Gibraltar decides to free Iran's oil tanker

US seeks to detain ship, UK says

Tehran must abide by assurances

B ritain's Mediterranean territory Gibraltar decided yesterday to free a seized Iranian oil tanker, but did not immediately indicate when if the ship would sail out after the United States demanded a new, raised standoff over the maritime border dispute.

The Grace 1 was seized by British Royal Marine commandos in the British overseas territory of Gibraltar on July 4 on suspicion of violating Europe's Iran sanctions by taking off crude oil to Syria, a close ally of Iran.

We speak from a position of strength, not of fear, for we are holding the true懂事 of the world leading into the sea.

The two tankers have become pawns in the standoff between Iran and the West, which was raised to a new high with the raise of the diplomatic standoff between the UK's foreign and the United States.

Tens of thousands of migrants on the move from Myanmar to Thailand

Some 200 migrants from Myanmar have been found in Thailand’s southern province of Narathiwat on Wednesday, authorities said. The migrants, mostly from Myanmar’s Rakhine state, were said to be heading to Malaysia, a major destination for asylum seekers and irregular migrants in the region. The Thai authorities have stepped up efforts to intercept and repatriate migrants from Myanmar, Vietnam, and other countries in recent years. The latest group of migrants were found near the town of Kuala Lumpur, which is a common entry point for migrants seeking to enter Malaysia. The Thai authorities have been under pressure to address the issue of migrant smuggling, which has been a significant problem in the region. The find comes amid concerns about the humanitarian situation of migrants in the region, with many facing violence and abuse in their home countries. The Thai authorities have urged the international community to provide assistance to address the needs of migrants and refugees in the region. The situation has raised questions about the effectiveness of regional and international efforts to tackle migrant smuggling and border management. It is unclear what action, if any, the Thai authorities will take in response to the latest find. The Thai government has been under pressure to address the issue of migrant smuggling, which has been a significant problem in the region.
Tanzania fuel tanker blast toll hits 85

The death toll from a weekend fuel tanker explosion in eastern Tanzania rose to 85 yesterday, a regional official said, though the actual number of fatalities was not clear.

The explosion occurred when the vehicle in Morogoro, about 200km west of the capital, Dar es Salaam, caught fire.

Government officials initially reported at least 60 people were killed. The official death toll now stands at 85. There are 17 accident victims with burn injuries admitted here at the regional referral hospital in Dar es Salaam, the commissioner said.

On Sunday the prime minister called for the investigation to be expanded after Mugabe was removed in a coup earlier this year.

The US embassy in Harare said in a statement it was aware of reports of a "suspicious vehicle explosion in eastern Tanzania".

"We have asked the Tanzanian government for more information and will continue to monitor this situation," the embassy said.

"The developments so far point to a real and ongoing threat to the security of the country," the US embassy said.

The Tanzanian government has been accused by rights groups of failing to adequately investigate the explosion and of covering up the role of the ruling party in the disaster.

The government has denied any involvement and has told reporters it was carrying out a full investigation.

Ottawa, Canada's Trudeau accepts he breached ethics rules

Canada's Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has accepted he breached ethics rules.

"I have come to the conclusion that I should not have accepted the hospitality from the Oliva Plata Foundation," Trudeau said in an address to the Parliament in Ottawa. "I have been clear that I have failed to live up to the high standards I have set for myself and for our government.

The appointment of Trump to the role of second in line for the presidency was not without its critics. Some, including Senator Elizabeth Warren, have called for Trump to be impeached for his role in the impeachment of former President Donald Trump.

But he failed to make a mark on the presidential race and withdrew from the contest two months later, according to the Federal Election Commission.

There were major changes on the Republican side, however, as the vote was still too close to call.

The White House called the decision of the Clinton Foundation to give up its role in the presidential campaign a "deplorable act," and accused the Democrats of "running scared."

More protests likely in Hong Kong over weekend

Protests against the extradition bill in Hong Kong have already claimed the lives of three people and left scores injured. An attack on police officers in June that killed one officer and injured 11 others was the latest in a series of violent incidents.

The protests represent the biggest populist challenge for Chinese President Xi Jinping since he came to power in 2012 and show no immediate signs of abating.

Opposition to the extradition bill has developed into wider concerns about the erosion of freedoms guaranteed under the “one country, two systems” framework put in place after the British handover. China's new national security law took effect in June.

The protests have been met with a heavy-handed response from the government, with police frequently using tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse protesters.

As the protests continue, there are growing concerns about the stability of the region and the potential for violent clashes to escalate.

Despite the government's efforts to quell the protests, the situation remains tense, with both sides entrenched in their positions and no clear path to resolution in sight.

In the meantime, the international community is watching closely, with many expressing concern about the human rights implications of the protests and the potential for violence to spiral out of control.

Taiwanese President Tsai Ing-wenVisit to the US on Saturday security

Taiwanese President Tsai Ing-wen's visit to the US on Saturday is expected to raise tensions with China, which has threatened to impose sanctions on individuals and organizations involved with Taiwan. The visit comes amid growing geopolitical tensions in the region, with China and the US both stepping up their military exercises and diplomatic efforts to assert their influence.

Taiwan is a self-governing island located off the southeast coast of China, with a population of around 24 million. It is widely viewed as a sensitive issue in Sino-American relations, with Beijing branding the island as a “rogue element” and warning that it would use force if necessary to bring it back under its control.

The visit is likely to be met with a strong response from China, which has already expelled several American diplomats in recent weeks as part of a broader diplomatic campaign aimed at pressuring Taiwan.

Rival plans to block no-deal Brexit clash

BRITAIN/IRELAND

Police officers inspect items, including a bag and a sheathed knife, at the former parish church of St John's outside the nearby Home Office building.

A spokesman for Johnson’s office said the Labour leader was showing contempt for the 21-day rule. “Jeremy Corbyn believes that the people are sovereign and politicians can cancel public votes they don’t like,” he said.

Labour party sources have said, however, that there may be short-term disruption, it would provoke a breakdown in the Brexit bloc and eventually allow the government to force through its deal. The pound, which tumbled in response to the result, was up 0.8% at $1.2287.

A spokeswoman for Johnson’s office said the government was “thoroughly confident” in its ability to deliver a no-deal Brexit.

Johnson, who led the 2016 campaign during the 2016 referendum, has vowed to forge a new economic partnership with the EU that would struggle to form a majority in the 650-seat parliament.

He said he hoped his proposal would lead to a “calm parliamentary process that will bring the country back together”.

Johnson’s goal is to secure a new economic partnership with the EU that will “set us on the road to prosperity and recovery”.

Northern Ireland does not have a separate government, but Johnson’s office said it would work closely with the Northern Ireland office in the UK government to ensure that all stakeholders are consulted.

A spokesman for the US diplomat said the airport reopened just before 1030 GMT. "We are working closely with the Northern Irish government to ensure that all stakeholders are consulted."

Istikharah: The Guidance Prayer

The Prophet said, “Seek guidance before doing anything.” [Al-Bukhari].

Istikharah means to ask Allah the results of a certain matter before proceeding with it, to seek Allah’s guidance concerning a particular action. Istikharah consists of: (1) Our subconscious wishes, (2) Our subconscious needs, and (3) What is best for us. Istikharah is an obligation, recommended for the Muslims to do in any matter in which they are uncertain of the results. Istikharah is a personal procedure, not a public prayer. This prayer is done individually and privately.

Guidance Prayer

Istikharah means asking Allah for guidance before doing anything. Before proceeding with a matter, the person should say the Guidance Prayer. This prayer is not a prayer for entering into a state of worship except Allah) seeking the ilaaaha illallah [such a deed he would enter Hell, but mortgage can be used as collateral for a loan. If the mortgager defaults on the loan, the mortgagee (the lender) has the right to seize the mortgaged item and sell it to cover the debt. If the mortgaged item is sold for more than the debt, the excess goes to the mortgager; if less, the mortgager must make up the difference. The mortgagee enjoys possession of the mortgaged item until the debt is paid in full.

Guidance Prayer

The results of the Guidance Prayer are not always clear-cut. Sometimes the guidance prayer may give no clear indication of what to do. In such cases, the person should consult a knowledgeable and trustworthy person, such as a religious leader, to determine the best course of action. The guidance prayer should be used as a tool to seek Allah’s guidance and make informed decisions, but it should not be used as a substitute for personal judgment and discernment. It is important to remember that Allah’s guidance is ultimately the best source of guidance, and that the guidance prayer should be used in conjunction with personal reflection and consultation with others to arrive at the best course of action.
Trump's attack on Endangered Species Act must be resisted

Chicago notched a win for an endangered species this summer as Great Lakes piping plovers Monty and Rose nest at Montrose Beach in Chicago. Activists launched two lawsuits, with the help of many watchful volunteers and concerned citizens. Meanwhile, Alabama’s chief justice is credited with saving iconic wildlife including the bald eagle, gray bear, and California condor. Industries including oil and gas, agriculture and ranching resist limits on their activities. This move by Donald Barnhart, director of the Interior Department, mobilise, urgently and together, to save our planet and biodiversity report in May. “We can no longer continue to destroy the diversity of life,” he said. “We must be resisted.”

We can no longer continue to destroy the diversity of life

The Trump administration announced its plans to make several changes to the Endangered Species Act on Monday, the first day of its 8-month in office. The plan to end the protection for many species, including the gray wolf, the polar bear, and the Sierra Nevada bighorn sheep, would end the ability of the federal government to protect species from extinction. The Interior Department has said it is working to save the listed species, but environmentalists say the move is an attempt to weaken the law.

The Trump administration’s decision is part of a larger effort to roll back environmental regulations and policies. The administration has announced plans to weaken the Clean Water Act and the National Environmental Policy Act, and to make it easier for industries to expand without considering environmental impacts.

The loan may have been unprecedented in size, but it had all the familiar characteristics of the Fund’s enterprise. In exchange for the cash, Argentina was required to implement structural reforms and, in order to balance its primary budget in 2019 and capably, reduce its external deficit. Argentina complied - and the economy suddenly deteriorated.

When water is running at over 90% of capacity, the ocean, and unemployment is afoot, Argentina is not near the IMF's target for investment and growth, which has already been revised twice. More downward revisions are expected in 2020. In March, the IMF approved a $4.2 billion, three-year loan that was to be used as a huge boost in private-sector investment. According to the Fund's own report, it would have on Greece's economy. In exchange, the Fund's lending approach with Argentina.

The team inspected the ice in early August 2019 in the Northwest Passage, in a still image taken from a handout video obtained by Reuters on August 14, 2019. The Northwest Passage Project is an international scientific expedition in the Swedish icebreaker Nordica, which covered some 2,000 nautical miles and covered some 2,000 nautical miles and was conducted by an international team of scientists from the universities of London, Australia, and Germany.

Yet, a mere five years later, the Fund's credibility was severely undermined by the growing recognition of the environmental impact of plastic pollution. The total amount of plastic waste in the Pacific Ocean's Marianas Trench has more than doubled since 2000, according to a study published in the journal Nature in 2018. The study found that the total amount of plastic waste in the Pacific Ocean has increased by 25% since 2000, and that the amount of microplastics in the ocean has increased by 40% since 2010.

The study concluded that the increasing amount of plastic waste in the ocean is having a significant impact on marine life. The researchers found that microplastics are ingested by a variety of marine organisms, including fish, birds, and marine mammals. They also found that microplastics can cause harm to marine life, including inflammation and tissue damage.
