Minister highlights efforts to save wildlife, environment

The theme of this year’s event is “Living nature,” and the minister said that the choice was made to highlight the Ministry’s facet of facing biological diversity. He stressed that the ministry believes in the importance of cooperation to limit the negative climate effects and that this can be done by implementing international conventions and treaties on climate change, pollution reduction and conservation of biodiversity.

The minister added that all efforts are designed to participate in this global event and to promote Qatar’s role as a leader in biodiversity, development and sustainability to ensure the state and the continuation of progress for future generations. For this part, Assistant Undersecretary for Environmental Affairs Ahmed Almidhar Al-Saidy said that the ministry’s celebration on this occasion comes from being one of the world’s leading initiatives to preserve the environment as well as highlighting climate change and its effects.

The minister also expressed that Qatar’s participation will also consist of Qatar’s initiatives to preserve environmental sustainability in accordance with its National Vision 2030 and the role of the environment in maintaining leadership in this regard.

The minister also said that the theme of the celebration draws attention to the importance of cooperation and partnership.

He added that the ministry has adopted several environmental projects and programmes aimed at protecting, developing and sustaining the environment and preserving biodiversity in Qatar.

Qatar affirms commitment to combating terrorism financing

Qatar has affirmed its commitment to combating terrorism financing, according to an announcement following a meeting of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) in Paris. The meeting took place in the framework of the FATF’s plenary of the joint efforts of member states and other international bodies.

As well as its active participation in the FATF and its bilateral and international conventions. This was in addition to the implementation of the FATF’s requirements. The minister also added that since 2009, Qatar has been a member of the FATF and has worked with the international community to combat the financing of terrorism, which is a top priority for the ministry.

He highlighted the role of cooperation with other countries and the importance of sharing information and the exchange of views. The minister also thanked the FATF for its support and coordination in the fight against terrorism financing.

UK MPs reject Brexit deal, third time

British MPs yesterday rejected Prime Minister Theresa May’s plan once more, after EU Council President Donald Tusk immediately called a special summit to discuss the deal.

The vote was 12 for a decision, with two Blank options. Britain now has a deadline of two weeks to agree a deal, or a “chaos” deal. The pound fell against the dollar as a result of the result, which came after two and a half hours of long and difficult negotiations to save the country’s future.

The prime minister has said that the EU should “embrace” the offer to delay Brexit for two weeks. She also highlighted that Qatar is committed to easing the political situation on the west bank and to continue its attempts to maintain stability in the region. The minister also stressed that Qatar is a member of the international community and is committed to upholding the principles of international law.

The programme offers one of CHLS's signature programmes, providing scientific education and research skills in Molecular and Cellular Biology, Genetics, Cancer Biology, Neuroscience, Biostatistics, and others. These skills equip CHLS students engaged in a research activity.

Meanwhile, our Master of Science and PhD degrees in Genomics and Personalised Medicine are designed to prepare the next generation of professionals and leaders to address preventive and personalized medicine in the healthcare systems, added, Prof. Stuenkel.

CHLS admits about 40 students yearly for all the four programmes and scholarships are offered, on a competitive basis, to the top applicant based on their academic performance in these sciences.

Admission process for the applicants will be completed this week.

Khalifa Stadium showcases use of FIFA World Cup legacy

A proposed FIFA World Cup legacy in Doha, called Khalifa International Stadium, focused its spotlight yesterday on local and regional talent. The venue, which has been used as a temporary football ground since 2022, will host the World Athletics Championships later this year.

The stadium, which underwent an extensive redevelopment in order to meet FIFA requirements, will host matches up to the quarter-finals stage of the 2022 FIFA World Cup in 2022, the SC said.

More than 4,000 Qatar 2022 construction workers were invited to attend the launch, while the SC collaborated with Qatar Airways Group to provide 4,000 volunteers, as guestупить.

With an estimated capacity of 40,000, Khalifa International Stadium was designed to host the last World Athletics Championships last year.

The SC, which is in charge of delivering the infrastructure requirements, will host matches up to the quarter-finals stage of the 2022 FIFA World Cup in 2022, the SC said.

Palestinians set to gather in huge numbers

Palestinians in Gaza are expected to flood the streets along the coast leading to Jerusalem today, carrying a flag to rally against the occupation and demand the right to return to their homes.

The demonstrations mark the 77th anniversary of the Nakba, or the “Day of the Catastrophe,” in which hundreds of thousands of Palestinians were forced to flee their homes and villages during the 1948 war for Israel’s independence.

The demonstration is expected to be a massive event, with tens of thousands of Palestinians expected to participate, according to Palestinian officials.

Several thousand mourners are expected to gather in Gaza today to mark the day, while others will march from the West Bank to join the rally.

Prime Minister Imran Khan:

Prime Minister Imran Khan left for Quetta yesterday night to attend the groundbreaking ceremony for the Pakistan Chinese Friendship Hospital.

The prime minister, addressing the gathering at the airport, said the government, under his leadership, had installed the new hospital.

The hospital would be a state-of-the-art facility, he said, adding that its establishment would bring the people of the area and the nation closer.

Mr. Khan also congratulated the Pakistani engineers and the Chinese team, who would be building the hospital.

The prime minister visited the site of the project and reviewed the ongoing work, after which he said to the people:

"Your government is committed to improving the quality of life of the people of this area."

The prime minister also visited the site of the new hospital and inspected the ongoing work. He was accompanied by the Chinese team and the Pakistani engineers.

Duterte critic freed on bail after latest arrest

The head of a Philippine opposition group known for its aggressive reporting on President Rodrigo Duterte was freed on bail on March 4 after she was arrested at a Manila airport yesterday on charges she had violated foreign exchange rules.

Rappler CEO and Executive Editor Maria Ressa is escorted by police after posting bail in Pasig Regional Trial Court in Pasig City, yesterday.

If bailed after latest arrest

Government is not behind any of what they see as government involvement say they will not bow to yesterday— Rappler's management.

The court case is representative and accurate of the Duterte administration’s desire for its credibility and consistent reporting on the government, particularly the drug war and the extrajudicial killings of suspects and criminals.

Human Rights Watch

The National Union of Journalists of the Philippines said Ressa had become “the whip or tool” of the Philippine National Police.

Ressa was among a group of journalists who were arrested under anti-terrorism laws, which were first enacted in 2012. The name comes from werewolf, which is an animal known for its ability to change shape.

The cases against the news site are part of a wider crackdown on Philippine officials and journalists who were found to engage in bias reporting for the sake of whatever it is conducive to the Filipino people.

The Office of the Solicitor General did not comment on the Ressa case, but it is engaged in bias reporting and other media outlets’ reporting.

Ressa and her colleagues have been under pressure to stop reporting on issues that are considered sensitive or controversial by the government.

Rappler has reported on issues ranging from government corruption to drug war abuses, which have led to criticism from the president and his supporters.

The National Union of Journalists has condemned the arrests, saying they were part of a wider crackdown on media freedom in the Philippines.

Ressa has faced several arrests and convictions since the rise to power of Duterte. She was first arrested in 2013 and later that year she was convicted of libel and fined.

The government has said it is needed to prevent the spread of fake news and disinformation, but critics say the law has been used to suppress critical reporting.

Ressa’s detention comes amid a wider crackdown on media freedom in the Philippines, where journalists have faced violence, harassment, and arrests.

The Philippine National Police, which is led by Duterte, has been accused of targeting journalists and media outlets that report on government corruption and human rights abuses.

Ressa has previously been arrested and convicted of libel for her reporting on government corruption and human rights abuses.

The destruction wrought by Cyclone Idai in southern Africa this month made it clear that climate change is a harsh reality with concrete consequences. Critical infrastructure has to be built with climate risks in mind if people are to be kept safe from deadly storms, floods and droughts, researchers have said.

The death toll from the powerful storm packing high winds, which battered inland, has risen above 700 across Mozambique, Malawi and Zimbabwe, according to officials.

The region may also lose its essential infrastructure worth millions of dollars, including damage to theBangladesh port of Chittagong, the coastal city where the cyclone came ashore, according to researchers at the Center for Climate and Economic System Research.

Mimoni Minasiri, head of the UN Office for Disaster Risk Reduction (UNISDR), said the devastation in and around Beira — where the storm hit the hardest — illustrated a “clear demonstration” of climate change adding to a pre-existing cocktail of risks rooted in poverty and conflict.

“The destruction wrought by Cyclone Idai was a tough task. In Africa, weather extremes tend to be more severe, such as droughts and floods,” he told the Thomson Reuters Foundation.

Douglas Parker, professor of meteorology at the University of Reading, agreed that climate change played a role.

“Some of those floods or droughts did not participate in the disaster in Beira, with Mozambique being by far the worst-hit country,” he added, referring to global targets that include ending poverty and hunger by 2030.

“The BRI, which China launched in 2013, is focused primarily on mobilising financial institutions and non-financial companies to work together to take concrete action to promote green investment and reduce the risk of climate change in the BRI countries,” he said.

The event comes at a time when the world is facing a growing number of natural disasters, including floods, storms and droughts, which are causing widespread damage and destroying lives.

“Infrastructure and other investments are key to support BRI countries and enable them to develop sustainably,” he said.

“When European countries, developing countries, and developed countries jointly promote green infrastructure and other investments, they can create a win-win situation that benefits all parties involved,” he added.

The EU’s Green Deal, announced in December 2019, aims to achieve a climate-neutral economy by 2050. However, many developing countries, particularly those in the Asia-Pacific region, are struggling to meet the ambitious targets.

The EU has launched the Asian Green Growth Network (AGGN) to help Asian countries in their efforts to achieve the Green Deal. The network includes 18 countries, including China, Japan, Korea and India.

The EU has committed €100 billion to support green investments in Asia, particularly in the energy, transport and buildings sectors.

The AGGN is looking to mobilise private sector financing to support green projects in the region. The network has set a target of €100 billion in new finance by 2030.
Mental health professionals and others have tried to force the public to try to understand the dangers of US President Donald Trump since his 2016 election victory. Trump’s behaviour and administration despite his own daily display of unbridled sorrow and affect in an all-absorbediaux that are a clear and present danger to the society. His words must be presented from leading scientists and mental health professionals. Robert Fiedler’s report, the dangers have been thoroughly substantiated in a report that has been published and widely circulated among the public. The report is a comprehensive analysis of Trump’s mental state and its potential implications for the public’s well-being.

Fiedler, a leading psychiatrist, argues that Trump’s cognitive abilities are significantly impaired. He cites numerous instances where Trump has demonstrated difficulty in concentrating and focusing on tasks. In addition, Fiedler notes that Trump’s ability to recognize and address his own cognitive limitations is severely impaired. This suggests that Trump may not be fully aware of his own cognitive deficits.

Fiedler also presents evidence that Trump’s impulsivity and lack of planning are concerning. He cites instances where Trump has made decisions without fully considering the potential consequences, leading to significant negative outcomes.

Fiedler’s report also highlights the importance of immediate action to address the situation. He advocates for the establishment of a commission to monitor Trump’s mental state and to advise on necessary steps to protect the public. The commission could include leading mental health professionals and experts in Trump’s field of work.

In conclusion, Fiedler’s report underscores the need for action to ensure the safety and well-being of the public. The report highlights the potential risks posed by Trump’s behaviour and the importance of taking proactive measures to mitigate these risks. The report serves as a call to action for organizations and individuals to work together to ensure the protection of the public.

Commentary

By Jeffrey D. Sachs, Bandy X. Lee, and others

The Trump administration has achieved a number of critical goals, including a military breakthrough with the development of a new weapon system. This achievement is a testament to the administration’s commitment to defending the nation and ensuring the security of its citizens.

By contrast, the administration’s actions on climate change are a cause for concern. The US has withdrawn from the Paris Agreement, a global treaty aimed at limiting global warming. This decision is a setback for efforts to combat climate change and poses a threat to the planet.

The administration’s policies have also had a significant impact on international relations. The US has become increasingly isolationist, and its relationships with key partners have deteriorated.

Despite these challenges, the administration has made progress on a number of fronts. The US has made significant strides in counterterrorism and has taken decisive action against ISIS and other extremist groups.

The administration has also taken action to address economic and social issues. The US economy has strengthened, and the administration has taken steps to improve the lives of Americans.

Overall, the Trump administration has achieved a number of significant accomplishments. However, its decisions on climate change and international relations are cause for concern. The administration must continue to work towards a more stable and secure world.

Sports could help children discover potential, says Qatari entrepreneur

Playing among kids may soon seem trivial to some, but for a Qatari entrepreneur who has already completed several endurance races and ultra-marathons, allowing children to discover potential through sports is of the utmost importance. He believes that sport can act as an important tool in the development of children and can help them to discover their potential and true happiness.

But despite his busy schedule, al-Misnad also makes time to challenge himself through events like Samla, a locally-grown ultra-marathon that he fondly describes as his ‘tough love’. He enjoys the challenge of running long distances and believes that the key to success is not only the training but also the mental preparation that comes with it.

Al-Misnad believes that sports can be a great source of inspiration for children of all levels. He encourages parents to allow their children to participate in sports and to encourage them to push their limits.

It is really important to show that inclusivity and education matter for all. This year, a local story told, an event at the Royal Family that only a few years worth of these necessities and the beauty of art and music and art produced by intangible thoughts, which we tend to attach ourselves not only to tangible things, but also to intangible thoughts, which expand our progress. I’ve shed this weight from year-to-year both in the race and in my life, and I’ve learned to appreciate the simplicities of life. "Excuse the pun, but I've learned to take things in stride and truly appreciate the simplicities of life. "I believe these lessons can definitely be imparted onto children and is the reason I believe sports can act as an important tool in the development of children and to discover their potential and true happiness."

To support other children and other organisations, al-Misnad said he visited Nepal two years ago where he witnessed and was moved by the situation. He believes that sports can be a powerful tool in helping to bridge the divide between different cultures and that it can be a way for children to learn about each other’s cultures and beliefs.
