Iran, France to hold nuclear talks today

We already have points of agreement, says Zarif

President Emmanuel Macron said the talks centered on the resumption of talks about ensuring the "irreversibility" of the nuclear deal with Iran and a "constitutional" framework for the nuclear relationship. "We have already exchanged ideas about points of agreement," Macron said. "This is the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution.

"It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution. "It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution. "It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution. "It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution. "It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution. "It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution. "It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, visited Sweden earlier this week for talks with Sweden's foreign minister. Zarif's talks in Paris may also see the Iranian foreign minister, a suave Western-Iranian dual national, seek to broker a diplomatic resolution. "It will be a chance to see if we can find a path to a resolution," Zarif's diplomatic adviser Emmanuel Bonne told the Elysee Palace. "It's the only way to solve the standoff and twice in the last month deployed his diplomatic adviser, International to Europe "Gambetta," to Paris to meet with Iranian officials.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.

The French foreign minister said earlier this month that it "needs no new measures" to talk to Iran after Trump's "no deal" stance and "zero day" deadline for negotiations. "We'll always have the option to talk," Macron had said.
Customs authority invites public to design its logo

Winner to get QR50,000
Entry to be submitted by October 1

The General Authority of Customs (GAC) has announced a competition to design a logo for the authority, which is aimed at being creative and talented citizens and residents "to participate in the contest.

The conditions and specifications of the competition have been listed on the GAC website, www.customs.gov.qa, and the winner will be awarded QR50,000.

The last date for submitting entries is October 1.

The specifications mention that the logo shall be creative, original, imaginative and in no conflict with the Customs rules. The logo shall be characterized in a manner that indicates a Qatari institution and is capable of representing the GAC.

The new GAC logo should differ from any other authority's logos. Also, two copies of the logo should be made, one of which includes the name "Qatar Authority of Customs" and the other "Qatar Customs," the condition shall differ.

Each participant can submit a maximum of three designs as a maximum. The logo shall be made using Adobe Photoshop and can be printed on various media and advertising purposes, and can stand out in color, black and white. The logo shall not lose its style or design without losing its shapes or symbols.

The design shall be submitted in a maximum size of 300 pixels/inch. and when printed on paper or in digital form, it shall be suitable for various purposes.

The design shall not contain any multiple symbols and/or elements of different design. The logo shall be designed. The logo shall be submitted through professional design programmes and have no obligations towards the owner or the winning design.

Each participant can submit a maximum of three designs as a maximum. The logo shall be made using Adobe Photoshop and can be printed on various media and advertising purposes, and can stand out in color, black and white. The logo shall not lose its style or design without losing its shapes or symbols.

The design shall be submitted in a maximum size of 300 pixels/inch. and when printed on paper or in digital form, it shall be suitable for various purposes.

The design shall not contain any multiple symbols and/or elements of different design. The logo shall be designed. The logo shall be submitted through professional design programmes and have no obligations towards the owner or the winning design.

Each participant can submit a maximum of three designs as a maximum. The logo shall be made using Adobe Photoshop and can be printed on various media and advertising purposes, and can stand out in color, black and white. The logo shall not lose its style or design without losing its shapes or symbols.

The design shall be submitted in a maximum size of 300 pixels/inch. and when printed on paper or in digital form, it shall be suitable for various purposes.

The design shall not contain any multiple symbols and/or elements of different design. The logo shall be designed. The logo shall be submitted through professional design programmes and have no obligations towards the owner or the winning design.
Two Israeli Arabs charged over island of Djerba

Israel has arrested two Israeli Arabs from the southern island of Djerba over suspected links to the Iranian-backed Hamas movement, Israeli media reported.

Two Israeli Arab men, aged 27 and 29, were arrested yesterday on suspicion of being Hamas activists as part of the latest investigation into the network, state news agency said.

The two men, from a Djerba village near the Egyptian border, are suspected of using the island for Hamas operations and to host fund-raising events.

Israel Arab youth are being targeted in the pro-Jewish state, says journalist.

Two Israeli Arabs were arrested on Sunday by Israeli security forces on the southern island of Djerba on suspicion of having ties to the Iranian-backed Hamas movement, Israeli media reported.

The arrests come amid heightened tensions between Israel and Iran, with several recent allegations of Iranian activities in the region.

Israel has detained a number of Hamas members in the past, including a 27-year-old Djerba resident who was arrested last year.

The arrests highlight the ongoing conflict between Israel and Hamas, which has been fighting a war with Israel since 2008.

Israel has accused Hamas of carrying out rocket attacks on Israeli settlements and towns, while Hamas has accused Israel of targeting its fighters and leaders.

The conflict has resulted in the deaths of hundreds of people, with both sides blaming each other for the violence.

The arrests come as Israel and the United States continue to exert pressure on Iran, with President Biden calling for a return to the nuclear deal.

Syrians streaming from Manar al-Amin and its surrounding countryside drive with their belongings northwest of the town of Saraqib in Idlib province yesterday.

Syria opens corridor for civilians to leave Idlib

Syria opened a corridor yesterday for civilians to leave the Idlib region, where forces are waging a battle against the Turkish-backed opposition.

The government said it had agreed to open the corridor after a recent ceasefire agreement.

The move comes amid heightened tensions between Syria and Turkey, with several recent fighting reports in the region.

Syria's President Bashar al-Assad said the country had agreed to open the corridor after receiving a request from the Turkish government.

The corridor will allow civilians to leave the area, a government spokewoman said.

The move is seen as a positive step towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

The opening of the corridor is also seen as a sign of improved relations between Syria and Turkey, with the two countries holding talks in recent months.

Syria's President Bashar al-Assad said the country had agreed to open the corridor after receiving a request from the Turkish government.

The move is seen as a positive step towards a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

The opening of the corridor is also seen as a sign of improved relations between Syria and Turkey, with the two countries holding talks in recent months.
Jubbaland leader, at odds with Mogadishu, wins a new term

Ramaphosa defends his fundraising campaign

South Africa’s President Cyril Ramaphosa on Friday defended his fundraising campaign after reports that the presidency has spent millions of rand to boost his political standing in the run-up to next year’s national elections. The scandal, which has become a major issue in the lead-up to next year’s elections, has also led to calls for Ramaphosa to resign.

The president has been accused of using the fundraising campaign to fund his political party, the African National Congress (ANC), and to boost his personal image. However, Ramaphosa has denied any wrongdoing and has said that the money raised will be used to support the party’s programs.

The controversy has also raised concerns about the transparency and accountability of the fundraising campaign. According to reports, the campaign has been used to pay for consultants, PR firms, and other expenses, raising questions about the use of public money.

Ramaphosa has said that the campaign is compliant with all legal requirements and that the money raised will be used to support the party’s programs. However, critics have called for an independent investigation into the campaign’s finances.

The scandal has also highlighted the challenges facing South Africa’s political system, as well as the need for greater transparency and accountability in the use of public funds.

Uganda demands NGOs financial records, donor lists

Uganda’s government has demanded that all national and international NGOs operating in the country provide detailed financial records and donor lists. The demand comes after concerns were raised about the transparency and accountability of NGOs in the country.

The government has said that it is committed to ensuring that NGOs operate in a transparent and accountable manner, and that they are held accountable for their actions.

The government has also said that it will take action against any NGOs that fail to comply with the demands.

The demands come amid concerns about the use of aid money in the country, with reports of corruption and mismanagement of funds.

Solar-radiated farms face an unexpected threat in Zimbabwe: hungry elephants

By Lungelo Ndlovu, Reporter

One of Zimbabwe’s first solar mini-grid projects, which was established to provide electricity to a small village near the Bulawayo border to help farmers get overisation problems, has been abandoned by the villagers. The project was established in 2016 by the villagers of Gorge irrigation project, which oversees the country's wildlife.

As worsening droughts lead to increasing water scarcity, such confrontations are becoming more common across Africa, such confrontations are becoming more common as the continent grapples with climate change, a new report has found.

Elephants have been an unexpected problem for farmers in southern Africa, where they have been using large irrigation systems to grow crops. However, as the climate changes, elephants are increasingly becoming a threat to farmers' livelihoods.

The report, which is based on interviews with farmers and experts, found that elephants are becoming more aggressive and destructive as their natural habitats are shrinking.

The report recommended that farmers should work with local authorities to find ways to reduce the impact of elephants on their farms and to protect their crops.

South Africa’s President Cyril Ramaphosa on Friday defended his fundraising campaign after reports that the presidency has spent millions of rand to boost his political standing in the run-up to next year’s national elections. The scandal, which has become a major issue in the lead-up to next year’s elections, has also led to calls for Ramaphosa to resign.

The president has been accused of using the fundraising campaign to fund his political party, the African National Congress (ANC), and to boost his personal image. However, Ramaphosa has denied any wrongdoing and has said that the money raised will be used to support the party’s programs.

The controversy has also raised concerns about the transparency and accountability of the fundraising campaign. According to reports, the campaign has been used to pay for consultants, PR firms, and other expenses, raising questions about the use of public money.

Ramaphosa has said that the campaign is compliant with all legal requirements and that the money raised will be used to support the party’s programs. However, critics have called for an independent investigation into the campaign’s finances.

The scandal has also highlighted the challenges facing South Africa’s political system, as well as the need for greater transparency and accountability in the use of public funds.

Uganda’s government has demanded that all national and international NGOs operating in the country provide detailed financial records and donor lists. The demand comes after concerns were raised about the transparency and accountability of NGOs in the country.

The government has said that it is committed to ensuring that NGOs operate in a transparent and accountable manner, and that they are held accountable for their actions.

The demands come amid concerns about the use of aid money in the country, with reports of corruption and mismanagement of funds.

One of Zimbabwe’s first solar mini-grid projects, which was established to provide electricity to a small village near the Bulawayo border to help farmers get overisation problems, has been abandoned by the villagers. The project was established in 2016 by the villagers of Gorge irrigation project, which oversees the country's wildlife.

As worsening droughts lead to increasing water scarcity, such confrontations are becoming more common across Africa, such confrontations are becoming more common as the continent grapples with climate change, a new report has found.

Elephants have been an unexpected problem for farmers in southern Africa, where they have been using large irrigation systems to grow crops. However, as the climate changes, elephants are increasingly becoming a threat to farmers' livelihoods.

The report, which is based on interviews with farmers and experts, found that elephants are becoming more aggressive and destructive as their natural habitats are shrinking.

The report recommended that farmers should work with local authorities to find ways to reduce the impact of elephants on their farms and to protect their crops.
Swift prepares to re-record her songs to regain control of catalogue

Trump backs off bid to slash foreign aid

California hotel worker held over mass shooting plan

Lawsuit over wildlife protection rollbacks

Swift is ready to re-record her songs to regain control of catalogue

When news of Swift’s battle with industry mogul David Geffen leaked, she purchased Big Machine Label Group for $300 million—daily, she told the Wall Street Journal, "I'd buy all of the new versions of the albums as if they were new, so I could own the masters.” Swift intended the move to be a way ofcourse getting back what she felt was rightfully hers, or at least getting more control over her music. She intended to re-record her catalogue, but there were questions about whether she had the legal right to do so.

The White House will not allow her to cut billions of dollars in federal aid to the Pacific Northwest, said a White House spokesperson. A spokesperson for the administration said the president would be "continuing to make sure the American people are taken care of" by securing cuts to foreign aid.

"It’s clear that there are many Americans who are going to be affected by these cuts, and the White House is committed to working with Congress to ensure that everyone’s voices are heard."

For full coverage of the US presidential candidates' 2020 campaigns, search "candidates" in the search bar.

Trump backs off bid to slash foreign aid

WASHINGTON

Donald Trump threatened to cut billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest, but he backed off after backlash from Congress.

"The White House is considering how to cut billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest, and the administration is working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said White House Press Secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders.

"We are working with Congress to ensure that everyone’s voices are heard, and we are committed to working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

Trump backs off bid to slash foreign aid

WASHINGTON

The New York Times reported that the Trump administration was considering cutting billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest.

"The White House is considering how to cut billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest, and the administration is working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

"We are working with Congress to ensure that everyone’s voices are heard, and we are committed to working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

Trump backs off bid to slash foreign aid

WASHINGTON

The New York Times reported that the Trump administration was considering cutting billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest.

"The White House is considering how to cut billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest, and the administration is working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

"We are working with Congress to ensure that everyone’s voices are heard, and we are committed to working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

Trump backs off bid to slash foreign aid

WASHINGTON

The New York Times reported that the Trump administration was considering cutting billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest.

"The White House is considering how to cut billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest, and the administration is working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

"We are working with Congress to ensure that everyone’s voices are heard, and we are committed to working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

Trump backs off bid to slash foreign aid

WASHINGTON

The New York Times reported that the Trump administration was considering cutting billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest.

"The White House is considering how to cut billions of dollars in foreign aid to the Pacific Northwest, and the administration is working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.

"We are working with Congress to ensure that everyone’s voices are heard, and we are committed to working with Congress to make sure that the American people are taken care of," said Sanders.
Rohingya refuse to leave camps in Bangladesh

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

Indonesia cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

Indonesia has cut off Internet access in the restive Papua region in a move that is likely to spark widespread protests in the nation’s far eastern territory. It has been reported that the move is aimed at curbing unrest in the region. The ban has been in place for several days now and has sparked widespread protests and concerns. It is not clear whether the ban will be lifted anytime soon. The government has cited security concerns as the reason for the move.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.

Troops’ sexual violence against Rohingya shows genocidal intent: UN report

The United Nations has released a report that describes the sexual violence perpetrated by the Myanmar military against Rohingya women as “systematic and widespread.” The report, which is based on testimonies from survivors, describes a range of abuses, including gang rapes, forced conversions, and torture.

EU targets ‘hurting’ Cambodia farmers

The European Union has targeted Cambodia’s sugar industry in a new trade dispute. The EU has imposed a 25% tariff on Cambodian sugar imports, citing environmental concerns and poor working conditions for workers in the industry. The EU’s move follows a similar move by the US earlier this year.

Java cuts Internet in Papua over unrest fears

Indonesia's government has cut off internet access in Papua, the country's largest province, to curb rising protests over land and resource issues. The action comes amid calls for authorities to return to talks with protesters over grievances in the region.

Philippines denies dengue vaccine plea

The Philippines has denied requests for a dengue vaccine, citing concerns about its efficacy. The move comes as the country experiences a dengue outbreak, with over 10,000 cases reported in the first quarter of 2019.
South Korea to scrap intel-sharing pact with Japan amid dispute over history

BY YONHAP NEWS AGENCY

South Korea said Saturday it will remove South Korea's military intelligence-sharing pact with Japan when it expires later this month, in a move seen as a retaliatory response to Japan's recent decision to remove South Korea as a “reliable partner” on security cooperation.

The announcement came after weeks of tensions between the two countries over Japan's decision to remove South Korea from its “white list” of countries that enjoy preferential trade status due to concerns over export controls.

South Korea's foreign minister, Kang Kyung-wha, on Saturday accused Japan of being “unilateral” in its decision to remove South Korea from the “white list” of preferred trading partners, saying it will lead to a deterioration of the two countries’ security cooperation.

South Korea and Japan have long relied on each other for intelligence-sharing, particularly in the area of nuclear non-proliferation. The two countries are also partners in the United Nations’ peacekeeping missions.

The decision to remove South Korea from the “white list” is seen as a reaction to Japan’s decision to impose tighter export controls on technologies it deems sensitive, including those used in the semiconductor and display industries.

South Korea has said the move will affect its trade with Japan and could lead to a trade war between the two countries.

The decision to remove South Korea from the “white list” is seen as a move by Japan to restrict access to advanced microchips and other crucial technologies.

The move is expected to hurt South Korea’s semiconductor and display industries, which rely heavily on Japanese imports.

South Korea has threatened to retaliate with its own export controls, including on Japanese-made equipment and materials used in the production of smartphones and other electronics.

The two countries have been at odds over Japan’s export controls, with South Korea accusing Tokyo of being overzealous in enforcing them.

The announcement came after weeks of tensions between the two countries over Japan’s decision to remove South Korea from its “white list” of countries that enjoy preferential trade status due to concerns over export controls.

South Korea’s foreign minister, Kang Kyung-wha, on Saturday accused Japan of being “unilateral” in its decision to remove South Korea from the “white list” of preferred trading partners, saying it will lead to a deterioration of the two countries’ security cooperation.

The decision to remove South Korea from the “white list” is seen as a reaction to Japan’s decision to impose tighter export controls on technologies it deems sensitive, including those used in the semiconductor and display industries.

South Korea has said the move will affect its trade with Japan and could lead to a trade war between the two countries.

The decision to remove South Korea from the “white list” is seen as a move by Japan to restrict access to advanced microchips and other crucial technologies.

The move is expected to hurt South Korea’s semiconductor and display industries, which rely heavily on Japanese imports.

South Korea has threatened to retaliate with its own export controls, including on Japanese-made equipment and materials used in the production of smartphones and other electronics.

The two countries have been at odds over Japan’s export controls, with South Korea accusing Tokyo of being overzealous in enforcing them.
Britain/Ireland

House prices would flounder in six months after no-deal Brexit

By Bernadette Fenton, Reuters

Britain's drifting property market could take a hit from a disorderly Brexit, with fears growing that a no-deal could cause near-term damage to a sector already under pressure from a fall in sterling.

The check-up歌舞 has hastened to assess the annual house price trend, with rising banging (in euros) by the end of March, and as much as 15% in London, a projected fall of 2% to 5% in the UK, and 5% to 10% in Ireland, said both UK and London house prices.

In Ireland, house prices fell by 0.1% in the year to March, its lowest since the 12 months to March, while house prices in Britain fell by 5.4% in the year to March from a peak of 2.5% in March 2018.

Immigration fell to three-year low: ONS

By David Ljunggren, Reuters

London

Immigration to Britain from outside the EU Union fell to a three-year low in the year to March, as the government warned yesterday.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) said the number of non-EU immigrants to Britain fell to its lowest level in three years in the year to March, from a peak of 236,000 set in the 12 months to March, while net inflows of non-EU migrants fell to 5,000, compared with 18,000 the year before. This is the lowest figure for immigration to Britain from outside the EU, which Britain's government has said is an important indicator of the success of its Brexit negotiations.

The ONS said the number of non-EU immigrants fell to 226,000 in the year to March, its lowest since the 12 months to the end of December-2016, its last annual statistics (ONS 2019).

The data is based on a new method of estimating the stock of immigrants to Britain, to introduce previous fears that had led to an undercounting of EU long-term immigrants and causing many non-EU residents to overstated figures. The ONS now estimates that 1.3 million people have left the UK since 2016, compared with 1.5 million estimated by the government.

The government said its continued to monitor the situation and to keep the numbers of immigrants to Britain from outside the EU to a level that is sustainable and that is consistent with the government's economic plan.

Irish govt says business costs not expected to rise from Brexit

By Conor Barnes, Reuters

Dublin

Ireland's drifts property market could take a hit from a disorderly Brexit, with fears growing that a no-deal Brexit could cause near-term damage to a sector already under pressure from a fall in sterling.

The drifts market is expected to continue to be under pressure in the year to March, with house prices falling by 0.1% in the year to March, its lowest since the 12 months to March, while house prices in Britain fell by 5.4% in the year to March from a peak of 2.5% in March 2018.

Meghan Markle offers glimpse of clothing line for women job seekers across Britain

By Megan Geoghegan, Reuters

Meghan Markle offers a glimpse of clothing line for women job seekers across Britain.

The Duchess of Sussex said she would launch a new clothing line to help women job seekers dress for success on Friday, as she unveiled plans to launch a clothing line to help women job seekers.

The Duchess of Sussex said she would launch a new clothing line to help women job seekers dress for success on Friday, as she unveiled plans to launch a clothing line to help women job seekers.

Meghan Markle makes a surprise appearance at the Duke and Duchess of Sussex's charity, Smart Works, which helps unemployed women find work, at the opening ceremony of the London Fashion Week. The Duchess of Sussex said she would launch a new clothing line to help women job seekers dress for success on Friday, as she unveiled plans to launch a clothing line to help women job seekers.
Conviction over crime that led to rioting in Germany

A German court sentenced “tattooed” and “glibly” (as the judge put it) a group of 67 migrants who were the ringleaders of a violent riot in the eastern German city of Chemnitz. The riot, which was sparked by the killing of a local man and his dogs, led to a wave of protests and violence in the region.

Italy: bodies found in the Mediterranean

Italian authorities have found the bodies of at least 18 migrants who drowned off the coasts of Libya and Tunisia. The migrants were believed to be part of a larger group that set sail from Libya in January but never made it to European shores.

Russia launches Fedor robot into space

Russia has launched an experimental humanoid robot named Fedor into space. The robot, which is designed to assist astronauts on the International Space Station, is part of a broader program to develop human-robot interactions in space.

Spanish vessel to pick up stranded migrants

The Spanish government has agreed to allow a Spanish rescue vessel, the Open Arms, to dock in Italy and pick up stranded migrants from a boat off the coast of Libya. The vessel has been operating in the Mediterranean for weeks, trying to rescue migrants from boats that are running out of food and water.

Chinese drone strikes in India’s Kashmir region

Chinese drone strikes in India's Kashmir region have raised tensions between the two countries. The strikes were reportedly carried out in response to alleged incursions by Indian troops into Chinese territory.

German minister says city needed rioting to end

German Interior Minister Joachim Herrmann has said that the rioting in Chemnitz was necessary to bring about a change in the city's political climate.

Italy’s M5S party and PD gain ground in opinion polls

Italy’s M5S party and PD are gaining ground in opinion polls, increasing pressure on the government to make concessions.

EUROPE

A German court sentenced “tattooed” and “glibly” (as the judge put it) a group of 67 migrants who were the ringleaders of a violent riot in the eastern German city of Chemnitz. The riot, which was sparked by the killing of a local man and his dogs, led to a wave of protests and violence in the region.

Russia launches Fedor robot into space

Russia has launched an experimental humanoid robot named Fedor into space. The robot, which is designed to assist astronauts on the International Space Station, is part of a broader program to develop human-robot interactions in space.

Spanish vessel to pick up stranded migrants

The Spanish government has agreed to allow a Spanish rescue vessel, the Open Arms, to dock in Italy and pick up stranded migrants from a boat off the coast of Libya. The vessel has been operating in the Mediterranean for weeks, trying to rescue migrants from boats that are running out of food and water.

Chinese drone strikes in India’s Kashmir region

Chinese drone strikes in India's Kashmir region have raised tensions between the two countries. The strikes were reportedly carried out in response to alleged incursions by Indian troops into Chinese territory.

German minister says city needed rioting to end

German Interior Minister Joachim Herrmann has said that the rioting in Chemnitz was necessary to bring about a change in the city's political climate.
In-depth probe needed in the case, says judge

Justice Mehta recalled that the Delhi High Court order had denied Chidambaram's bail, but he had sought that senior Congress leader has been barred for investigating the case for more than an hour-and-a-half and were locked in tense exchanges with lawyers, journalists and visitors.

Standing in front of the court, the lawyer said that the High Court order had denied bail to his client, Chidambaram, who had sought to appear before the court for perusal to the documents produced by the CBI.

The prosecution sought more documents. The judge said Chidambaram was deserving of bail and suggested that he should meet a conditional bail.

Chidambaram was also granted bail on an income tax case.

The CBI had earlier produced two key accused in the case, including Karti Chidambaram, the accused's son, and his wife, Sushmita, before the court.

The court had earlier permitted the CBI to conduct searches at Karti Chidambaram's residences and the couple’s homes.

The CBI had also produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The CBI had earlier produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The CBI had earlier produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The CBI had earlier produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The CBI had earlier produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The CBI had earlier produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The CBI had earlier produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.

The CBI had earlier produced in court the documents seized during the searches, which included emails, bank statements, and other evidence.

The prosecution argued that the documents were crucial in proving the accused's involvement in the scam.

The court refused to grant bail to Karti Chidambaram and his wife, saying that the case was serious and the accused could not be granted bail.

The court had also granted bail to Shashi Tharoor, the former MP from Thiruvananthapuram, who had been accused of fraud in a textile deal.

The court had earlier granted bail to Tharoor on charges of money laundering and false statements.
MEXICAN AUTHORITIES DO NOT KNOW THE NATIONALITY OF THE 170 CRIMINALS MEXICO WANTS TO EXIT THE UNITED STATES WITH ON A GRANT OF $8.5 MILLION.

Mexico’s new Treasury Minister, Arturo Herrera, said on Wednesday that the country will not release any of the 700 refugees it has on its border with the United States, as required under a recent immigration deal, until a resolution is reached on the fate of the 170 Mexican criminals whose extradition is being sought.

The announcement came as Herrera met with US Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin and US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo in Mexico City to discuss the ongoing border dispute.

The two officials were scheduled to meet with President-elect Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador on Thursday to discuss the issue, which has been a major obstacle to the implementation of the agreement.

Herrera said that Mexico would not comply with the order until a solution is found, adding that the country would continue to work with the United States to resolve the issue.

The deal, which was signed in October, requires Mexico to help the United States with the extradition of criminals and other suspects.

However, Mexico has refused to release any of the criminals until the agreement is fully implemented.

In a joint statement, Mnuchin and Pompeo said they were pleased with the progress made so far, but noted that more work needs to be done.

“Mexico has made significant progress towards fulfilling its commitments under the agreement. We believe that a resolution to this issue is possible,” the statement said.

The deal was signed as part of a broader effort to reduce illegal immigration and cross-border crime.

However, Mexico has been slow to implement the agreement, leading to tensions with the United States.

Herrera said that Mexico would continue to work with the United States to resolve the issue, and urged both countries to find a solution that is fair and just for all.

The deal includes provisions for the extradition of criminals, as well as measures to reduce illegal immigration and cross-border crime.

Mexico has been slow to implement the agreement, leading to tensions with the United States.

Herrera said that Mexico would continue to work with the United States to resolve the issue, and urged both countries to find a solution that is fair and just for all.

The deal includes provisions for the extradition of criminals, as well as measures to reduce illegal immigration and cross-border crime.

Mexico has been slow to implement the agreement, leading to tensions with the United States.

Herrera said that Mexico would continue to work with the United States to resolve the issue, and urged both countries to find a solution that is fair and just for all.

The deal includes provisions for the extradition of criminals, as well as measures to reduce illegal immigration and cross-border crime.

Mexico has been slow to implement the agreement, leading to tensions with the United States.

Herrera said that Mexico would continue to work with the United States to resolve the issue, and urged both countries to find a solution that is fair and just for all.

The deal includes provisions for the extradition of criminals, as well as measures to reduce illegal immigration and cross-border crime.

Mexico has been slow to implement the agreement, leading to tensions with the United States.

Herrera said that Mexico would continue to work with the United States to resolve the issue, and urged both countries to find a solution that is fair and just for all.

The deal includes provisions for the extradition of criminals, as well as measures to reduce illegal immigration and cross-border crime.
Pakistan film to be a Darling of Toronto festival

Prime Minister Khan: There is nothing more that we can do.

NAB refers petty cases to other authorities

Internews

The executive board met on Thursday to pass a resolution to approve the appointment of Abdul Q. Qureshi as the head of the Punjab Agriculture Marketing Board. The resolution was passed unanimously in the meeting.

Abdul Q. Qureshi was appointed as the chief executive officer of the Punjab Agriculture Marketing Board in 2017. He has extensive experience in the agriculture sector and has been instrumental in the implementation of various programs aimed at improving the farmers' income and addressing the agricultural challenges.

The resolution was passed unanimously in the meeting, with all members of the executive board expressing their confidence in Abdul Q. Qureshi's leadership and commitment to the mission of the Punjab Agriculture Marketing Board.
Loving Allah’s Creation

Causes of provision

L is an authentic narration narrated by Abdullah ibn Mas’ood, may Allah bless him and grant him peace, which was mentioned in At-Tabaraani in the collection of al-Kabeer 90/92, it says: “And upon Allah rely if you are believers.” [Al-Mulk: 15] However, some people have said that this verse is not a call to rely on Allah. Instead, it is a general call to believe in Allah. In fact, it is a reminder of the importance of relying on Allah in all aspects of life, from personal matters to national issues. Allah the Exalted said:

“Verily! He is the One Who provides for you the same as He provides birds: they set no store by building for them, and they neither ask (of anyone) nor refuse (it). Indeed, Allah will accomplish His purpose. Allah knows best what is concealed in the heart.” [Mafaatih ar-Rizq, 36]

The Qur’anic orientation of dependency on Allah is based on the belief that everything depends on Allah. This is mentioned in the Qur’an and the hadith literature.

Loving Allah’s Creation

Causes of provision

L is an authentic narration narrated by Abdullah ibn Mas’ood, may Allah bless him and grant him peace, which was mentioned in At-Tabaraani in the collection of al-Kabeer 90/92, it says: “And upon Allah rely if you are believers.” [Al-Mulk: 15] However, some people have said that this verse is not a call to rely on Allah. Instead, it is a general call to believe in Allah. In fact, it is a reminder of the importance of relying on Allah in all aspects of life, from personal matters to national issues. Allah the Exalted said:

“Verily! He is the One Who provides for you the same as He provides birds: they set no store by building for them, and they neither ask (of anyone) nor refuse (it). Indeed, Allah will accomplish His purpose. Allah knows best what is concealed in the heart.” [Mafaatih ar-Rizq, 36]

The Qur’anic orientation of dependency on Allah is based on the belief that everything depends on Allah. This is mentioned in the Qur’an and the hadith literature.

Loving Allah’s Creation

Causes of provision

L is an authentic narration narrated by Abdullah ibn Mas’ood, may Allah bless him and grant him peace, which was mentioned in At-Tabaraani in the collection of al-Kabeer 90/92, it says: “And upon Allah rely if you are believers.” [Al-Mulk: 15] However, some people have said that this verse is not a call to rely on Allah. Instead, it is a general call to believe in Allah. In fact, it is a reminder of the importance of relying on Allah in all aspects of life, from personal matters to national issues. Allah the Exalted said:

“Verily! He is the One Who provides for you the same as He provides birds: they set no store by building for them, and they neither ask (of anyone) nor refuse (it). Indeed, Allah will accomplish His purpose. Allah knows best what is concealed in the heart.” [Mafaatih ar-Rizq, 36]

The Qur’anic orientation of dependency on Allah is based on the belief that everything depends on Allah. This is mentioned in the Qur’an and the hadith literature.
With Governor Gavin Newsom’s signature on Monday, a landmark California bill took effect on Thursday for when police can legally use deadly force is law. Because the bill tries to walk the life-and-death line both for officers and other experts. That means police officers and other experts. That means police officers may pull the trigger only when “necessary,” as commonly used, are not always immediately obvious and will require fine-tuning through court decisions.

The goal is to simultaneously keep officers as safe as possible and to reduce the number of fatal shootings by police, many of which resulted in the deaths of unarmed black men, often without disciplinary action against the officers. The need for change begins with the understanding that too many people are killed by police without adequate reason. Americans who pose no threat ought to be able to live their lives without being killed by police, even — especially — when they are suspects of serious crime.

Under rules still in operation in most of the US, an officer can fire whenever the situation would permit another officer may shoot to kill whenever it is “reasonable” to do so — yet the shades of distinction between “reasonable” and “necessary,” as commonly used, are not always immediately obvious and will require fine-tuning through court decisions.

While the companies have fairly strong non-discrimination policies, enforcement is difficult, said MacKenzie. "Discrimination is potentially rife in the gig economy," she said in a recent paper by 2023 — according to Australian studies, discrimination fall hardest on those of racial discrimination, with black and brown riders or those with black and brown background. The consequences of this discrimination fall hardest on those who are discriminated against, but may also have social consequences for citizens in general," said MacKenzie, who has studied racial discrimination in ride-hailing apps.

"Discrimination is potentially rife in the gig economy," she said in a recent paper by 2023 — according to Australian studies, discrimination fall hardest on those of racial discrimination, with black and brown riders or those with black and brown background. The consequences of this discrimination fall hardest on those who are discriminated against, but may also have social consequences for citizens in general," said MacKenzie, who has studied racial discrimination in ride-hailing apps.

The platforms are credited with creating millions of jobs, giving homeowners an additional income, and providing mobility to underserved communities. The gig economy is expanding at breakneck pace, with millions of independent workers contracted for short-term jobs such as food delivery and car rides.

"Discrimination is potentially rife in the gig economy," she said in a recent paper by 2023 — according to Australian studies, discrimination fall hardest on those of racial discrimination, with black and brown riders or those with black and brown background. The consequences of this discrimination fall hardest on those who are discriminated against, but may also have social consequences for citizens in general," said MacKenzie, who has studied racial discrimination in ride-hailing apps.

Examples of discrimination abound in the gig economy, " she said in a recent paper by 2023 — according to Australian studies, discrimination fall hardest on those of racial discrimination, with black and brown riders or those with black and brown background. The consequences of this discrimination fall hardest on those who are discriminated against, but may also have social consequences for citizens in general," said MacKenzie, who has studied racial discrimination in ride-hailing apps.

"Discrimination is potentially rife in the gig economy," she said in a recent paper by 2023 — according to Australian studies, discrimination fall hardest on those of racial discrimination, with black and brown riders or those with black and brown background. The consequences of this discrimination fall hardest on those who are discriminated against, but may also have social consequences for citizens in general," said MacKenzie, who has studied racial discrimination in ride-hailing apps.

"Discrimination is potentially rife in the gig economy," she said in a recent paper by 2023 — according to Australian studies, discrimination fall hardest on those of racial discrimination, with black and brown riders or those with black and brown background. The consequences of this discrimination fall hardest on those who are discriminated against, but may also have social consequences for citizens in general," said MacKenzie, who has studied racial discrimination in ride-hailing apps.
Managing the next gold rush

Sydney E. Berke
Washington, DC

The International Seabed Authority (ISA) has launched the second phase of the largest and most ambitious deep-ocean mining exploration and development project in the world. The project, known as the Automated Robotic Submersible, will be used to mine cobalt, manganese, and other minerals from the ocean floor. The project is expected to provide a significant boost to the global supply of these minerals, which are used in a variety of industries, including electronics and renewable energy. However, the project has also sparked concerns about environmental impact, with some experts warning that it could damage marine ecosystems. The ISA has vowed to ensure that the project is conducted in an environmentally responsible manner, but the challenge of balancing economic benefits with environmental protection remains a significant issue. As the project moves forward, it will be important to closely monitor its impact and ensure that it does not harm marine life or disrupt ocean ecosystems.

Qatar’s support for Uyghurs welcomed

Washington, DC

Problems. That reflects how difficult currently stalled because of financial only active seaﬂoor mining project the mineral rights of more than 50% earth elements and other sought-US import tariff s by restricting its some three miles below – and yet it is seas – or, more precisely, the seaﬂoor Harbour, across the bay from the spot walk of Jamaica’s Kingston Authority (ISA) sits perched to analyse data from nearly 4.7mn鳥 and colleagues used the FDA-...radiology society of radiologists in about 30% to 45% of MRI scans in (MRI) may be exposed to a chemical essential to the health of the woman pregnancy is not recommended unless these include cobalt, manganese, and increase in demand for materials innovations, such as better satellite mining on land. W e should look at fi rst like a barren and forbidding wasteland is actually the largest biome on the planet, populated by a plethora of deep-seabed flora and fauna, more than half of which were known about the role these species some of these formations are millions of years to accrue; disturbing them, or even covering them in the sediment, mining on land may soon decide it can ill aff ord. We should look at fi rst like a barren and forbidding wasteland is actually the largest biome on the planet, populated by a plethora of deep-seabed flora and fauna, more than half of which were known about the role these species some of these formations are millions of years to accrue; disturbing them, or even covering them in the sediment, mining on land.

Bird and colleagues are involved with this study, has researched GBCAs in MRIs. In general terms, these compounds are being detained arbitrarily and forced from their families and forcing people putting innocent people in detention by the Chinese government. The United Nations, which 22 countries expressed concern about China’s conduct in the remote region.”

In 2019, the United Nations (UN) Security Council voted to create a UN Human Rights Council (HRC) resolution on the plight of Uighur Muslims. The resolution recommended the government to remove its name from the UN’s list of countries of concern and to take steps to address human rights concerns. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 21 in favor, with 1 against (the US), and 3 abstentions (Burma, China, and Russia). The resolution included a call for China to respect the rights of the Uighur Muslims and to ensure that they enjoy the same rights as other citizens of China. The resolution also called for an independent investigation into the detention and imprisonment of Uighur Muslims.

A New York Times article titled “China’s Crackdown on Uighurs is Breaching a Line” highlighted the harsh conditions faced by Uighur Muslims in China. The article described the mass internment of Uighur Muslims in so-called “vocational training centers” and the forced sterilization of women in these centers. The article also reported that the Chinese government is using surveillance technology to track the movements of Uighur Muslims and to monitor their activities.

The Chinese government has repeatedly denied these allegations, claiming that the centers are vocational training centers and that the surveillance technology is used to prevent terrorism and crime. However, many experts and human rights groups have dismissed these claims, citing the lack of transparency and the absence of independent investigations.

Despite this controversy, the Chinese government continues to implement policies that have targeted Uighur Muslims. The government has imposed strict restrictions on the use of the Uighur language, restricted access to social media and other communication platforms, and imposed travel restrictions on Uighur Muslims. These policies have had a significant impact on the daily lives of Uighur Muslims, often leading to isolation, discrimination, and limited access to economic and educational opportunities.

The international community has condemned China’s actions and has called for an end to the detention and imprisonment of Uighur Muslims. However, the Chinese government has refused to acknowledge these allegations or to make any changes to its policies.

In conclusion, the situation of Uighur Muslims remains a significant human rights issue. The Chinese government must respect the rights of Uighur Muslims and ensure that they enjoy the same rights as other citizens of China. The international community must continue to press for accountability and to hold the Chinese government accountable for its actions.

Live issues

Pregnant women may be exposed to MRI contrast agent

Women who don’t know they’re pregnant when an MRI contrast agent is administered may be at risk of damage to the developing fetus. MRI contrast agents are used to enhance the signal from tissues in the body during an MRI scan. The agents are used to improve the quality of the images and to help diagnose certain conditions. However, recent studies have suggested that exposure to these agents during pregnancy may be associated with an increased risk of birth defects. The studies have also suggested that long-term exposure to these agents may increase the risk of cancer and other health problems in adulthood.

A recent study published in the journal Radiology evaluated the effects of MRI contrast agents on pregnancy outcomes. The study found that exposure to MRI contrast agents during pregnancy was associated with an increased risk of birth defects, including neural tube defects and heart defects. The study also found that long-term exposure to these agents was associated with an increased risk of certain types of cancer in adulthood.

The results of this study have important implications for women of childbearing age. It is important for women to inform their healthcare providers of their pregnancy status before undergoing an MRI scan. Women who are pregnant or who are planning to become pregnant should also inform their healthcare providers of their pregnancy status before undergoing an MRI scan. Women should also inform their healthcare providers if they are planning to become pregnant after an MRI scan.

It is important for healthcare providers to carefully consider the benefits and risks of administering MRI contrast agents to pregnant women. In some cases, the benefits of administering the agent may outweigh the risks. However, in other cases, the risks of administering the agent may outweigh the benefits. Healthcare providers should carefully weigh the potential benefits and risks of administering MRI contrast agents to pregnant women before making a decision.

The American College of Radiology has published guidelines for the safe use of MRI contrast agents during pregnancy. The guidelines recommend that MRI contrast agents be administered only when there is a compelling indication for their use, and only when the potential benefits outweigh the risks. The guidelines also recommend that women of childbearing age be informed of the risks and benefits of administering MRI contrast agents during pregnancy.

It is important for women to be aware of the potential risks associated with administering MRI contrast agents during pregnancy. Women should inform their healthcare providers of their pregnancy status before undergoing an MRI scan, and should carefully consider the benefits and risks of administering MRI contrast agents to pregnant women. Healthcare providers should also carefully consider the potential risks associated with administering MRI contrast agents to pregnant women before making a decision.

The results of this study highlight the importance of carefully considering the potential risks associated with administering MRI contrast agents during pregnancy. It is important for healthcare providers to carefully weigh the potential benefits and risks of administering MRI contrast agents to pregnant women before making a decision.

The results of this study have important implications for women of childbearing age. It is important for women to inform their healthcare providers of their pregnancy status before undergoing an MRI scan. Women who are pregnant or who are planning to become pregnant should also inform their healthcare providers of their pregnancy status before undergoing an MRI scan. Women should also inform their healthcare providers if they are planning to become pregnant after an MRI scan.
Qatar resident donates land to rehabilitate Kerala flood victims

A Qatar-based Indian businessman's benevolent gesture will go a long way in the rehabilitation of the families who have been left homeless by a massive landslide and flood that wiped out the Kavalappara village in Malappuram district of Kerala.

The natural calamity that struck on the night of August 8 took 48 lives while leaving hundreds with just the clothes they were wearing. Ahammed Iqbal, a native of Kuniyil in the same district, has offered 1.5 acres of land at Karad near Nilambur for rehabilitating those who are living now in temporary relief camps.

“I understand the hardships being faced by those affected by the landslide and I am trying to do my part,” said Iqbal who purchased the land a few years ago for agricultural purposes. Crops including tapioca and plantain are currently being grown there.

Malappuram collector Jafar Malik told Gulf Times over the phone from Kerala that the district administration is chalking out a plan to rehabilitate the flood victims at Kavalappara and various localities in Nilambur.

“We have received the documents (from Iqbal) and the officials concerned are looking into the possibilities of making use of the land. Steps for rehabilitation will be taken in consultation with the affected families,” he said.

Ahammed Iqbal

Malappuram district collector Jafar Malik and other officials visiting Kavalappara.

An Indian Air Force helicopter during rescue and relief operations at Nilambur.

‘Back to School’ campaign continues at KidZania

Launched by the Ministry of Education and Higher Education for the sixth consecutive year, the ‘Back to School’ campaign is continuing at KidZania Doha and Mall of Qatar in order to prepare school students for the new academic year that begins on August 25. The campaign is being held until tomorrow in co-operation with a number of partners and supporters under the slogan “With Education We Build Qatar.”