QFFD visits Zaatari camp to oversee health programmes

A high-level delegation from Qatar Fund for Development (QFFD) visited the Zaatari camp in Jordan to oversee the situation in the camp and QFFD-funded health programmes.

Through the funding, QFFD aims to facilitate the inclusion of Syrian refugees and reduce pressure on services to host communities and increase the flexibility of health providers.

The delegation was accompanied by representatives from Qatar Charity (QC), Qatar Red Crescent Society (QRCS) and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).

They were briefed on the latest developments regarding health centres, how they work in the camp and the coordination between Qatar and the UNHCR. They discussed the UNHCR and the most important aspects of the work they are doing in Jordan for Syrian refugees.

With the increasing pressure on health systems due to the influx of refugee populations, it has become a priority to support the capacity of healthcare services in host countries. The QFFD-funded programmes provide primary healthcare services and, where possible, secondary and tertiary care, which is a specialised referral from primary and secondary care, to both Syrian refugees and host communities in various forms, including direct support through the provision of equipment and supplies, capacity-building and the strengthening of the health system.

With support from QFFD, Qatar Charity is operating the Comprehensive Qatar Centre at Village number 12 in Zaatari camp. This project aims to contribute to improving the living conditions of the Syrian refugees in Zaatari camp in Jordan. The centre seeks to increase the coverage of vaccination services for children and women of childbearing age within the camp and to provide reproductive health services, including family planning, counselling, and care of pregnant women. Also, Qatar clinics under the supervision of the QFFD have been providing primary healthcare services for one year now and are part of the healthcare system within the camp.

QFFD has supported the Office of UNHCR to provide primary healthcare and referral services to second and tertiary care, which benefitted 34,816 people.

Survey: Russians’ approval for Stalin highest in decades

The majority of respondents in a poll across Russia indicated a positive view towards dictator Joseph Stalin, a poll showed on Sunday.

Approval for Stalin, the leader who held power for 30 years, has been on the rise recently, with the survey indicating a positive sentiment.

Despite the high approval rates, the poll also showed that a minority of respondents had negative views of Stalin, with some saying they had never heard of him or had no opinion.

The poll was conducted among a sample of 1,500 people across all regions of the country, and the results were released on Sunday.

One group was Russian Centre Vladimir Putin in a restoration of Soviet Union, and on to the turbulent liberal reforms of the 1990s.

Comedian set to win presidential election

The West has closely watched the upcoming presidential election, which is set to be a major test of Ukraine’s democracy.

President Volodymyr Zelenskiy, who won a historic election last year, is expected to face a tough challenge from opposition candidate Volodymyr Zelenskiy.

Zelenskiy, a former actor, won the election with 73% of the vote, defeating party leader Petro Poroshenko, who secured 23%.

Poroshenko, a former president, had been a vocal critic of Zelenskiy’s and had accused him of corruption.

The election is set to be held on March 31, with a runoff set for April 21 if no candidate secures a majority.

Meanwhile, the country of 44 million people has been facing a range of challenges, including an economic crisis, political instability, and the ongoing conflict in the east.

For each group “Stalin is not a laughing matter”, “Stalin is not a comedy that you can joke about”, “Stalin is not a joke to be mocked at”, “Stalin is not a joke to be made fun of”, “Stalin is not a joke to be taken lightly”.

There are basically three groups accounting for the high approval rates: Stalin’s supporters, those with nostalgia for the Soviet Union, and a group of people who do not know much about Stalin.

The poll was conducted by Opinion Research Centre, which is a respected polling firm in Russia.

The results of the poll are likely to influence the outcome of the presidential election, which is set to be held on September 25.

Massive cathedral donations defended

TPR

This debate in Rome over donations to Notre-Dame Cathedral needs to be conducted in a calm and open-minded manner, a cultural heritage advisor to the government has said.

"It has to be a debate that is constructive and that is needed, in the case of Notre-Dame there is something that is part of the soul of France," Stephanie corti told headline France-Inter yesterday.

Donations have poured in for the restoration of the 1,500-year-old cathedral, which was badly damaged in a fire earlier this week.

But the government has also faced a backlash, especially from billionaires who have pledged large sums at a time when many smaller donors are giving only a small amount. Some analysts say this is in part due to the country's fiscal crisis.

"I would like to get 1 billion, nobody has to say 'on the cheap,'" French expects.

However, he said people "had been confused" about what they were giving for in the case of Notre-Dame.

"I think it's going to take a lot of patience to make sure that the funds are not rejected," he said. "It's not going to be easy."}

Fierce president Pranab Mukherjee and his Delhi counterpart Arvind Kejriwal have been in a tough fight for the capital since they held a temple in the city of New Delhi to mark the 100th anniversary of the RSS formation. The two leaders have been at loggerheads over a range of issues, from the delimitation of constituencies to the appointment of the chief minister. They have both been accused of not paying enough attention to the issues of the state, and their party, the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP), has emerged victorious in the Delhi Assembly elections.

The latest round of the battle was fought on the issue of the number of seats for each party. The AAP was demanding a 5:4:1 seat-sharing formula, while the Congress was offering a 4:3:1 formula. The Election Commission had to step in and mediate, and a final agreement was reached on a 5:4:1 formula.

In the end, the AAP emerged victorious, winning 43 of the 70 seats in the Delhi Assembly. However, the Congress was not far behind, winning 37 seats. The BJP, which is traditionally strong in Delhi, won just 8 seats.

The victory was a blow to the Congress, which had been in power in Delhi for the past 25 years. The AAP, on the other hand, has been in power for just 4 years. The election results were a clear indication of the popular mandate for the AAP.

Two decades after Columbine, Americans live under the gun

At about 20 minutes after 11 on the morning of April 20, 1999, students walked into Littleton High School gymnasium and opened fire, leaving 13 dead and dozens wounded. The massacre, which in some ways set the stage for the national conversation about gun violence that has persisted to the present day, was a product of a culture in which school shootings were not uncommon. In the decades since, Columbine’s student survivors have continued to advocate for better security and mental health support to prevent tragedies like the one they experienced.

In the years since the shooting, the nation has grappled with the question of how to address gun violence in schools. While some have called for increased security measures, such as metal detectors and armed guards, others have advocated for policies that focus on preventing violence before it happens, such as better mental health support and access to mental health services.

In recent years, school shootings have become a more frequent occurrence, with incidents occurring nearly every week in the United States. While some have argued that increased security measures are necessary to prevent violence, others have been more cautious, noting that such measures may not be sufficient to prevent tragedies from occurring.

In recent years, there have been calls for greater attention to mental health support in schools, with some advocating for policies that would make it easier for students to access mental health services. While some have been more critical of such policies, noting that they may not be sufficient to prevent violence from occurring, others have been more optimistic, noting that such policies may be an important step in preventing future tragedies.

As the nation continues to grapple with the question of how to address gun violence in schools, it is clear that there is no easy solution. For the current study, researchers had 107 older adults, ages 60 to 89, fill out daily surveys for eight consecutive days.
Research questions included whether they felt younger than their actual age, how they felt about their current health, and how they felt about their daily life. Participants were asked to rate how they felt each day on five Likert scale items, ranging from “very different” to “very similar.”

These results suggest that feeling younger than one’s actual age is associated with better mental, physical and cognitive health.

This study supports the idea that feeling children’s. Studies have shown that feeling younger than one’s actual age is associated with better mental, physical and cognitive health.

The researchers found that older adults who felt younger than their actual age had better physical and mental health than those who felt older. However, the study did not examine why some people feel younger than their age and why others do not.

One limitation of the study is that it is not clear how long these effects last. Future studies are needed to explore the long-term effects of feeling younger than one’s age.

The study also has some limitations. For example, it is not clear how the findings apply to other populations. Future studies are needed to examine the effects of feeling younger than one’s age in different contexts.

In conclusion, the study suggests that feeling younger than one’s actual age is associated with better mental, physical and cognitive health. However, more research is needed to understand the mechanisms behind these effects and to determine how they can be promoted.
