Qatar’s spending on projects to continue beyond 2022: QC chief

Government spending on projects totalling over QR1 trillion will continue even after the country hosts the 2022 World Cup games in 2022, according to a Qatar Chamber official.

“The level of projects will continue after the 2022 World Cup, and this is a very important issue,” he said. “We believe that much more preparation is needed for the tournament.”

Sheikh Khalifa explained that other than the infrastructure projects, other major projects such as roads, a new airport, and hospitals.

“The pace of projects will continue to increase, and there is every reason to believe that the private sector will play a greater role in these projects in partnership with the public sector,” he said. In addition, the Qatar National Vision 2030, the chamber official said, will serve as a guide for projects.

“Tourism will be a key area for the 2022 World Cup. We are already preparing for the tournament,” he added.

Sheikh Khalifa added that there is a need to ensure that the projects continue to be funded, and that the government continues to support the private sector.

“The government has a role to play in ensuring that the projects continue to be funded, and that the private sector continues to be encouraged to invest in these projects,” he said.

Kuwaiti team praises HIA security systems

The Kuwaiti delegation praised the security systems at the new airport, saying they are state-of-the-art and provide a secure environment for passengers.

The delegation was impressed with the new security systems at HIA, which include full-body scanners, metal detectors, and automated bag checks.

The delegation also praised the airport’s efficient and friendly staff, who provided excellent customer service.

The delegation expressed its gratitude to the authorities of the new airport for their warm hospitality and for the excellent arrangements made for their visit.

Qatar, Malaysia discuss co-operation in higher education sector and research

An agreement was signed between Qatar and Malaysia for co-operation in higher education and research. The agreement was signed by the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Qatar, Sheikh Mohamed bin Abdulrahman Al Thani, and the Minister of Higher Education of Malaysia, Datuk Dr Maszlee Malik.

The agreement aims to strengthen bilateral relations between the two countries in the field of higher education and research. It includes the exchange of academic staff, students, and research fellows, as well as the development of joint research projects.

The agreement also includes the establishment of a joint committee to oversee the implementation of the agreement and to address any issues that may arise.

The agreement was welcomed by both sides, with officials highlighting the importance of fostering closer ties between the two countries in the field of higher education and research.
QRCS provides vital medical equipment to Gaza health centres

QRCS (Qatar Red Crescent Society) provided 14 new ultrasound machines to the Palestinian Ministry of Health in the Gaza Strip as part of its project to support and develop radiological services in these centres.

In a statement released yesterday, QRCS said that this supportive project, which costs about QR1,190,000 and includes the implementation of training for medical staff, comes to ensure the provision of quality services.

Director of the Women’s Centre at the Primary Health Centres in Gaza Dr Nahla Halas said that care services for pregnant women are provided in 28 health centres in all governorates of the Gaza Strip.

She pointed out that the recent years have witnessed great suffering as a result of the lack of “ultrasound” machines. In relation to quality, the old ultrasound machines gave unclear and inaccurate results. Many pregnant women had to visit health centres in distant places, or even seek costly services at private medical clinics, she explained.

With QRCS’s latest project, Dr Halas expected lower fetal morbidity and mortality rates, as well as more pregnant women visiting health centres, instead of outpatient and obstetrics departments at public hospitals.

For his part, Executive Director of Relief and International Development at QRCS Dr Mohamed Salah Ibrahim considered the enhancement of the healthcare sector a “top priority for QRCS’s interventions in Gaza”.

“Impoverished and war-weary Gaza is in dire need of help,” he added. “We are committed to supporting healthcare services, by providing medical professionals, facilities, equipment, supplies, and community health education.”

In the face of persistently difficult living conditions, Dr Ibrahim called upon all the individual and institutional donors in Qatar to continue to help the vulnerable in Gaza.
Ooredoo warns customers on scam calls

A Qatar telecommunications provider has warned customers to be vigilant after it received reports of scam calls made in this way.

Ooredoo has advised customers not to respond to any call purporting to be from Ooredoo and not to give any personal information, such as passwords or personal details such as passport numbers, over the phone.

"When called to see how the operator would be likely to ask about? Is the number recognised? And what is the caller asking for? The customer will never ask for any personal details such as passwords, financial details, or credit card details and will not ask customers for any money," Ooredoo said.

"Customers who have any doubt about who is calling are requested to call Ooredoo 999 immediately by calling 999, or send a message to FraudControl@Ooredoo.qa or CustomerSupport@Ooredoo.qa or visit any Ooredoo shop.

More recently, Ooredoo said it had received reports of scam calls being made in the name of the terrorist organisation. The European Union, of which Greece is a member, had warned that the organisation was involved in exporting weapons to Libya and other beneficiaries in the Middle East and North Africa.

Greece: No request from Iranian tanker to dock

Reuters

Greece said yesterday it had received a request for oil to be loaded onto an Iranian tanker in the Gulf after the US kneeled to pressure from Tehran.

Greek officials said the request was made by a representative of the Iranian tanker, Stena Impero, which had been detained by the US Navy in the Gulf on July 19.

The Iranian ship, which was carrying 200,000 barrels of crude oil, was said to have asked for permission to berth at a Greek port, but the request was refused.

Rebel fighters withdraw from key area of northwest Syria

The withdrawal means a Turkish-controlled buffer zone of nearly 200 km2, as well as a separate buffer zone of 15 km2, are effectively surrounded by government forces. Russian defence minister Sergei Shoigu said on Sunday that the areas are also controlled by government forces, within range of that of Isis, he said. Russia’s Foreign Miniser Mevlut Cavusoglu said his country’s aims was to re-instate the post from Mereen.

“Soon, after the defeat of the last significant fighting group of the terrorists in the Idlib region on the border of Syria and Turkey, the entire area is under the control of the government security forces,” he said.

The reasons behind the move, according to witnesses, are the successes of the regime in the battle against the violent groups, and the steps taken by the government in taking control over the provinces of Idlib and Aleppo in the past few months.

The decision was also made after the government forces overran the last stronghold of the heavily armed group of armed forces, and after a series of clashes with the group in the northern area of the country.

While the withdrawal is a blow to the group, it also opens the way for a possible return to TSK control in the area. The group has been present in the area for several years, and has been the target of a series of airstrikes by the government in the past.

The move also adds to the tension in the region, as the group is also active in other parts of Syria, and has been involved in recent clashes with other groups in the area.

The withdrawal, however, is likely to be a temporary one, as the group is expected to regroup in the coming months. The group is also expected to make a comeback in the region, as it has been able to maintain its control over a large part of the area in the past.

The withdrawal also raises questions about the future of the government in the region, as the group is also active in other parts of the country, and has been involved in recent clashes with other groups in the area.

Brazil police sniper kills Rio bus hijacker

A police sniper in Rio de Janeiro killed a man who had hijacked a bus and held passengers hostage on Monday, becoming the latest in a string of gun battles between police, drug gangs, and vigilante militias in Brazil.

The hijacking, from which all 31 passengers escaped, was one of several recent incidents that have raised fears of rising crime. In 2015, the city's police chief said a tougher line to combat years of shifting police tactics.

Brazil's police have been praised for their efforts to protect citizens, but they have also faced criticism for their role in vigilante militias comprised of police, drug gangs, and other armed groups.

As news of the incident spread, members of the governor's office said they were concerned about the violence and urged the public to remain vigilant.

California police officer killed in Rio bus hijacking

Amid growing concerns about police use of lethal force in California, a police officer was killed in a bus hijacking in Rio de Janeiro on Monday.

The officer, a 29-year-old man who had worked for the Rio police for nearly three decades, has been named as the victim. He was shot dead while attempting to take control of the hijacked bus.

The hijacking, which started at 7 a.m., ended at 9 a.m. with police shooting dead the man who had taken control of the bus. The hijacker was shot in the head after spraying tear gas at police.

Police said the hijacker had been known to them and had been involved in a number of other incidents in the past.

The officer was the latest in a string of police deaths in Brazil, where police have faced criticism for their role in vigilante militias.

Brazilian police said they were investigating the incident and would release more details later in the day.

School district sued for colouring black pupil's scalp

A school district in Texas is being sued by the parents of a black teenager who was suspended for using a marker to colour his hair.

A 16-year-old boy was expelled from Texas High School in Pearland in January 2018, after the school district sued him for allegedly using a marker to colour his hair.

The boy's parents said they were shocked and heartbroken that their son had been suspended for a simple act of self-expression.

The school district had previously settled a similar case involving a black student who was suspended for wearing a black shirt.

The lawsuit alleges that the school district discriminated against the boy and violated his rights.

The school district said it had received complaints from other families about students using markers to colour their hair.

The lawsuit is being handled by the American Civil Liberties Union, which is representing the boy and his parents.

The school district said it would fight the lawsuit and that it was committed to providing a safe and inclusive learning environment for all students.

The lawsuit follows a number of other cases across the country where schools have disciplined students for using markers to colour their hair.

The American Civil Liberties Union has been representing students in these cases and has won several victories.

The organisation says it is fighting for the rights of students to express themselves without fear of discrimination or punishment.

Schools have been accused of using dress codes and other policies to discriminate against students of colour.

The American Civil Liberties Union says it is committed to fighting for the rights of all students and to ensuring that schools provide a safe and inclusive environment for all.

EU rebuffs Johnson’s Brexit gambit

EU leaders have rejected Prime Minister Boris Johnson’s latest Brexit gambit — a plan to re-open discussions on the Irish backstop in exchange for a new deal on the withdrawal agreement.

The EU’s chief negotiator Michel Barnier said there was no new proposal on the table from London to merit further talks.

Barnier expressed disappointment at the latest UK offer, which was described as a “cursory and non-serious” response to the EU’s demands.

The EU rejected the suggestion that the backstop — part of the Withdrawal Agreement that prevents a hard border on the island of Ireland — could be softened by offering the UK access to a future regulatory framework.

Barnier said the EU would not open talks on the backstop without a guarantee that Northern Ireland would remain part of the EU single market.

He also ruled out any “cheap deal” or renegotiation of the terms of the Brexit deal with the UK.

The Brexit ministry said in a statement that the UK’s offer was a “pure PR” stunt and not a serious proposal.

Pakistan to bring Kashmir before UN's top court

Pakistan will take its Kashmir case to the International Court of Justice (ICJ), the government announced yesterday.

"Pakistan has decided to file a case at the ICJ," Foreign Minister Shah Mehmood Qureshi said. "We will bring the issue of disputed Kashmir before the International Court of Justice." Qureshi was speaking during a joint press conference held in Islamabad.

The announcement comes after the recent tension escalation between Pakistan and India following a dispute over the release of water from the Sutlej, Beas and Ravi rivers.

Pakistan has been observing the upper basin of the Sutlej, Beas and Ravi during the monsoon season.

"We have observed over the upper basin of the Sutlej, Beas and Ravi as the level of water in these rivers continues to rise," Qureshi said.

In a statement, the Pakistan Army said it had suspended the Indus Water Treaty with India, which governs water sharing between the two countries.

Qureshi said the decision to take the case to the ICJ was taken at a meeting of the National Security Committee.

"As a result of the recent events, the Indian government has not cooperated with Pakistan," he said.

Pakistan's move comes after India released 24,000 cusecs of water from the Sutlej River, which is claimed by Pakistan as part of the Indus Waters Treaty.

Qureshi said the decision to file the case was taken in line with the resolution of Pakistan's National Assembly passed in 2019.

"We have been observing the upper basin of the Sutlej, Beas and Ravi," Qureshi said.

The announcement was made after a meeting of the National Security Committee, which is chaired by Prime Minister Imran Khan.

"The decision has been taken in line with the resolution of Pakistan's National Assembly," Qureshi said.

The ICJ is an international court established by the United Nations to settle disputes between states.

Pakistan's move is seen as a diplomatic move to seek international support for its claims over Kashmir.

India has rejected Pakistan's claim, saying it is a bilateral issue.

The case at the ICJ will be held in The Hague, Netherlands, and will be heard by seven judges.

Pakistan's case is expected to be heard over a period of several weeks, and a decision is expected to be announced within a year.

In the meantime, Pakistan has decided to suspend all trade and diplomatic relations with India.

Qureshi said the decision to suspend relations was taken in line with the resolution of Pakistan's National Assembly passed in 2019.

"We have been observing the upper basin of the Sutlej, Beas and Ravi," Qureshi said.

Comelco officials daren Cardema to file charges

By William Delayni

The House of Representatives has convened to inquire into the status of the resolution of the complaint filed against Comelco President Rowena Guanzon by Duterte Youth in the Division of Metropolitan Manila.

The inquiry was conducted after the Duterte Youth filed a complaint against Comelco President Rowena Guanzon for allegedly accepting a nomination from Duterte himself.

During the hearing, Guanzon denied the charges, citing her constitutional mandate to represent the youth.

The hearing was convened to determine if Guanzon had violated the rules of the Commission on Elections (Comelec) by accepting a nomination from Duterte.

Guanzon defended her position, stating that she had not violated any rules of the Comelec.

The hearing is still ongoing, and a decision will be made in the coming weeks.

The Duterte Youth is among the 51 party-list groups that will be voted on in the upcoming elections.

The Duterte Youth is a youth organization that was formed during the administration of Rodrigo Duterte.

They have been accused of being close to the Duterte administration and have been vocal in their support for the president.

The Duterte Youth has also been criticized for its handling of the coronavirus pandemic and its role in the Mindanao insurgency.

The Duterte Youth is a controversial group that has been accused of being too close to the Duterte administration.

The hearing is still ongoing, and a decision will be made in the coming weeks.
The courts should stop this heartless and unnecessary policy change before it starts

As the states writhe in the complaint for declaratory judgment, federal officials note that the benefits are neither puissant nor primarily dependent on the government for substance.

For example, nearly 80% of nonelderly recipients of Medicaid are here illegally and are not eligible for additional benefits at state expense.

As Elton Wellberth, head of the Maryland Agricultural Commission, put it, the earth is changing, “Patterns are changing, and people need to adapt.”

And despite a steady stream of misinformation seemingly designed to reinforce the baseless stereotype of immigrants as a drain on society, analyses repeatedly show noncitizen immigrants are neither designed nor intended to breed lifelong dependency, but rather to give working people a critical boost in times of need. Ships on the former mill town’s picturesque Main Street are barely back on their feet more than a year after the catastrophic flooding.

Worshipping extremes was weather linked to climate change is creating hardships for farmers and repercussions of recipients of food, housing and medical assistance programmes for which they are legally eligible. For example, an Associated Press analysis of census data found that only 0.6% of Medicaid and 8.9% of food-assistance recipients were noncitizens. Overwhelmingly, the beneficiaries of these programmes were born in the US.

The libertarian Cato Institute came to similar conclusions, finding that not only are eligible immigrants less likely to receive welfare benefits, when they do, they tend to use those benefits less, at lesser public cost, than native-born Americans.

In a 2018 policy brief, the think tank’s research pointed out that immigrants have illegally are not eligible for entitlement or welfare benefits, other than emergency medical care.

Legal temporary migrants, such as students or those on work visas also are generally eligible for federal supports. Largely permanent residents must wait five years or more for eligibility unless they in a state that provides additional benefits at state expense.

In the court filing, the states argue the policy change would unlawfully constitute a radical overhaul of federal immigration law.

It is more than that – it is a radical嗤午fer of objective reality. The courts should stop this heartless and unnecessary policy change before it starts. – Tribune News Service

Faced with floods and suicides, US readies for a warmer world

Jodi Bowen

The town was devastated in 2016 by a so-called 1,000-year flood — meaning a once-in-a-century event that made it twice in two years in two years.

The town has become a study in the variability of climate change.

As Ellicott City has become more flooded, disgust flows across paved roads and sidewalks, instead of percolating down through the soil as it usually does, — a phenomenon known as ‘‘off-the-ground’’, which is one of the signs of a warming climate. 2016 floods, the city launched the Elkridge City Safe and Sound plan, which now demolishing some old buildings, making tunnels to carry water under roads and clearing waterways more regularly.

The proposal, characterised by AG Bob Ferguson as the ‘‘most patriotic thing people can do,’’ has driven legal immigrants to disenroll from medical care.

Opposition to Trump admin’s green-card rule

The Washington state Attorney General’s office is right to challenge a Trump administration rule that would make it harder for legal immigrants who have relied on public assistance to remain in the US.

The proposal, characterised by AG Bob Ferguson as an ‘‘un-American, anti-immigrant and unlawful, “ relies on a long-standing argument that legal immigrants are neither puissant nor primarily dependent on the government for substance.

The courts should stop this heartless and unnecessary policy change before it starts.
