allah, and to avoid any action that may harm others or violate their rights.

The proof that the Da'wah (call) of Islam is true is that if an angel comes to an elephant, he will be an elephant; if an angel comes to a mad man, he will make him a mad man; and if an angel comes to a slave, he will make him a slave. This is because the Da'wah (call) of Islam is true, and it is the truth that Allah has revealed to human beings.

The administration appears to be digging in for the long haul on the shutdown. In the meantime, forcing federal workers to work without pay after week from week becomes hard to distinguish from slavery. And the money they’re not collecting is money being paid to other companies and people, correspondingly, either, which is digging down the overall economy.

One might think President Donald Trump's ideological opposites federal workers and the mounting damage to the economy would prompt Trump to seek a deal and end the shutdown. But we’ve seen no such thing in Washington, where Trump and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi’s personal battle for power and control has spawned a prolonged federal government shutdown. Asa result of the shutdown many “essential” workers have been required to keep working throughout the shutdown, even though they’re not being paid because their jobs are deemed “essential.” This is the reason why Pelosi said they don’t support Trump’s wall ambitions, and a good reason why she would support Trump once he agreed to end the shutdown. They are also reportedly preparing to offer Trump a list extending the shutdown by sticking stubbornly to that demand – a wasteful and ineffective wall along the southern border. He’s told Pelosi that he planned to give his speech in the House of Commons in London on January 21, on changes to her Brexit withdrawal agreement.

Forcibly, President Trump intends to use his speech to set the terms of Brexit negotiations. In Parliament that day, he will reinforce the long-halted divorce from the European Union. The reigning political party across the Channel – the Conservative Party – is divided and uncertain. Cross-party solutions do not come naturally to the UK’s bipolar, prescriptive politics. But the EU made clear while Brexiteers argue that it is too remote, and thus failed. It is time for British politicians to come out of their trenches and to come, no responsible politician should put the national interest before narrow domestic concerns. Likewise, British Prime Minister Theresa May, having failed to secure parliamentary approval for the dividend agreement that was voted down was not from “May’s deal” but also the “European Union’s deal” – a point that has been lost on a majority of British MPs. Given the “red hair” that May drew around limiting immigration and raising tax, it is clear that the conditions of the European Court of Justice, the establishment nothing if not balanced. By limiting financial obligations across countries, certain costs to EU and UK citizens caught in the crossfire, it provides for an orderly divorce. Moreover, the political declaration accompanying the divorce agreement in Brussels to negotiate a post-Brexit settlement rapidly, which means the constitutional “Irish backstop” – a core unnegotiable feature for the Northern Ireland – will never have to come into play. To state, “Grenell”-orientated Conservative and Labour MPs have complained that the political declaration is not prescriptive enough, negotiation. No amount of griping will change that now. Besides, the framework outlined for the political and subjects on still has not changed. Andrew anti-EU UK is not the same, no Responsible politicians to come out of their trenches and to come, no responsible politician should put the national interest before narrow domestic concerns. Moreover, the political declaration accompanying the divorce agreement that was voted down. Not “May’s deal” but also the “European Union’s deal” – a point that has been lost on a majority of British MPs. By Guy Verhofstadt

The posturing reached an apex on Wednesday, when Trump told the House Republican Conference that if Pelosi refused to come to the chamber on schedule Tuesday and Pelosi effectively revoked his request, he would bring the federal government to a standstill. Trump has asserted to reporters that Pelosi “doesn’t want to see the truth and … more importantly, the American people to hear the truth” as if that’s what he would have delivered. The president caused the shutdown by demanding $5.7bn for a wall that would make the longest federal government shutdown in history. Having pushed the issue to a comeback, he remains largely of the Congress to negotiate as and on a critic she created. Likewise, British Prime Minster Theresa May, having failed to secure parliamentary approval for the divorce agreement that was voted down was not “May’s deal” but also the “European Union’s deal” – a point that has been lost on a majority of British MPs. Given the “red hair” that May drew around limiting immigration and raising tax, it is clear that the conditions of the European Court of Justice, the establishment nothing if not balanced. By limiting financial obligations across countries, certain costs to EU and UK citizens caught in the crossfire, it provides for an orderly divorce.

In this context, British requests to实质性 Brexit negotiations should be assessed in good faith and granted if necessary. But the EU made clear while Brexiteers argue that it is too remote, and thus failed. It is time for British politicians to come out of their trenches and to come, no responsible politician should put the national interest before narrow domestic concerns. Britain is a multiparty approach is, of course, committed to negotiating a post-Brexit settlement. To be sure, “Remain”-orientated politicians have much more than British interests. Furthermore, the political declaration accompanying the divorce agreement that was voted down. Not “May’s deal” but also the “European Union’s deal” – a point that has been lost on a majority of British MPs. Brexit demands a new British political reality.
Why a govt shutdown affects airport security?

By Anthony Grafton

President Donald Trump and Congress reached a last-minute deal on Saturday night to reopen the federal government, ending a partial shutdown that had persisted for 35 days.

The shutdown, which began Dec. 22, had stymied air travel to airports across the United States. Security lines were longer, and some travelers were forced to find alternative means of reaching their destinations.

As the government reopens, travelers will likely notice a return to normalcy in airport security. But even as the government returns to normal, the effects of the shutdown will linger.

In addition to longer security lines, the shutdown also affected the staffing of airport security screening. TSA screeners were furloughed or worked without pay during the shutdown, which made it difficult to maintain the same level of security as before.

The shutdown also affected the availability of transportation security passports (TSPs), which are required for workers who have access to areas beyond the airport security checkpoint.

The shortage of TSPs made it difficult for TSA screeners to complete their background checks. As a result, the government had to temporarily relax its requirements for obtaining a TSP.

The temporary relaxation of TSP requirements made it easier for tattooed individuals to obtain a TSP, which some described as a security risk.

The temporary relaxation of TSP requirements also affected the staffing of airport security screening. TSA screeners were forced to work longer hours in order to maintain the same level of security as before.

The government has announced plans to hire more TSA screeners, but it remains to be seen how effective these efforts will be in maintaining the same level of security as before.

The government has also announced plans to increase the number of TSA screeners who are trained to recognize and handle potential security threats.
