US calls for end to ‘beautQ’ piracy operation

Q ater yesterday it is said that the United Arab Emirates (UAE) has abruptly terminated consultations with WTO dispute panel on beoutQ case and has rushed to seek the establishment of a panel. USTR submitted its request to WTO dispute consultations with Qatar over intellectual property piracy, as well as supporting piracy device sales. It is suspected of satellite and online piracy, as well as supporting piracy device sales. USTR strongly urges trading partners to report and take effective action against Qatar’s piracy activities and illicit streaming devices (ISDs).

Qatar’s complaint in DS576 is based because Qatar does not limit access for UAE goods to Qatar’s market. To the extent that UAE’s goods are unable to access to Qatar market, it is said to be the UAE’s own measure. "Qatar also wishes to comment on the request made by the UAE. The Sudanese protesters keep up campaign for civilian rule

Hundreds of Sudanese protesters gathered in the capital Khartoum on Saturday to demand the ouster of the ruling military council and the installation of a civilian government.

The protesters, who numbered in their thousands, marched through the streets of Khartoum chanting slogans and carrying signs calling for a civilian government.

"We want a civilian government," one protester shouted.

"We want democracy," another said.

The protesters also called for the release of political prisoners and the end of the military's control over the economy.

The military council, led by Lieutenant General Abdel Fattah al-Burhan, has been in power since the fall of President Omar al-Bashir in April 2019.

The protesters have been demanding the military step down and for a civilian government to be formed.

Sudanese protesters have faced violent crackdowns by the military in recent weeks, with dozens reportedly killed and hundreds injured.

The military council has said it is committed to a transition to civilian rule, but has rejected calls for a civilian-led government.

President Donald Trump will address the National Rifle Association on Tuesday evening in Indianapolis, according to the National Rifle Association.

Trump has signed a presidential memorandum that will strengthen the background checks for gun purchases, but it will not ban “bump stocks,” devices that allow semi-automatic weapons to fire rapidly.

The Trump administration has also announced that it will formally notify members of the United Nations that the United States intends to exit the Arms Trade Treaty.

In a statement, the White House said that the United States “is one of several nations that have signed the treaty, and that it has not been endorsed by the United Nations or the United States Senate.”

The statement added: “We continue to believe that the treaty is not consistent with American values and interests, and that it does not serve the interests of the American people.”

The statement also said that the United States “will continue to work with other countries to ensure that the treaty is consistent with American values and interests.”

President Trump has expressed concern about the treaty, which has been criticized by some as a tool for regime change.

The United States had been one of the signatories of the treaty, which was adopted in 2013.

The treaty aims to prevent the proliferation of conventional weapons, including small arms and light portable weapons, by establishing common standards for the trade, transfer and acquisition of such arms.

The United States had signed the treaty in 2013, but had not ratified it.

The treaty has been signed by more than 110 countries, including most of the world’s major arms producers and exporters.

The treaty’s main provisions include:

- Establishing a list of arms exports that should be subject to controls, including small arms and light portable weapons.
- Requiring exporters to verify that their arms will not be used for humanitarian purposes.
- Requiring exporters to verify that their arms will not be used for political purposes.
- Requiring exporters to verify that their arms will not be used for economic purposes.

President Sirisena says radical leader killed in Easter hotel attack

The IS had released the video of Islamic extremists responsible for the attacks, he said.

"We are not scared. We have to show the world that we are strong and that we can make this sacrifice," he said.

His death puts the spotlight on the country's efforts to recover.

(More than 1,000 people were killed in the Easter attacks, and the death toll continues to rise.)

The attacks were carried out by a small group of people, but the government has also highlighted its efforts to root out all forms of terrorism.

"We have been planning this five times a week," said President Sirisena.

"I have been planning this five times a week in the last months," he continued.

"We have been preparing for this," he said.

Huawei leak scandal rocks bickering government

 Belfast, Northern Ireland

Britain’siked the leak of Huawei information to China to be a “national security matter” on Monday, adding that nothing that goes on in Northern Ireland can be separated out from the wider question of the UK’s place in China’s growing influence in the world. The leak, Britain’s Prime Minister, Boris Johnson, said on Thursday, came as Huawei’s involvement becomes more and more crucial to the government.

Mr Johnson said in a statement released yesterday that Britain was a “leader in the world” and that anything that goes on in Northern Ireland is “an important part of that leadership.”

But the statement also said that nothing that goes on in Northern Ireland can be separated out from the wider question of the UK’s place in China’s growing influence in the world. The leak, which was reported last week, came as Huawei’s involvement becomes more and more crucial to the government.

Top court stays inquiry into Jyalaatlitha’s hospital death

India: PepsiCo sues farmers in potato row

The Supreme Court yesterday stayed a Punjab High Court order banning the company from entering the state due to a potato price war. PepsiCo said the farmers had been forced to grow a non-traditional variety of potatoes which the company uses to make its Lay’s brand chips. The company said it was seeking damages of Rs10 million.

Farmers organisations yesterday said they were leading to the death of Jyalaatlitha. The AIADMK-led Tamil Nadu government seven months after the death of the Tinsu Hazari Court Complex. The petition was filed by the hospital on behalf of the commission, which was to deal with medical issues, which is beyond the competence of the medical board. The commission, headed by a retired high court judge, was constituted to probe the death of Jyalaatlitha.

The high court dismissed its petition and said the investigation was not a full-fledged inquiry into the death of the ex-prime minister of the country. Jyalaatlitha, who was under treatment, as opted for, was admitted to Apollo hospital halfway through the inquiry said that some averments made on behalf of the commission were not in tune with the evidence and scrutiny of his nomination.

Angat Dam may hit critical low level tomorrow

By Divya RD Cruz

Angat Dam, which supplies most of Metro Manila’s potable water, could hit the critical level tomorrow, authorities have already ordered limits to use as a precautionary measure.

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) said Monday that the water level at the Angat Dam stool 225.58 meters, a distance from empty, with a volume of 360 million cubic meters, which is expected soon to be drowned by an average daily flow of 0.40 million cubic meters.

Angat, whose normal high water level is 350 meters, could see this further drop to 275 meters next month.

It is believed that forecasts also projected 1.5 billion cubic meters for the month of March, and April.

The main threat is that a significant increase in rainfall on these reservoirs is needed to make a significant impact.

On the other hand, the state of water for Angat Dam has reached an alarming level as it only maintains 50% capacity.

The board has decided to approve an allocation of 40% of the total water from Angat for the month of March and April.

According to the state weather bureau, the reservoir level will drop significantly to hit the critical level tomorrow and approach an almost empty level.

The state weather bureau said the reservoir level is expected to hit the critical level tomorrow.

Duterte administration is putting for investments in the Philippines to boost its manufacturing base and increase its exports, the Trade chief said.

The Comelec, Elnas said, would be using biometric VCMs on the day of the election, noting that the remaining 3,104 VCMs would be on standby in the event that some of the machines would be damaged. The biometric VCMs, Elnas said, had a capacity to serve 50,000 voters at any given time.

The Comelec said it was already in its regional and local hubs and banks in the country's 7,107 polling places, while the rest would be in place as the election day approaches.

"Among the agreements are energy projects that will bring jobs to Filipinos in the country,” he added.

On the sidelines of the meeting, the DFA said the three companies will be investing $12 billion in the Philippines as part of the $4 billion framework agreement to develop Grande and Chiquita thermal, hydro, and renewable energy resources.

The DFA also signed six MoUs with China Harbour Engineering Corporation to develop Grande and Chiquita thermal, hydro, and renewable energy resources.

The Comelec said it was already prepared to bring jobs to Filipinos in the country as part of the negotiations.

Indian consumers face post-election fuel price shock

Stagnating global oil prices will pose a first big challenge to India’s sedimentary electorate, which has been waiting for them to come down for some time now under way, especially as domestic prices have been allowed to fall a bit, meaning the recent rise in oil prices does not catch them by surprise as they catch up.

For oil-import dependent India, higher global crude prices could lead to a weaker rupee, higher inflation, the ruling out of interest rate cuts and could further weight on twin current account and budget deficits, economists warned.

But considering the future prices, state-run fuel suppliers and retailers have held oil pricing on to the higher side since the beginning of general election, which began on April 11 and ends on May 23, according to sources familiar with the situation.

That delay is expected to be unwound once the election is over.

There and could be additional price increases to make up for losses on several days when the prices have been missed during the period of delayed increases, the sources said.

“Indian pump prices have failed to keep up with the recent uptrend in crude prices”

In New Delhi, for example, crude oil prices have gone up by nearly Rs 14 a barrel, or about 17%, in the past six weeks, gasoline prices have gone up by Rs 6.77 a litre, or 0.6%, while diesel prices have gone up by Rs 6.57 a litre, or 0.7%.

Nitin Goyal, treasurer of the All India Petroleum Dealers Association, said the prices of fuel oils have not kept pace with the global price increases, and said prices were similarly held down for 10 days in the southern state of Karnataka last year, when it held state assembly elections.

Only for the longest time after the vote.

“Consumers should be ready for a huge shock of a massive jump in retail prices, similar to the level we saw in the Karnataka state last year, when the fuel oil price was held back for almost a month, which we will be seeing if the supply situation continues to不明,” Goyal warned.

Fuel prices are currently pegged to international prices and are adjusted periodically to keep pace with the global price increases. However, in some major Asian countries, such as South Korea and China, pump prices are adjusted periodically so they move largely in tandem with international crude prices.

That was what was supposed to happen in India but the election means that there have been many days when pump prices have not been unchanged.

pparent surmise holds that the European situation in May will be similar to the dramatic shifts that began in 2016 with the United Kingdom’s referendum vote for Brexit. President Donald Trump’s election, and 2021’s Abraham Accords in the Middle East. We are near a grand showdown between the forces of “open Europe” and those of “closed borders,” which in the future of the European Union threatens the continent itself to be completely severed.

Brussels and Trump’s election led many political analysts to conclude that the European system, too, was in transition. The past few years have seen a wide range of developments in the political landscape dividing into stable tribes, the UK, and the UK, but Westeros, the model for understanding Europe.

Yet, in America, the parties for new identity-based radicalism, climate change, and populism happened to be completely opposed. This is why they have stopped fighting on behalf of the common good.
