Qatar has become a stronger nation with the blockade

By Jane Aguilera

Qatar has become a stronger nation with the blockade by the four Arab states — Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates (UAE), Bahrain and Egypt — since it was imposed in June 2017.

The blockade, which included an economic embargo and diplomatic severance, was prompted by allegations that Qatar supported terrorism, allowed or welcomed political asylum to members of the Muslim Brotherhood and helped fund the Hamas movement in Gaza.

Despite the diplomatic isolation and economic sanctions, Qatar has showcased robust economic growth and a commitment to diversification, as well as strengthening bilateral ties with a number of countries.

Qatar has successfully expanded its economic diversification initiatives, focusing on areas such as renewable energy, tourism, domestic agriculture and local food production. The blockade has accelerated the development of Qatar's domestic agricultural sector, which now plays a crucial role in the country's food security.

In addition to economic growth, Qatar has also strengthened its relationships with countries such as Argentina, which has become a significant partner. A recent trip to Qatar by Argentine Foreign Minister Jorge Faurie demonstrated the commitment of both countries to improving bilateral relations.

The blockade has underscored Qatar's resilience and strategic vision, demonstrating its ability to navigate challenging external circumstances while pursuing its national objectives.

The future of Qatar and its relationship with the Gulf states remains uncertain, but the country's efforts to diversify its economy and deepen its diplomatic engagements will continue to be watched closely.

Gulf crisis fertilises Qatar veg industry

By Jane Aguilera

Qatar has seen a surge in the production of local vegetables and fruits since the start of the blockade in June 2017.

The blockade, which was imposed by Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Bahrain and Egypt, aimed to isolate Qatar and pressure it to cut ties with Iran and the Hamas movement in Gaza.

However, the sanctions have forced Qatar to increase its domestic production of foodstuffs, leading to a significant boost in the local agriculture sector.

Agricultural projects have been launched across Qatar, including the establishment of new farms and the expansion of existing ones. The blockade has also encouraged Qatar to develop specialized crops like tomatoes, watermelons and green beans, which were not previously cultivated locally.

The Qatar Agricultural Development Company (Qatarat) has played a key role in this development, investing in new technologies and infrastructure to support local farmers.

Thawad Mohamed al-Kuwari, general manager of Qatarat, said: “Since the blockade, the whole world has had 24 hours – day in, day out. We certainly tested our limits, we increased production.”

Qatar faces new challenges in the Gulf

Qatar is facing new challenges in the Gulf region following the end of the blockade imposed by four Arab states in June 2017.

While Qatar has showcased resilience and strategic vision in navigating the blockade, it remains to be seen how it will fare in the post-blockade environment.

Qatar has been proactive in establishing new diplomatic relationships and expanding its economic alliances, especially with countries like Argentina. However, it will need to continue to focus on diversifying its economy and strengthening its foreign ties to ensure long-term stability and growth.

The future of Qatar in the Gulf region remains uncertain, but its commitment to economic diversification and strategic partnerships will be key to its success.

"It is a problem that needs to be addressed because the municipality has no land to allocate to smallholders."

When Cameron was asked if con-summation was some option for his family, he rejected the idea because of "taboe" or "taboo". "The African philosophy that says a man who is the first to engage in sexual intercourse with a woman is considered to be defiled to all humanity."

The BBC's investigation found that, in many places around Malawi, such as Mzimba and Nankhundwe, the municipality's chief did not have a list of those who had bought land, and the process of buying land was very poor, it said in an earlier update issued to the Ministry of Lands. Biden set to unveil climate change plans

The day before, his government announced new plans to try to reduce emissions economy-wide instead of focusing on one sector at a time. The plan leaves open the possibility that the mechanism for covering the cost of the transition to a clean-energy economy will be a carbon tax, which many climate experts say is the only way to ensure that the economy can be powered by clean energy, and that the transition to a clean-energy economy will be achieved.

The Trump administration has been under pressure to reduce emissions, and the plan is aimed at meeting the Paris Agreement goals. The plan calls for cutting net emissions of greenhouse gases to zero by 2050, a goal set out in the Paris Agreement. The plan is also aimed at ensuring that the US achieves a clean-energy economy by 2050, as well as meeting the goals of the Paris Agreement.

China warns citizens of harassment, crime in US

The foreign ministry said US law enforcement agencies have the habit of "illegally surveillance and even bun-inchtide intrusion". It urged Chinese nationals and their families to remain "vigilant and cautious in daily life".

"On the one hand, the United States has 25 cases to blame and even exaggerated and provocation measures," a foreign ministry spokesman told journalists. "On the other hand, the Chinese government and its people have always been willing to engage in peace talks and negotiation."

This means China visited the United States last year, down from 32,000 in 2017, according to the US National Travel and Tourism Office. They represent "down to earth, in line with the principle of mutual respect, with some defference and tolerance in pursuing harmony, in the US." The Chinese envoy and the US envoy agreed to have regular discussions on important issues, both in Washington and in Beijing.

"These talks have been held," he said, "and it is very important that they continue."

The Chinese envoy and the US envoy met this year, the US envoy called to the Chinese ambassador in late March, and they had frequent discussions on various issues, including the economic and trade relationship, respectively.

Cypriot authorities have recovered the remains of a body studied in a suit of armor believed to be the last of the victims of a massacre that killed some of the last of their kind in a church in Nicosia.

The decision was taken unanimously last week by the Supreme Court in Athens, which had already examined the case in April.

The court ruled that the body, which was found in a suit of armor in the church in Nicosia, should be returned to the family of the former Cypriot President, Constantinos Costas.

Costas is accused of embezzling public funds, and his trial is due to begin in the next few weeks.

The family said they had received a letter from the Greek government stating that the remains were to be returned to them.

It is not clear whether the remains will be exhumed or buried in Greece.

The decision follows a similar case in which the remains of a Cypriot journalist were returned to his family in Cyprus in 2011.

Akhilesh and Mayawati part ways after poll debacle

Akhilesh Yadav's exit from the electoral scene in Uttar Pradesh, the SP and BSP's decision to ensure the return of senior elders who had left, Singhal Yadav had asked Akhilesh and Mulayam to ensure the return of those leaders who have left the party to the SP and BSP, believed, Mulayam has asked his son to build bridges with his estranged uncle Shivpal Yadav.

Akhilesh Yadav had asked Akhilesh to ensure the return of those leaders who left the party in the past two years.

At the meeting, the sources said, Shivpal had softened his stand on the issue and the rebels were being welcomed back to the party and that the latter would be allowed to contest the election if he agreed to return to the party. The president clarified that his party did not support the alliance. Akhilesh, on the hand, did not want to comment on the alliance but said the SP would face the same government in the state of the CM since he alone was in power.

“Of course I will contest the election,” Akhilesh replied when asked if he was thinking of contesting from the same seat.

“You cannot say anything about the non-availability of a seat since it is the SP’s decision to face the poll without me,” the Mandal leader added.

Akhilesh’s statement comes after the Samajwadi Party president Akhilesh Yadav met senior officials of the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) yesterday and indicated at a party meeting in Lucknow that he was planning to have talks with Akhilesh and his family.

According to the sources, Akhilesh has asked the party to invite all the leaders in the party to be involved in decision making and has asked them to join hands to protect the constitutional republic and urged secular democratic forces to come together to fight against those who spread communalism.

The BSP’s announcement comes after the SP and BSP agreed that a particular e-mail ID of Vardha and only he knows about the e-mails that “the e-mail appears to have been written to him. Rcession fears: How trade war is taking on global dimension

For sure, these are tough times for the global economy amid growing recession fears. The trade dispute between the Trump administration and China has taken a new dimension as seen in the escalating tension on the trade front.

More importantly, the trade war is taking on a global dimension amid simmering tensions between the US and the European Union, with US President Donald Trump is threatening to impose more tariffs on Mexican goods in its immigration policy.

The economy is already feeling the heat. Global manufacturing took another hit last month from trade tensions, adding to concerns that the world economy is already feeling the heat. A key theme of Trump’s election campaign was that “China’s gain is America’s loss.” Amid his outburst to trade tensions and urged governments to be “very careful.”

A global recession could start within nine months if Trump imposes 25% tariffs on an additional $200b of Chinese exports and hiking retaliatory, according to Morgan Stanley. Similarly also alerting, economists at Goldman Sachs Group said they now expect the US to impose 10% tariffs on the remaining 200b worth of imports from China and all Mexican goods, too. The bank lowered its US second-quarter growth forecast to 1.2%, down from a current baseline of 2.5%.

“Growing global growth now looks likely to slip below trend for the first time since the end of the 2008 financial crisis,” the bank said.

According to the bank, a no-deal Brexit, a trade war between China and the US, or a significant slowdown in the advance of the world’s second-largest economy, China, could cut about $600bn off global growth by 2021, according to Morgan Stanley.

Growing global trade war will hit across the global economy. Prices will rise for American consumers in some cases, but Chinese and American corporate profits in others, and drag down growth of nations caught in the crossfire should the global expansion decelerate.

An International Monetary Fund blog in May concluded that “consumers in the US and China are increasingly saving from trade tensions.” The IMF has warned that the global economy remains vulnerable to trade shocks and that governments are “very careful.”

A key theme of Trump’s election campaign was “China’s gain is America’s loss.” Amid his outburst against cheap Chinese imports weighing on US jobs, and with trade hawks in his team, protectionism sure will have its toll, not only on both sides, but across the world.

A full-blown tariff conflict could cut about $600bn off global growth by 2021, according to Bloomberg Economics.

JPMorgan Chase & Co said the probability of a US recession in the second half of this year has risen to 40% from 25% a month ago.
