British warship sets sail for escort mission in Gulf

British warship HMS Diamond set sail for the Gulf yesterday to join a US-led maritime protection commercial shipping vessels in the region amid heightened political tension between the West and Iran.

Britain has joined the United States in the Gulf to protect merchant vessels, the ship's commanding officer said.

"We are not here to contribute to upholding freedom of navigation and maintaining international shipping, which the deployment is operations aimed to do," the defense secretary said.

The deployment was first announced last month and will see the first sailors from an another British, the HMS Diamond, join the US-led maritime protection effort.

British official had earlier stressed that there was no change to London's position on Iran and warned against joining the US-led coalition.

It is rigid to the freedom for all international shipping to trade with Iran, according to the international law, which the UK understands," British Defence Secretary Ben Wallace told the House of Commons. "The death of Soleimani is a regrettable and unjustified act of aggression, but it does not change our view that the UK's policy towards Iran should remain as it is.

Together, the Gulf states can secure the peace of region," he said.

On Thursday, Iran's Defence Minister Amir Hatami said the formation of the US-led coalition was "nonsensical and has only led to an increase in military confrontations and consequences" for the region.

"The death of Soleimani is one of the most regrettable events in recent history," Hatami said. "It has led to a significant increase in military confrontations and consequences for the region."

"The United States has no right to interfere in the region's affairs," he added.

The deployment comes amid concerns over the potential for military tensions to escalate in the Gulf, following the January 3 US strike that killed Iranian general Qassem Soleimani in Iraq.

Iran has vowed to avenge Soleimani's death, raising fears of a broader conflict in the region.

The US led coalition in the Gulf includes ships from the United States, United Kingdom, Canada, and Japan.

The UK's participation in the coalition, which began on January 6, came after months of diplomatic efforts to build a international coalition to confront Iran.

The UK's decision to join the coalition was seen as a significant victory for the US-led coalition, which had long called for an international response to Iran's military activities.

The deployment of HMS Diamond, along with other UK warships, is seen as a key part of the coalition's efforts to deter Iran from carrying out any further attacks in the region.

The UK's participation in the coalition also comes after months of tensions between the UK and Iran, following the killing of Soleimani.

The UK government has faced criticism for its handling of the situation, with some accusing it of being too soft on Iran.

The deployment of HMS Diamond is part of a broader international effort to secure the region, following the January 3 US strike that killed Iranian general Qassem Soleimani in Iraq.

The US led coalition in the Gulf includes ships from the United States, United Kingdom, Canada, and Japan.

The UK's participation in the coalition, which began on January 6, came after months of diplomatic efforts to build a international coalition to confront Iran.

The deployment of HMS Diamond, along with other UK warships, is seen as a key part of the coalition's efforts to deter Iran from carrying out any further attacks in the region.

The UK's participation in the coalition also comes after months of tensions between the UK and Iran, following the killing of Soleimani.

The deployment of HMS Diamond is part of a broader international effort to secure the region, following the January 3 US strike that killed Iranian general Qassem Soleimani in Iraq.

The US led coalition in the Gulf includes ships from the United States, United Kingdom, Canada, and Japan.

The UK's participation in the coalition, which began on January 6, came after months of diplomatic efforts to build a international coalition to confront Iran.

The deployment of HMS Diamond, along with other UK warships, is seen as a key part of the coalition's efforts to deter Iran from carrying out any further attacks in the region.

The UK's participation in the coalition also comes after months of tensions between the UK and Iran, following the killing of Soleimani.

The deployment of HMS Diamond is part of a broader international effort to secure the region, following the January 3 US strike that killed Iranian general Qassem Soleimani in Iraq.
CMU-Q professor compiles research into Turkish natural language processing

A professor at Canada-McGill University in Qatar, an expert in computer science, has compiled a book that provides an overview of research into Turkish natural language processing. The book is the first such publication in the region and is valuable for researchers and students who want to understand the challenges of processing Turkish data.

Abdulkadir of the Interlanguage, a professor at Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia, co-authored the book with his colleague, Dr. Hossam Hamed, a researcher at the Interdisciplinary Center for Artificial Intelligence in Qatar. Abdulkadir said he was pleased to see the book published, as it will provide a valuable resource for those interested in Turkish natural language processing.

GU-Q students explore work world for international experience

A group of students from the GU-Q campus in Qatar are currently spending their summer break exploring different aspects of the work world. The students have been working in various fields, including law, business, and technology.

The project aims to create an international research network that will help students gain experience in different fields and prepare them for future careers. The students have been working on their projects, which cover topics such as artificial intelligence, cybersecurity, and renewable energy.

Culture ministry marks International Youth Day

The Ministry of Culture and Sports has organized a series of events to mark the International Youth Day, which is celebrated annually on August 12.

The main event was the International Youth Day Conference, held at the Qatar National Library. The conference featured keynote speeches from various experts, including students and young professionals.

The conference aimed to discuss the importance of youth in shaping the future of Qatar. The keynote speakers highlighted the role of youth in promoting social and economic development, as well as the importance of education and skills training.

Another highlight of the event was the Youth Forum, where young people had the opportunity to share their ideas and concerns. The forum was moderated by a panel of experts, who provided feedback and guidance.

The event was organized by the Ministry of Culture and Sports in collaboration with the Youth Council and the Qatar National Library.
South Sudan activists ramp up pressure for unifi cation

T he head of South Sudan’s separativist movement said he was ready to take part in Syr-eyan border talks after clashes with pro-governing forces killed dozens in second-city Aden.

T he Separatists’ Supreme Council said in a state-radio broadcast that it had decided to join the talks af-es after bloodshed in Aden, the epicenter of the conflict.

The ICRC said in a tweet.

The facility stored short-

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.

Houthis who control vast

A police source said the fi re was prob-

able caused by negligence and stored

that six US offi  cials arrived in the
capital Sanaa.
President Cyril Ramaphosa became the first African leader to receive a monoclonal antibody called REGN-EB3, which has been found to be effective in treating Ebola.

The antibody, which is produced by a US biotechnology company, is being used to treat critically ill patients who have been diagnosed with the disease.

The antibody has been found to be effective in treating Ebola in a recent clinical trial and is now being used to treat patients in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), where the disease is currently spreading rapidly.

Ramaphosa received the antibody at the National Institute for Communicable Diseases in Johannesburg, where he had travelled to attend the opening of the 50th session of the World Health Assembly.

The antibody works by blocking the virus from entering the body, and it is hoped that it will help to speed up the recovery of patients who are suffering from the disease.

The antibody is being administered to a small group of patients in South Africa, and it is hoped that it will be effective in treating those who are diagnosed with the disease in the future.

Ramaphosa said that the antibody is a significant step in the fight against Ebola and that it is important that South Africa is involved in the efforts to combat the disease.

The antibody is being produced by a US biotechnology company, and it is hoped that it will be available for use in South Africa in the near future.

It was also announced that a team of experts from the South African National Institute for Communicable Diseases will be sent to the DRC to help with the fight against Ebola.
"Serious" problems at Epstein jail: Barr

WASHINGTON

The administration of US Attorney General William Barr has announced a new, major investigation into whether federal prison officials in the New York city borough of Manhattan showed negligence or other wrongdoings in the handling of financier Jeffrey Epstein’s death.

The decision Thursday to set up the new investigation has driven home that the federal government’s criminal prosecution of Epstein, a flamboyant business mogul who was accused of exploiting hundreds of young girls, has ended his criminal prosecution, there will be no further investigation, and there will be no charges brought.

The administration’s step was a reaction to a Wall Street Journal report last month about Epstein’s death in his cell on Saturday while he was on suicide watch.

The administration has struggled with Epstein’s death, which has raised questions by pre-trial attorneys attempting to sue and from Democrats in Congress who said they would audit it.

This administration supervise- ing Epstein’s criminal trial, the late- stage inmate’s legal team and Epstein’s families, is now under scrutiny.

Barr said in a statement that it was "the sad and disturbing news that he died while in our care," adding that the federal government’s criminal prosecution of Epstein, a flamboyant business mogul who was accused of exploiting hundreds of young girls, has ended his criminal prosecution, there will be no further investigation, and there will be no charges brought.

"I am disappointed in the handling of this tragic situation, and the investigation will continue to determine why this happened," Barr said in a statement Thursday.

Barr’s comments came as the state’s office of the medical examiner, which determines the cause and manner of death, was trying to determine whether Epstein died of suicide or homicide.

Epstein, who was found dead in his cell on Saturday while he was on suicide watch, had been taken off suicide watch and was moved to a cell that was only a few feet away from a wing where other inmates were housed.

Barr said that the investigation would be conducted by the department’s inspector general and that it would be completed within a few weeks.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.

The investigation will be conducted by the department’s inspector general and will be completed within a few weeks, according to the department.

"We are committed to ensuring that our correctional facilities are safe and secure, and that the rights of inmates are protected," Barr said.

The investigation follows an apparent attempt to suicide at Epstein’s cell on Saturday, according to the department.
Thousands flee homes in flood-hit Myanmar, toll 59

Workers repair a portion of a damaged road as floodwaters submerged areas of Ye township in Mon state.

Residents use improvised raft as floodwaters submerged areas of township in Mon state.

Thailand celebrates Queen’s birthday.

Residents scour the forest area near the resort to locate missing 15-year-old Franco-Irish teenager Nora Quoirin.

Nora Anne Quoirin, 15 and with learning disabilities, was donated by an anonymous Belfast-based business, according to a statement.

An estimated 100 African elephants are killed each day by poachers seeking ivory, meat and body parts, leaving only 40,000 remaining, environmentalists estimate.

Singapore to ban domestic elephant ivory trade.

The international trade in ivory has been banned since 1989 under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES), an international treaty signed by most countries.

Vice President Henry Van Thio of the Sangum Fung township village on Sunday and spoke of the need for continued search operations.

Australia basted in Bali over rampage.

Australians are being urged to return home over the weekend via Bali if they can, amid reports that at least 14 Australians were killed in the city over the weekend.

Sri Lankan residents search on the beach for a dead body in Kelaniya yesterday.

Another resident said that they thought they were dead, “she said.

A surge in poaching across Africa.

The international trade in ivory has been banned since 1989 under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES), an international treaty signed by most countries.

The search for victims continued through the day as the toll rose to 59, the government said yesterday.

Nora was reported to be with friends in the forest area near the resort, Playing recordings of her name.

Two medicine men, joined the search yesterday. “She is here now, so we will stay here tonight to see if we can find her,” said one.

Residents use improvised raft as floodwaters submerged areas of Ye township in Mon state.

Two medicine men joined the search yesterday. "She is here now, so we will stay here tonight to see if we can find her," said one.

Residents use improvised raft as floodwaters submerged areas of Ye township in Mon state.

Locals, European police join search for missing Irish girl in Malaysia.

Singapore announced today a ban on the domestic trade in elephant ivory and ivory products, for the purpose of sale and processing.

Residents use improvised raft as floodwaters submerged areas of Ye township in Mon state.

The residents were pulling bodies and rescue workers who had been searching were brought to the city of Dalat. They have also readied helicopters, boats and helicopters.

The 15-year-old girl (Nora) is being treated in a hospital.

Families realised they had to escape the floodwaters.

Another resident said this thought they were dead.

A surge in poaching across Africa.

A surge in poaching across Africa.

A surge in poaching across Africa.
Luxury brands apologise over China T-shirt blunders

Cathay Pacific warns staff over ‘illegal protests’

Hong Kong — Cathay Pacific has warned employees to act appropriately on social media after a public relations scandal emerged when the airline’s website suggested a Hong Kong protestor was guilty of “terrorism”.

Some in Hong Kong have expressed grave concern at the comments made on the Cathay website last week, which led to a global backlash. The airline has since apologised for the misstep and asked employees to stay out of political controversies.

“Cathay Pacific Airways check-in area is seen empty as all flights were cancelled yesterday.”

The airline has been experiencing a crisis of late, with the suspension of all Hong Kong flights on Wednesday after the airline received a threat to its operation.

In the wake of this incident, the airline has faced criticism for its role in pushing anti-mainland sentiment in Hong Kong at a time when the city is facing a wave of pro-democracy protests.

Chinese slams protest violence as ‘terrorism’

Beijing — China’s president Xi Jinping has issued a stern warning to protesters in Hong Kong, calling them violent criminals and terrorists.

The Chinese government has repeatedly described the protests as “illegal acts” and has attempted to portray them as foreign-backed. The latest incident comes as China is facing growing pressure to address concerns over human rights and freedom of expression.

WW II Pacific battlegrounds on US-China war map

Australia to spend $540mn on special focus

Australia will spend $540 million on a special focus for the World War II Pacific battlegrounds, which includes sites of major battles in the region.

The focus will include commemorations of the Pacific War, during which Australia played a significant role. The funds will be used to support events such as commemorations, exhibitions, and research.

Iranian detained on Manus Island wins Australian biography prize

Khalid Khalili, a journalist who spent years in an Australian immigration detention centre on Manus Island, has won the 2019 Biography Prize for his memoir ‘The Cake Is Cool’. His story has been praised for its frank portrayal of life in detention.

The book, which details Khalili’s experiences in detention, was published in 2018 and has received critical acclaim.

Iraqi-Kurdish writer among finalists for Australia’s top literary prize

Kurdish-Iranian writer Mehrnaz Amiri is among the six finalists for Australia’s top literary prize, the Miles Franklin Award. She is the first writer of Kurdish origin to be shortlisted.

Amiri has been praised for her work, which explores themes of身份认同 and displacement in the Middle East.

Biden, Wu, and the future of US-China relations

Former US Vice President Joe Biden has been a prominent figure in US-China relations, having played a key role in the Obama administration’s approach to China.

Biden is expected to continue his focus on US-China relations in his role as president, with experts predicting a shift towards more confrontational policies.

Donald Trump

US President Donald Trump has been a vocal critic of China, often using tariffs and trade disputes as leverage. His administration has also imposed sanctions on Chinese entities.

Xi Jinping

Chinese President Xi Jinping has sought to assert China’s influence in the region, with a focus on economic and military expansion.

Joe Biden

Former US Vice President Joe Biden has been a prominent figure in US-China relations, having played a key role in the Obama administration’s approach to China.

Biden is expected to continue his focus on US-China relations in his role as president, with experts predicting a shift towards more confrontational policies.
Labour calls for grouse shooting review as ‘Glorious 12th’ begins

Unemployment fears spiked in last five years

The Metropolitan police said yesterday that it was not using new stop-and-search powers to make an arrest without reasonable suspicion across the country. If it thought serious violence might occur, stop and search was used.

The charities also expected a complaint about the Met this year.

The costs of grouse shooting have increased over the years, but many of the details of the sport are not well known to the public. The Labour Party yesterday said it was fighting for a review of the grouse shooting industry. They said stop and search was being used to target participants in scarlet jackets who were out on the moors.

The Labour review needs an out of context answer and search, said the Met's assistant commissioner.

Farage ridicules Harry and Meghan with jibe at royals

Farage's spokesman said the comments came as a “slightly overweight, chain-smoking gin drinker”.

While Farage, who relishes his reputation for acerbic wit, was not present for Farage’s comments, his spokesman said the prime minister has been taken out of context and the comments were being used to sell an agenda.

The charities also expected a complaint about the Met this year.

The costs of grouse shooting have increased over the years, but many of the details of the sport are not well known to the public. The Labour Party yesterday said it was fighting for a review of the grouse shooting industry. They said stop and search was being used to target participants in scarlet jackets who were out on the moors.

The Labour review needs an out of context answer and search, said the Met's assistant commissioner.

Farage ridicules Harry and Meghan with jibe at royals

Farage’s spokesman said the comments came as a “slightly overweight, chain-smoking gin drinker”.

While Farage, who relishes his reputation for acerbic wit, was not present for Farage’s comments, his spokesman said the prime minister has been taken out of context and the comments were being used to sell an agenda.

The charities also expected a complaint about the Met this year.

The costs of grouse shooting have increased over the years, but many of the details of the sport are not well known to the public. The Labour Party yesterday said it was fighting for a review of the grouse shooting industry. They said stop and search was being used to target participants in scarlet jackets who were out on the moors.

The Labour review needs an out of context answer and search, said the Met's assistant commissioner.

Farage ridicules Harry and Meghan with jibe at royals

Farage’s spokesman said the comments came as a “slightly overweight, chain-smoking gin drinker”.

While Farage, who relishes his reputation for acerbic wit, was not present for Farage’s comments, his spokesman said the prime minister has been taken out of context and the comments were being used to sell an agenda.
Rome\n
The Italian Senate called to set date for debate on elections\n
The experts said they suspected the group had used online tools to coordinate attacks, including Twitter and Telegram, which they said had allowed the group to organize before it staged attacks. The group also had been involved in a number of other cyberattacks, including one against a Russian government website.

Portugal

Arab Spring

Terrorism

The government declared an emergency over the weekend and imposed sweeping new laws against the group. The government said it was considering emergency measures that would allow it to detain suspects without a warrant and to restrict their movements.

France

The new laws, which were passed by Parliament on Tuesday, also gave authorities new powers to track suspects and to seize their communications data.

EUROPE

Security

The European Union has been ramping up its efforts to combat terrorism, and the new laws will be part of those efforts.

TFM

Tuesday, August 13, 2019

TFM will now explore whether Manafort had links to any other foreign political campaigns or officials. The investigation will continue to look at Manafort's role in other political campaigns and officials, especially his connections to officials in Russia and other countries.

2019

The 2019 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2017

The 2017 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2016

The 2016 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2015

The 2015 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2014

The 2014 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2013

The 2013 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2012

The 2012 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2011

The 2011 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2010

The 2010 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.

2009

The 2009 investigation will focus on Manafort's role in the 2016 presidential campaign, his connections to foreign officials, and his role in other political campaigns and officials.
Airshow highlights its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Kerala police spokesman, told AFP.

security caped in independence day

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Trends in 2019”.

agritech startups in India received more than $248mn

Turfed out on the roof of a half-submerged house during a flood in Kollam, Kerala. Kollam is still reeling from a video that families till their damaged houses are repaired and new houses built.

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition

Army showcases its prowess at Delhi exhibition
Opposition set to defeat Macri after massive primary upset

A candidate needs at least 45% of the vote, or 40% and a difference of 10 percentage points over the second-place vote, to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.

Re-electing Macri would mean seeing the exhausted and impoverished Argentine voters stand by, as they have done in the past, as the government implements yet another round of painful austerity measures, which can include cuts to pensions and welfare payments and wage adjustments, with the economy in a “permanent recession” and growth rates negative year after year. The country has one of the highest levels of inequality in the world.

The center-left primary, led by former President Cristina Fernández, now a senator, and her husband, outgoing Buenos Aires Governor Axel Kicillof, received 33% of the vote in the primary, according to exit polls. The primary vote was a “bad election” for Macri and his government, who had hoped to use the vote to encourage voters to stick with his free-market reform agenda despite a painful recession and 55% inflation. If neither candidate arrives with a primary vote, the regulatory body, known as the National Electoral and Registration Service, will start counting the ballots, according to the law. The pollsters have failed. “This is something that nobody expected,” said Raúl Grais Targow, a political scientist at the University of Buenos Aires.
As estimates of wealth held offshore by Pakistan have been released, the government believes that the tax authorities have been able to recover a small portion of the funds held abroad. However, only a small fraction of the total wealth held offshore has been recovered.

Pakistan dedicates Eid to Kashmir

People gather in mosques across Pakistan to offer special prayers for the Kashmiri people. The government has called for peace and dialogue to be the solution to the conflict.

Public varsities facing funding shortage

Pakistan higher education institutions are facing funding shortages. While the government is preparing a budget to support higher education, the institutions have expressed concerns about the allocation of funds.

Lawmakers trade barbs over links to sugar mills

A session of the National Assembly was held today, with members discussing the links between sugar mills and-night officials. The competition commission of Pakistan has been investigating the matter.

Sindhi, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa assemblies most prolific

The Sindh Assembly leads in the number of working days among the four provincial legislative assemblies. According to a comparative analysis released by Pakistan Institute of Legislative Development and Transparency (PILDAT), the Sindh Assembly passed a total of 162 bills in the 10th phase, followed by the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Assembly, with 109.

Interviews

The Sindh Assembly passed a total of 162 bills in the 10th phase, followed by the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Assembly, with 109. According to a comparative analysis released by Pakistan Institute of Legislative Development and Transparency (PILDAT), the Sindh Assembly leads in the number of working days among the four provincial legislative assemblies.

Pakistan higher education institutions are facing funding shortages. While the government is preparing a budget to support higher education, the institutions have expressed concerns about the allocation of funds.
Panel seeks plan to resolve traffic gridlock
By Jofre July
Gulf Times
13

The transportation committee of the 21st Kuwaiti Parliament has decided to launch a study on the traffic gridlock issue in the country.

The committee’s move comes after receiving several letters from citizens and individuals, expressing their dissatisfaction with the current traffic situation.

The committee will be formed of a mix of government officials and private sector leaders, under the direction of Speaker Zakariya Al-Sabah.

The committee aims to review the problem and provide solutions to reduce traffic congestion.

It will also work to promote public transportation services and encourage the use of alternative modes of transport.

The committee is expected to submit its report to the Kuwaiti Parliament within six months.

Cops can accept gifts only of ‘insignificant value’
Mushtaque Yousuf
The Gulf Times

Police officers should not accept gifts except when it’s ‘of insignificant value’, a Dubai police official stated.

The Dubai Police Communications and Media Affairs Department issued a statement clarifying its policy on accepting gifts.

The department explained that gifts are allowed under certain circumstances.

However, it emphasized that the value of the gift should not exceed a predetermined limit.

The statement read: “The Dubai Police Communications and Media Affairs Department clarifies that in the course of their official duties, police officers are allowed to accept gifts if they are of insignificant value.”

The statement added that the insignificant value limit is determined based on several factors, including the nature of the gift and the relationship between the赠予者 and the police officer.

The department stressed that gifts exceeding the insignificant value limit are considered a bribe and are not allowed.

The statement concluded: “The Dubai Police Communications and Media Affairs Department urges all parties to comply with the policy to maintain the professionalism and integrity of the police force.”

Philippine govt bans Chinese survey vessels
By Bernardito E Tansuyo Manila Times

The Philippine government has banned Chinese survey vessels from conducting research or conducting any activity in the country’s Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ).

The decision was made after the Chinese vessels were spotted operating in the WPS, particularly near the Spratly Islands.

The government has stated that the Chinese vessels are conducting activities that are considered hazardous and are in violation of the country’s maritime laws.

The ban was supported by the Department of Foreign Affairs and the Department of National Defense.

In a statement, Secretary Alan Peter Cayetano, the foreign affairs chief, said: “We have made a decision that is necessary. This is a clear and strong signal to the Chinese government that their activities are not welcome here.”

The ban was also welcomed by environmental groups and local communities living in the disputed waters.

The ban comes after the Philippines and China held talks to resolve the ongoing dispute in the WPS.

The Philippine government has also been advocates for stricter measures to protect the marine environment and territorial waters.

Coast Guard rescues 49 as boat sinks off Calbayog
Mushtaque Yousuf

A Coast Guard patrol boat rescued 49 passengers from a sinking vessel off the coast of Calbayog City.

The incident occurred around 4:30 AM on Wednesday, when the coast guard received a distress call from the vessel.

The vessel was carrying 49 passengers and was sailing towards Mindanao from Calbayog City.

The coast guard immediately dispatched a rescue team and a patrol boat to the scene.

The boat crew rescued all passengers and brought them to safety.

The passengers were taken to the nearest hospital for medical checkup.

The coast guard is investigating the cause of the sinking.

The incident highlighted the need for proper safety measures and equipment on board vessels.

The coast guard is advising all vessel operators to ensure that their vessels are equipped with necessary safety equipment and that they follow proper safety protocols.

The coast guard also提醒 passengers to always wear life jackets and to follow the instructions of the crew.

In a separate operation, the coast guard rescued a fisherman from a sinking boat off the coast of Iloilo City.

The fisherman was rescued by a coast guard helicopter and brought to safety.

The coast guard is commended for its quick response and effective rescue operation.

The coast guard is urging all maritime stakeholders to remain vigilant and take necessary precautions to ensure the safety of passengers and crew.
Epstein’s real victims still deserve justice

Jeffrey Epstein’s suicide makes it even more compelling to dig deeper into that unfruitful affair. His upstanding image had shed light onto the many aspects of his crimes and the cover-ups. The victims, as usual, are only left with the hollow satisfaction of facing him in a courtroom, cannot be deprived of the knowledge of how this atrocity of a case happened. They, and all others who have been held and how and why the criminal-justice system mishandled the crimes of this rich and powerful predator so badly.

The American people need to know how Epstein’s kid-glove treatment in a Palm Beach County stockade came to be. Here, more answers should be forthcoming now that Governor Ron DeSantis has ordered an independent investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and thoroughness.

Shifting the spotlight to New York, where Epstein was jailed, people also need to know, first, why, for their initial two unremarkable escape attempts, and why, in light of one victim’s corroborated testimony about Ghislaine Maxwell’s alleged role in Epstein’s well-enterprises, why she has not yet been charged?

One young woman, Virginia Roberts Giuffre, in her 2015 defamation suit, said that Maxwell was the recruiter, the procurer of young girls for Epstein’s appetite. In fact, he had never been truly punished for his abuse of them.

This was a man who deftly avoided accountability.

In his near two decades, twice the American people were paid to defend him, but, egregiously, by the criminal-justice system mishandled the crimes of this rich and powerful predator so badly.

It’s imperative that this happen. The Department of Justice’s Office of Professional Responsibility, is conducting a thorough investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and approach.

To Advertise
adv@gulf-times.com
Gulf Times
Twitter: @gulftimesQatar

Faisal Abdulhameed al-Mudahka
Twitter: gulftimes_Qatar

The American people need to know how Epstein’s kid-glove treatment in a Palm Beach County stockade came to be. Here, more answers should be forthcoming now that Governor Ron DeSantis has ordered an independent investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and thoroughness.

Shifting the spotlight to New York, where Epstein was jailed, people also need to know, first, why, for their initial two unremarkable escape attempts, and why, in light of one victim’s corroborated testimony about Ghislaine Maxwell’s alleged role in Epstein’s well-enterprises, why she has not yet been charged?

One young woman, Virginia Roberts Giuffre, in her 2015 defamation suit, said that Maxwell was the recruiter, the procurer of young girls for Epstein’s appetite. In fact, he had never been truly punished for his abuse of them.

This was a man who deftly avoided accountability.

In his near two decades, twice the American people were paid to defend him, but, egregiously, by the criminal-justice system mishandled the crimes of this rich and powerful predator so badly.

It’s imperative that this happen. The Department of Justice’s Office of Professional Responsibility, is conducting a thorough investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and approach.

To Advertise
adv@gulf-times.com
Gulf Times
Twitter: @gulftimesQatar

Faisal Abdulhameed al-Mudahka
Twitter: gulftimes_Qatar

The American people need to know how Epstein’s kid-glove treatment in a Palm Beach County stockade came to be. Here, more answers should be forthcoming now that Governor Ron DeSantis has ordered an independent investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and thoroughness.

Shifting the spotlight to New York, where Epstein was jailed, people also need to know, first, why, for their initial two unremarkable escape attempts, and why, in light of one victim’s corroborated testimony about Ghislaine Maxwell’s alleged role in Epstein’s well-enterprises, why she has not yet been charged?

One young woman, Virginia Roberts Giuffre, in her 2015 defamation suit, said that Maxwell was the recruiter, the procurer of young girls for Epstein’s appetite. In fact, he had never been truly punished for his abuse of them.

This was a man who deftly avoided accountability.

In his near two decades, twice the American people were paid to defend him, but, egregiously, by the criminal-justice system mishandled the crimes of this rich and powerful predator so badly.

It’s imperative that this happen. The Department of Justice’s Office of Professional Responsibility, is conducting a thorough investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and approach.

To Advertise
adv@gulf-times.com
Gulf Times
Twitter: @gulftimesQatar

Faisal Abdulhameed al-Mudahka
Twitter: gulftimes_Qatar

The American people need to know how Epstein’s kid-glove treatment in a Palm Beach County stockade came to be. Here, more answers should be forthcoming now that Governor Ron DeSantis has ordered an independent investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and thoroughness.

Shifting the spotlight to New York, where Epstein was jailed, people also need to know, first, why, for their initial two unremarkable escape attempts, and why, in light of one victim’s corroborated testimony about Ghislaine Maxwell’s alleged role in Epstein’s well-enterprises, why she has not yet been charged?

One young woman, Virginia Roberts Giuffre, in her 2015 defamation suit, said that Maxwell was the recruiter, the procurer of young girls for Epstein’s appetite. In fact, he had never been truly punished for his abuse of them.

This was a man who deftly avoided accountability.

In his near two decades, twice the American people were paid to defend him, but, egregiously, by the criminal-justice system mishandled the crimes of this rich and powerful predator so badly.

It’s imperative that this happen. The Department of Justice’s Office of Professional Responsibility, is conducting a thorough investigation. It must be unflinching in its reach and approach.

To Advertise
adv@gulf-times.com
Gulf Times
Twitter: @gulftimesQatar

Faisal Abdulhameed al-Mudahka
Twitter: gulftimes_Qatar
Northern Ireland: when British troops moved in 50 years ago

By Barry Eichengreen

T
he US government last week nominated a prominent US economist to the Federal Reserve Board. Some enthusiasts hailed this as an early advisory to the Trump campaign. Others, however, noted that Judy Shelton, who has publicly highlighted her advocacy of the gold standard and opposed any policy from an unreliable Fed. That is, the nomination of Judy Shelton to the US central bank’s board of governors is not a sign of a shift in US economic policy, but rather a confirmation of one. The US does not need a new central banker – it needs a new central bank.

Behind this presumption, however, is a false assumption about the determinants of US monetary and fiscal policy. A key determinant is US foreign policy: the relative price of gold to double, as it did between 2009 and 2011, consumer inflation rates are also needed to determine optimal interventions, including caloric and comprehensive lifestyle maximises tobacco quit rates. A combination of behavioural, nutritional recommendations. Further studies are also needed to determine optimal dietary cholesterol and sodium. “Reducing saturated with monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats and reduce daily cholesterol and sodium.”

As Dr Huffman told Reuters Health by e-mail, “Better lifestyle and calls mean that the current account doesn’t change, then neither can the relative price of domestic and foreign goods, so the exchange rate must move, if it is to offer a solution to US current account problems. The US current account deficit is just the difference between US investment and US saving, which do not change if anything but British troops were to mobilise 50 years ago to the Federal Reserve Board.

Why Trump nominated Judy Shelton to the Federal Reserve Board

By Barry Eichengreen

B
ritish troops deployed in Northern Ireland in the first year of the Troubles. The soldiers were initially planned as a limited intervention to deal with the situation in Londonderry, Northern Ireland’s only Catholic-majority city, in October 1969. Two years later, troops were sent to Northern Ireland to fight the IRA, which extended its campaign in 1971, going on to take the lives of 3,500 people. But opinion soon turned and the British government between Protestants and Catholics

The March was illegal and they had orders to use stones, bat, and, suddenly, “troops fired. People looked unfazed. But I was an atmosphere of apocalypse,” AP reported. The march was illegal and they had orders to use stones, bat, and, suddenly, “troops fired. People looked unfazed. But I was an atmosphere of apocalypse,” AP reported. The 1970s were a time of eff ort to fi nd peace fi nally yielded the breakthrough Good Friday Agreement in 1998. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux. The Troubles ended, and the current account was left in a state of flux.
MoI reaches out to expats through Eid celebrations

The Mega Eid Al-Adha Cultural and Information Celebrations for Expatriates Communities by the Public Relations Department (PRD) highlighted the importance of the Ministry of Interior to stay connected with the local communities in Qatar.

The programme was attended by officials from the Ministry of Interior and other departments, as well as by representatives from various communities in Qatar.

PRD Director General Khaled Ahmed al-Marri said the event aimed to provide the expatriate communities with a platform to celebrate Eid and to express their gratitude to the authorities for their support.

The programme featured various activities, including cultural performances, traditional food, and a live broadcast of the Eid prayers.

Lieutenant Mohammad al-Merri, a member of the Community Policing Unit, highlighted the importance of security and safety during the Eid celebrations.

He said, “The Ministry of Interior is always ready to provide security and safety for all residents of Qatar, regardless of their nationality. We are committed to ensuring a safe and enjoyable celebration for everyone.”

The programme was well-attended, with thousands of expatriates and local residents participating in the various activities.

Organisers emphasised the importance of community cohesion and the spirit of togetherness during the Eid celebrations.

Lieutenant Khalid al-Nasser, a member of the Community Policing Unit, highlighted the role of community policing in maintaining safety and security during the Eid celebrations.

He said, “We want to ensure that all residents of Qatar feel safe and secure during the Eid celebrations. We encourage all residents to report any incidents to the police immediately.”

The programme was attended by officials from various departments, including the Ministry of Interior, the Ministry of Education, and the Ministry of Public Health.

PRD Director General Khaled Ahmed al-Marri said the event aimed to bring the expatriate communities together and to foster a sense of belonging.

He said, “We are committed to ensuring that all residents of Qatar feel welcome and included in our community. We want to provide a platform for all residents to celebrate Eid and to express their gratitude to the authorities for their support.”

The programme was well-attended, with thousands of expatriates and local residents participating in the various activities.

Organisers emphasised the importance of community cohesion and the spirit of togetherness during the Eid celebrations.