The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Italy Enzo Moavero Milanesi has received a written message from HE the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs Sheikh Mohamed bin Abdulrahman al-Thani, pertaining to bilateral relations and ways to develop them. The message was handed over by Qatar's ambassador to Italy, Abdulaziz bin Ahmed al-Malki, when Italy's Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs, Emanuela Del Re, met him yesterday.

The ceremony screened the said Population Policy during the period of 2017–2022, leading to gradual reform of the institutions of the population and the re-distribution of urban centres away from Greater Doha, the provision of a clean urban environment and the sustainability of natural resources.

Permanent Population Committee promotes awareness about key issues

At-thawab reviewed the role of the committee in following up the national efforts aimed at controlling the rate of population growth and reducing the number of population within the limits of the country. He said that the committee is formed to review the provisions of the 1998 Population Policy Document in terms of its main problems and its objectives and the number of people who live in the country.

The basic goal of Qatar’s population policy is “achieving balance between population growth and sustainable development requirements, so as to ensure a decent life for the inhabitants of Qatar, enhance their children, broaden their opportunities and raise their participation in the national economy.”

This policy seeks to achieve several goals in its six axes, including controlling population growth rates during the period of 2017–2022, heading to gradual reform of the institutions of the population, developing the population planning and health project, and the development of urban centres away from Greater Doha, the provision of a clean urban environment and the sustainability of natural resources. It also seeks to improve the quality of education and training, expand opportunities for tourism participation in society and in public life, improve the public health and the quality of life, achieve a balance between population growth and geographical distribution of the population. The policy also seeks to support the social participation of women, especially in reducing their participation in the labour force while maintaining family cohesion and a healthy environment for children. -QNA

Palestinians clash with police in Lebanon crackdown on unlicensed foreign workers

By Heidih El-Tobel, AFP

A couple of hundred of Palestinian refugees yesterday demonstrated outside the Lebanese interior ministry in downtown Beirut, blocking the entrance to the ministry building and preventing cars from entering. The demonstration was part of a nationwide strike called by the Palestinian General Union of Syria, which represents Palestinian refugees in Lebanon. The strike was called to protest against a new law passed by the Lebanese government last week that increased the number of Palestinian refugees allowed to work in Lebanon from 1,000 to 5,000. The protesters were demanding the resignation of the Lebanese prime minister, Hassan Diab, and the withdrawal of the new law. The Lebanese government has been under pressure to address the needs of Palestinian refugees, who make up a significant portion of the population in Lebanon. The demonstration was one of many that have taken place in recent years as Palestinian refugees in Lebanon continue to face challenges in securing work permits and basic rights. The situation has been further complicated by the ongoing Syrian conflict, which has forced hundreds of thousands of Palestinian refugees to seek refuge in Lebanon. The demonstration was peaceful, with protesters holding signs and chanting slogans. The Lebanese police were present but did not intervene, allowing the protesters to continue their demonstration for several hours. The protest is part of a larger movement among Palestinian refugees in Lebanon to demand better rights and living conditions.
The first patient to be diagnosed with Ebola in the eastern area of Congo has died, the country's health ministry said.

The woman, a 16-year-old girl, died Thursday night at the capital of Goma after suffering from high fever and experiencing difficulty breathing, the ministry said in a statement.

The girl had been transferred to Goma from Makabola, a town in the North Kivu province, where she was suspected of having the virus.

The outbreak in the Democratic Republic of Congo has now killed 20 people, with 24 still being treated for the disease.

Twenty cases have been confirmed in North Kivu province, 12 of which are in the city of Goma, while four are in the South Kivu province and four in the Ituri province, the ministry said.

The latest case has prompted new calls for increased vigilance and protection against the virus.

A state of emergency has been declared in the affected areas, and officials have urged people to avoid contact with those showing symptoms of the disease.

The outbreak is also spreading to other countries in the region, with cases reported in Uganda, Rwanda, and South Sudan.

The World Health Organization has called for increased efforts to contain the outbreak, and has warned that it could become a global health crisis if not controlled.

The ministry said it had deployed a team of experts to the area to investigate the case and prevent further spread.

Goma, DRC

A man and a woman were killed in a plane crash in the Democratic Republic of Congo on Thursday, according to local media.

The aircraft, a small passenger plane, crashed in a sugar cane field near the city of South Kivu, killing both passengers aboard.

The plane, which was carrying two people, was on its way to Goma, the capital of the region.

No immediate cause of the accident has been given.

The death toll brings the number of civilian plane crashes in the Democratic Republic of Congo to at least five in recent years.

The country has one of the worst record of aviation accidents in Africa, with many flights operating in remote and uncharted areas.

The government has promised to investigate the cause of the accident and take steps to improve safety standards.

Trump unveils immigration and border security bill

With US lawmakers' August recess looming, the official did not give a timeframe for introducing the bill to Congress, but did say it was laying out the possible areas of cooperation between Republicans and Democrats. The administration has previously called for a border wall and increased border agents.

"We'll see what leader McConnell talks about and what the leaders of the House want to do if they want to get it to a vote. But at least the Democrats will know requesting what the Republicans unified position is," the official said.

The bill has 10 Republican House co-sponsors, he said. When the House's White House-funded immigration reform bill died in 2013, the last Republican immigration reform bill that passed the House.

"The Chamber is focused on the American Dream," Trump said at a press conference. "We don't want to go down that road."

Denpasar, Indonesia

A man said he was wounded by debris that rained down from the sky when an earthquake measuring 6.2 magnitude struck about 100 kilometers southwest of the city of Banyuwangi in East Java, Indonesia, on Sunday that killed at least two people and damaged buildings.

The most devastating tremor in the past 12 years hit South Sulawesi on September 28, 2018, killing 4,300 people and injuring 10,500.

Earthquakes, sometimes causing tsunamis, occur in the Ring of Fire, a seismically active belt along the Pacific Ocean in the Pacific Ocean, which includes Indonesia.

The earthquake struck the shallow sea floor off the island of Denpasar, which is located on the southern side of Bali, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

Last January, a quake measuring 7.0 magnitude hit the city of Banyuwangi in East Java, killing 22 people and damaging buildings.

There were no reports of casualties on Bali, and the airport was operating normally.

The transport ministry said "everything has gone back to normal," but the transport ministry did not comment on the status of flights at the airport.

On Twitter, the 750-tonne vessel had 18 Russians on board, and it was carrying crew and passengers from the United States and Canada.

Mornyang was flying from Los Angeles to Singapore when the quake occurred, according to state news agency Bernama.

The joint drills have been called "national interest," because it is in the national interest to have peace and stability in the area.

They were getting back to normal.

At the time of the quake, the transport ministry said it was "not a legal document," and "should be treated with caution and care.

Washington's "very prescriptive" joint military exercises were the most important test of the new administration's approach to Asia, according to officials who attended the exercises.

"We anticipate that US forces and the AU will continue to work together to ensure our bilateral co-operation on our shared security challenges.

This year, the United States and Australia will conduct a joint military exercise in the Philippines, the first since 2017.

"I'm optimistic about the plan," Mornyang said. "We have been working on this for a long time, and we are confident that it will work.

The joint exercises will focus on sea-launched cruise missiles, and are expected to include live-fire drills.

A smaller-scale version of the joint drills was conducted in July, and was described as a "transformational" moment in the military relationship between the two countries.

The exercises were held in the Philippine capital, Manila, and were attended by officials from the United States and Australia.

Ardern has been called a "new Meryl Streep," and has been hailed as a "new kind of leader."

A senior French cabinet minister resigned on Monday, the latest in a string of departures in President Emmanuel Macron’s administration, with a view to reshuffling on Wednesday, after a report into his government’s handling of a fire that devastated the cathedral in Paris.

The website alleged the events were the result of a mass evacuation plan, “with a view to shuttering the entire world”.

Minister Franck Riester as the reconstruction minister for securing it will last until the work begins.

It might be replaced by a steeple, or a statue, or a memorial caretaker’s house, but it would not be the cathedral itself, Mr. Macron said. “When the reconstruction is finished for Notre-Dame, we will have a cathedral that is worthy of its place in our history,” he said.

The French MP approved law on reconstruction of Notre-Dame Paris

French MPs have approved a law on the reconstruction of Notre-Dame, whose repair bill is estimated at €12 billion, that sets a five-year deadline for the work to be completed.

The ceiling was proposed by a group of MPs and senators, following a call by Macron to end the debate on the future of the cathedral.

This is the first reaction to the rebuilding plan that has been met with criticism by some of Macron’s political opponents.

The bill will now go to the Senate for approval, after which it will need the signature of the president and the parliament to become law.

The website also alleged the events were a fire started by neo-Nazis who had previously lived abroad, as well as a death threat.

Salvini takes steps to clear out ‘illegal’ Roma settlements

The Italian interior minister says threats to him led to neo-nazi arms haul

Italian Interior Minister Matteo Salvini said on Wednesday that threats to him led to neo-nazis being arrested in Italy.

Salvini ordered the country’s regional governments to take steps to clear out the communities of Roma, Sinti and Travellers within a month.

The minister said that the communities were a threat to national security and that they should be moved to more secure areas.

Some 25,000 Roma, Sinti and Traveller families live in formal settlements in the country, according to the UNHCR.

Threats against the Roma and Sinti have increased since Salvini, who印花了 violent attacks on the police during a visit to Rome last year, was seen as too ambitious.

And he created an even greater stir by suggesting the toppled monument could be replaced by a statue of Napoleon.

The Sinti are traditionally from western and central Europe, while Roma have their origins in the Balkans.

The community is estimated to have origins in the Norman period, with the arrival of the Moors.

Government rules out pullout from UNHRC

The Philippines will not withdraw from the United Nations Human Rights Council (UNHRC) or sever ties with the body, said presidential spokesman Salvador Panelo on February 12, after the approval of the resolution calling for the Philippines to be suspended from the council.

“After careful study, the government has decided not to pull out of the UNHRC,” Panelo said in a statement.

The government, which was considering a pullout, decided against it due to the “tremendous legal cost and problems” that would arise from such a move, said Panelo.

The Philippines is one of the countries under the UNHRC’s “universal periodic review” and is due to be reviewed by the council in 2020.

President Rodrigo Duterte earlier said he would opt for the government to pull out of the council if the resolution was approved.

However, Panelo said the government decided to continue its participation in the council “to defend the position and principles of the Philippines.”

Panelo said the Philippines would continue to support the rights of human beings “as prescribed by the charter” of the council.

The Philippines was among the countries that had been targeted by the council critics for alleged human rights violations.

In May 2018, the council had approved a resolution calling for the Philippines to be suspended from the council for two years.

The Philippines had previously been criticized by the council for alleged rights violations in the war on drugs and the crackdown on illegal drugs.

In a statement, the Department of Foreign Affairs said “the Philippines is not withdrawing from the UNHRC as we commit to strengthening our human rights institutions.”

Panelo assured the country that the government would continue to defend the country’s position in the council.

Aids deaths down a third since 2010, says UN report

HIV-related deaths last year fell to around 770,000 – some 33% lower than the 1.2mn estimated in 2017, a new UN report showed yesterday, but warned that global efforts to eradicate the disease were stalling as funding dries up.

An estimated 38m people were living with HIV – and a record 23.2mn of those have access to some antiretroviral therapy (ART), UNAIDS said in its annual report.

Highlighting the enormous progress made since the height of the AIDS pandemic in the 1990s, the report showed that the number people dying from the disease fell from 800,000 in 2017 to 770,000 last year. The figure was down by more than a third from 2010, when there were 1.2mn Aids-related deaths.

But it also exposed weaknesses in the world’s fight against Aids.

While Aids-related deaths in Africa, the continent most affected by the epidemic, have plummeted this decade, Eastern Europe has seen the death toll rise 9% and the Middle East and North Africa 4%.

Year-on-year, those same regions saw a 29% and 10% rise in new infections respectively.

“We urgently need increased political leadership to end Aids,” said Gunilla Carlsson, UNAIDS executive director.

“The global response to Aids is robust if we focus on people not diseases and take a human rights-based approach to reaching people most affected by HIV.”

Decades of research have yet to yield a cure or vaccine for the HIV virus, which has infected almost 88mn people and killed more than 35mn since 1981.

The UN said that more than half of new HIV infections globally come from “key populations” – intravenous drug users, gay men, transgender people, sex workers and prisoners.

Despite this, the report said that under 10% of these at-risk populations were reached by HIV prevention services in more than half of countries.

Peter Ghys, UNAIDS strategic information director, said that the 10% reduction in new infections since 2010 was way below the global aim of a 90% fall by next year.

“Incident reductions are just too slow to reach the target that has been set out,” he told journalists.

Another vulnerable group is children, with more than 360,000 new HIV infections among young people estimated last year.

That is 41% lower than in 2010, but far off the mark for the UN’s 2020 goal of at least 20,000 new infections worldwide each year by 2020.

There remains a pronounced disparity in new infection rates among young men and women, with young women being targeted by sex merchants.

The report also warned that a lack of political will coupled with decreasing finance risked undermining the progress made so far.

Last year $19bn was made available for Aids responses, more than 3% short of the estimated $21bn needed by 2020.

Ghys said the funding drop was a result of “small reductions by different donor countries”.

Digital inclusion: driving equal access for all

The study also suggests that vaping may make it easier for adults who smoke cigarettes to quit. This is because, compared with non-vapers, vapers were less likely to relapse, “said Ramchandar Gomajee, lead author of the study.

Moreover, vapers were more likely to cut down their cigarette use before attempting to quit, and those who cut down when using their electronic cigarette, for example, reported a higher likelihood of long-term cessation with the help of the device. Gomajee and colleagues followed 105 adult former smokers who were using their electronic cigarette, for example, for at least six months.

Kevin Tan, head of Tobacco Prevention and Control at the World Health Organization, noted, “We want to bring the benefits of progressive policies to as many smokers who can benefit from them. That could be the key to provide a seamless platform to protect citizens when crafting and implementing policies. To find the benefits of progressive policies, we have identified this very important issue.

We have demonstrated that such innovative policies can lead to a significant reduction in the prevalence of tobacco use, and this will have an impact on social and environmental sustainability strategies, which include healthy and harmonious ecosystem. It has changed the way that people use tobacco products and the impact of tobacco on the environment. It is a step forward towards sustainable development.

By the end of follow-up, however, 157 former smokers who were using their electronic cigarette were more likely to achieve long-term cessation with the help of the device, compared with 90% of non-vapers. This suggests that vaping may be an effective strategy for smoking cessation.

In summary, the study also wasn’t designed to test the effectiveness of vaping as a smoking cessation strategy, but rather to explore the potential mechanisms underlying the observed association. Further research is needed to confirm these findings and to determine whether vaping can be an effective tool for smoking cessation.

The study was funded by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, the National Cancer Institute, and the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases. The findings of this research are based on a sample of 2,000 adult former smokers who were using their electronic cigarette for at least six months.
