The Cabinet’s regular meeting chaired by His Excellency Prime Minister Sheikh Abdullah bin Nasser bin Khalifa Al-Thani yesterday approved a draft law on regulating voluntary work.

The draft law includes provisions related to the conditions and permit for the practice of voluntary work and the rights and duties of the volunteer and the beneficiary. Following the meeting, which was held at the Al-Manama Palace, His Excellency the Minister of Justice and Acting Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs Dr. Ali bin Jassim Al-Hashemi stated that the Cabinet reviewed topics on the meeting’s agenda.

The Cabinet also approved a draft decision on the rules of proving the origin of imported goods, which leads to the application of the necessary precautions and controls for the acquisition, and control of placing ads.

The Cabinet also adopted a draft decision of His Excellency the Minister of Justice and Acting Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs Dr. Issa Saad al-Jafali al-Mannai on amendments to the draft decision to amend some of the provisions of Resolution No. 43 of 2017 establishing the Standing Committee for Farms and Farm-Environment.

The Cabinet also approved a draft decision to amend some of the provisions of Law No. 10 of 2019 regulating the acquisition of dangerous animals and organisms, as well as the necessary precautions and measures to ensure that dangerous animals and organisms do not escape. The Ministry of Municipality and Environment prepared two draft decisions of His Excellency the Minister of Municipality and Environment on the conditions and controls for the acquisition, import and aspect of dangerous animals and organisms, and on the necessary precautionary measures.

The Cabinet then approved a draft decision containing visa requirements for diplomatic, official and private passports between the governments of Qatar and Vietnam. The Cabinet also gave approval for two draft decisions to implement some of the provisions of Law No. 21 of 2011 regulating the protection of endangered species animals and organisms.

The Cabinet also gave approval for accession to Montreal Protocol of 1989 on ozone-depleting substances and certain other acts committed on board aircraft, which amended Tokyo Convention of 1963.

The Cabinet also approved a draft decision to implement Resolution No. 1 of 2012 on the regulation of operated goods, which leads to the application of the necessary precautionary measures in the case of customs actions on a local and international level.

The Cabinet also discussed the preparation of this draft decision to implement Resolution No. 21 of 2011 on the regulation of the origin of imported goods.

A part of the 'Doha – The Capital of Islamic Youth 2019' activities, the Qatar Scientific Club, in coordination with the Qatar Scientific Club, aims to stimulate youth creativity and innovation, which consolidates Qatar’s position as a country that achieves the demands of development and prosperity.

Dr Abdulrahman Saleh Khamis, executive director of the Qatar Scientific Club, said that the Doha Oasis for Innovation event from Thursday, August 29, 2019, presents an opportunity for innovators from the Islamic world to participate in the international event to ensure transparency and quality. About the conditions of the individual competitions and its division into two competitions: the group and individual competition, its traditions and rules, he pointed out that it is available to everyone between the ages of 13 and 18.

Those wishing to participate from the Islamic world must register through the website Oasis of Doha, the capital of Islamic Youth, provided that they obtain a patent or its equivalent for the innovations of young people in the Islamic world. Innovations are distributed to five teams and devices that help innovators provide workshops and all tools similar to the Exhibition of Inventions of Geneva, as well as the participation of innovators from the Islamic world in the opening of the UNWTO World Tourism Conference in Kuala Lumpur.

The main objective of the group competitions is to confirm cooperation and exchange of experiences among the youth of the Islamic world in the fields of science and technology, and the winners of the group competitions will be awarded in the individual competitions, and the winners of the group competitions honored during the closing ceremony of the Doha – The Capital of Islamic Youth 2019. Fatima al-Mohannadi, managing director of the Qatar Scientific Club, said that the club will be ready to receive the participants from various Islamic countries.

Al-Baker pointed out that it is a pleasure and an honour to meet Prime Minister Mahathir, who is visiting Qatar. During the meeting, they reviewed military relations between the two countries and ways to strengthen and develop them.

Al-Baker took the opportunity to discuss several issues of mutual interest, including developments in the global aviation industry and Qatar Airways’ operations. Al-Baker said that Qatar Airways will initially start with a four-times weekly service to Langkawi via Penang, which marks Qatar Airways’ third destination in Malaysia after Kuala Lumpur and Penang.

HMC highlights key role of breakfast for school students

Continuing its efforts to help students in Qatar stay physically and mentally fit during the new academic year, the Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC) yesterday issued tips for healthy eating.

Dr Jennifer Jurado, paediatric clinical dietitian at HMC, urged parents to ensure that every child takes a proper and healthy breakfast before leaving for school. The physician, who noted breakfast is the most important meal of the day, said children who went to school without breakfast felt sleepy, tired and less interested in the classroom. While explaining the benefits of having breakfast, Dr Jennifer said that breakfast can avoid excess weight in both children and adults and it helps them stay more active during the whole day. Children who eat breakfast tend to have higher school attendance, less tardiness and fewer hunger-induced stomach aches in the morning. They score higher scores as they concentrate better and maintain a better mood throughout the day. Parents who make students eat breakfast in a challenging, quick manner to tempt children to wake up early and that will help them get enough time to take breakfast before leaving home. She added that the best options include toasted bread, boiled egg, fresh fruit, wholegrain waffles, low-sugar wholegrain cereal, wholegrain toast and yoghurt. These could be easily prepared. If children are reluctant to have breakfast at home, parents should pack the food and give it to them in the bus or school. Dr Jurado lauded schools in Qatar for not stocking junk food and soft drinks in their cafeterias.

Tilted Interchange tunnel to open on Sunday

The Public Works Authority (Ashghal) has announced that the Tilted Interchange tunnel will be opened on Sunday evening to traffic from Al Gharrafa towards Al Rayyan. The interchange tunnel was built as part of Khalifa Avenue road project implemented in co-ordination with General Directorate of Traffic. In a bid to allow for opening of the new tunnel and accelerate the completion of remaining works at the Tilted Interchange, Ashghal will implement a temporary traffic diversion for a month. During the closure, traffic from Al Luqta Street and main Al Gharrafa Street through the Tilted Interchange signals will not be able to go towards Huwar Street. Traffic must continue towards Gharsat Al Gharrafa Interchange and follow signs to reach destinations. Ashghal has asked road users heading towards local roads and Dukhan to make use of the existing Al Gharrafa Street instead of the new tunnel. Ashghal will install road signs and has requested road users to abide by the 50km speed limit.

Ministry extends closing date of tender

The Ministry of Education and Higher Education yesterday said the closing date of the call for tender, with regard to updating the student assessment and evaluation system, has been changed from September 2 to 9. The Procurement and Contracts Section of the ministry had invited specialised companies to submit their bids to obtain the related documents before August 29, as reported in Gulf Times yesterday. Yemeni government forces retook Aden from southern rebels

Yemeni government forces retook the southern port city of Aden from southern separatists who were attempting to push into the capital Sanaa, Yemeni defence ministry sources said on Monday.

The battle for Aden came after a week of fighting that saw the separatists’ forces lose control of the port city, the government sources said. The separatists had seized control of Aden in 2017 but lost it to government forces last year.

The restoration of government control over Aden was seen as a major gain in Yemen’s civil war, which has been going on for more than five years and has seen no end in sight.

The separatists had launched a series of attacks against the government and its allies since last year, but the government forces have been able to recapture several areas.

The latest gains come as the war in Yemen continues to escalate, with both sides suffering heavy losses.

The UN has called for an immediate end to the conflict and has urged all parties to engage in meaningful talks to achieve a lasting peace.

The UAE also announced that it had launched a campaign to neutralise the separatists, casting itself as the more stabilising force in the region.

However, the separatists have not given up, and their attacks have continued.

The latest gains for the government forces have been welcomed by both the international community and the Yemeni people, who have been suffering from the conflict for more than five years.

The UAE also downplayed reports that it had been seeking to engage with the separatists, casting itself as the more stabilising force in the region.

Meat eaters are fueling the Amazon Fire

By Glavsky de Soutor

The Earth’s lungs are on fire. As you might have already heard and reported on, thousands of fires are currently destroying the Amazon rainforest in Brazil. The climate change crisis is escalating and it seems as if the Amazon rainforest is not far behind. According to Brazil’s Environment Ministry, the number of forest fires increased by 47.5% in August 2019, with more than twice the fires in the Amazon region, according to Brazil’s Space Agency. The planet is losing an important carbon sink, and the fires are directly affecting carbon emissions.

As the world watches in horror, a question needs to be reflected on: What is the main reason for the long-term destruction of the Amazon region? It is in the world’s global diet for meats. Brazil is home to around 200 million cows, and is the largest meat exporter in the world. However, the destruction of the Amazon rainforest is due to cattle farming.

Brazil exports cattle, which later feed on the Amazon’s forest. Cattle farming in the Amazon region has been the main driver of destruction of the Amazon. According to the Brazilian government, cattle farming has been the main cause of the destruction of the Amazon rainforest. In addition, cattle farming in the Amazon region has been the main reason for the destruction of the Amazon rainforest. Wellness Meal Plan

By Sarah Teather

As far as I can remember, I’ve been struggling with my weight and health all my life. I’ve tried all sorts of diets, from fad diets to cleanses, to no diet at all. I’ve tried everything from slimming pills to weight loss shakes. But nothing seemed to work. I was always hungry, and I just couldn’t lose weight. I felt like I was stuck in a cycle of weight gain and weight loss.

I decided to try something different. I started researching the science behind weight loss and came across something called “Interval Training.” It was a method of training that involved short bursts of intense exercise followed by periods of rest. The idea was that it would help you burn more calories and improve your metabolism.

I decided to give it a try. I started with 30 minutes of interval training every day for five days. I noticed a significant difference in my energy levels and overall mood. I felt more energized and less tired. I also noticed a decrease in my appetite and a reduction in my weight.

I continued with this routine for several months and saw even more impressive results. I lost a total of 25 pounds and my energy levels skyrocketed. I was able to maintain this weight loss through healthy eating and regular exercise. I also noticed a significant improvement in my mental health, with less stress and anxiety.

Six reasons why Apple Cider Vinegar should be your next buy!

By Keys2Balance

1. New Age Weight Loss

Apple Cider Vinegar is a natural weight loss aid. It contains a natural enzyme called acetic acid, which helps to break down fats and carbohydrates in the body. It also contains a compound called pectin, which helps to reduce the absorption of dietary fat.

2. Detox and Toning

Apple Cider Vinegar helps to detoxify the body and improve circulation. It contains a compound called methylsulfonylmethane (MSM), which helps to reduce inflammation and improve joint function.

3. Improved Digestion

Apple Cider Vinegar helps to improve digestion and reduce bloating. It contains a compound called pectin, which helps to reduce the absorption of dietary fat.

4. Improved Heart Health

Apple Cider Vinegar helps to improve heart health by reducing blood pressure and cholesterol levels. It also contains a compound called quercetin, which helps to reduce inflammation and improve blood flow.

6. Relieving the Acid Reflux

For maximum efficiency, two teaspoons of raw apple cider vinegar should be diluted in a glass of water and consumed on an empty stomach. Apple cider vinegar should be consumed after meals to aid in digestion and reduce bloating.

South African lawmakers told Eskom may need more bailouts if funding plan fails

By Wessel Basson, Reuters

Johannesburg (Reuters) - South Africa’s parliament on Wednesday backed Eskom's plan to financially reconstruct the national utility, but lawmakers said it would need more bailouts if the funding plan failed.

MPs said at a parliamentary committee hearing that the plan could only work if the utility was no longer profligate, with some calling for the ouster of the utility's chief executive for failing to reform the company.

The utility's plan, expected to be finalized next month, has earned the backing of the treasury and financial regulator, which said it needed to conserve financial resources.

But many lawmakers said the utility would need more funding if it is unable to attract private investors, and that the state would have to shoulder a bigger share.

Eskom said it could not comment until it had received a report from an independent auditor, which is due in September.

The utility said it had already requested a bailout from the state last year, but was told it would only receive financial help if it implemented reforms.

Lawmakers also demanded that the utility's board be reconstituted, saying it was not fit to monitor the implementation of the plan.

The utility's finance director said the board had been placed under the control of the secretary to the treasury, and that the utility would not comment until the auditor's report was final.

Eskom, South Africa’s national utility, plans to float a bond worth $1.7 billion on September 30, the utility’s finance director said at the parliamentary hearing.

Eskom has struggled to pay its electricity suppliers and some have stopped delivering power to the utility.

The utility's plan includes a three-year restructuring program, which will be reviewed every year, and an independent audit of its financial statements.

Lawmakers said they were concerned about the utility's ability to execute its plan, and that the state would have to shoulder a bigger share if the private sector was unwilling to invest.

Eskom recently signed a deal with a Chinese state-owned company to build a new coal-fired power station.

The utility has also been seeking to sell off its assets, including a stake in a wind farm, to raise funds to pay off creditors.

The utility's plan has been met with skepticism by some lawmakers, who said it was too ambitious and would not solve the utility's core problems.

Some lawmakers said the utility should be nationalized, while others said it should be broken up into smaller, more manageable units.

Let it burn: US fights wildfires with fire, backed by Trump

The White House has pulled the trigger on a $3 billion wildfire-fighting package that it had been trying to sell to Congress for months. The package is a combination of Republican and Democratic resources that had been held up by President Donald Trump and his administration as part of a broader coronavirus relief effort. The package includes $1.7 billion to bolster fire control and prevention efforts, $700 million to help communities recover from previous wildfires, and $787 million to support the Forest Service and the agency's wildfire suppression efforts.

The legislation was approved by both houses of Congress and signed into law by Trump on March 13. It was a key component of the coronavirus relief package that was being negotiated by the White House and the Democratic leadership in Congress. The package was designed to provide a boost to the economy and help fund the federal government through the end of the fiscal year. In addition to the fire funding, the package includes $2.2 trillion in economic assistance, $750 billion in health care funding, and $250 billion in direct payments to individuals.

We learned from our mistakes of putting fires out. Building a new, permanent solution, tackling the cause of the fires, that's where the legislation is headed, Trump said. The White House had been pushing for a fire stimulus package for months, but the legislation had been held up by the administration as part of a broader coronavirus relief effort. The fire funding was included in the package as a way to provide a boost to the economy and help fund the federal government through the end of the fiscal year. BANGKOK street sweepers win contract with pet to work

By Jiraporn Kuhakan, Bangkok

A street in Bangkok, Thailand, has been transformed into a living space for the 2012 US Senate elections. The US Senate elections in 2012 have been taking place across the country, with the main campaign finance and the political landscape shifting towards a more decentralized and localized approach.

In addition, a number of elections have been held throughout the country, including the mayoral elections in Bangkok, which have been closely watched by many observers. The campaign period has been marked by a significant increase in political advertising, with candidates using a variety of tactics to try to gain an advantage.

In Bangkok, the campaign has been particularly intense, with candidates using a mix of traditional and new media to try to reach voters. The mayoral race has been particularly competitive, with several candidates running on platforms of economic development and social change. The election is expected to have a significant impact on the city's future, with the winning candidate likely to have a significant influence on the direction of the city.

In other areas of the country, the campaign has been less intense, with many candidates running on traditional platforms of economic development and social welfare. However, there have been some notable exceptions, with candidates in some areas running on platforms of cultural development and the promotion of local arts and culture. The elections have provided an opportunity for voters to express their views on a wide range of issues, and it will be interesting to see how the results will shape the political landscape of the country in the years to come.

EU condemns ‘sinister’ move by Johnson

European parliament’s condemnation of Johnson’s move to suspend parliament comes after Brexit crisis escalates

The European parliament has condemned Boris Johnson’s move to suspend parliament on September 9, just days before the October 31 deadline. The MEPs expressed concern that the move could prevent the UK from ratifying the withdrawal agreement with the EU, which would mean that the UK would exit the EU without a deal.

The European parliament’s resolution on Johnson’s move was adopted by 274 votes in favor, 70 against and 137 abstentions. The resolution condemned Johnson’s move as ‘sinister’ and urged the UK to respect the rule of law and democratic institutions.

The resolution highlighted the risk posed by Johnson’s move to the EU’s ability to deliver a stable future EU-UK relationship, which is crucial for the welfare of all citizens, UK citizens, being governed by an independent judiciary. The resolution noted that the suspension of parliament could potentially result in the UK leaving the EU without a deal, which would be a deep constitutional crisis.

The European parliament also expressed concern about the possibility of a no-deal Brexit, which would pose a significant threat to the economy and the welfare of all citizens. The resolution called on the UK government to respect the rule of law, democratic institutions and the EU’s ability to deliver a stable future EU-UK relationship.

Irish deputy PM clashes with Barclay over backstop

The Irish deputy prime minister, Simon Coveney, has accused the UK of trying to undermine the Good Friday Agreement by delaying talks on the backstop.

Coveney said the backstop was an “essential element” of the withdrawal agreement and that the UK was seeking to disincentivise talks on the backstop. He said that the UK government was trying to “get out of” the backstop and that the UK was seeking to “get out of the negotiations on the backstop altogether.”

Coveney’s comments came during a meeting with the Irish government’s cabinet on September 10. The meeting was called to discuss the ongoing Brexit negotiations and the possibility of a no-deal Brexit.

Coveney said that the UK government was trying to “get out of” the backstop by trying to delay talks on the backstop and by seeking to “get out of the negotiations on the backstop altogether.” He said that the UK government was trying to “get out of the negotiations on the backstop altogether” by seeking to “get out of the negotiations on the backstop altogether.”

Coveney’s comments came as the UK government was attempting to delay talks on the backstop in order to try to force the EU to agree to a deal that would allow the UK to leave the EU without a deal. The UK government has been trying to pressure the EU to agree to a deal that would allow the UK to leave the EU without a deal, and has been seeking to use the backstop as a lever to try to force the EU to agree to a deal that would allow the UK to leave the EU without a deal.

Young drug dealers in Bristol offered driving lessons, job training, and diverting youngsters away from crime. The scheme, which focuses on the area of Englefield, aims to target young people who are at risk of exclusion and criminal activity. The organizers, Avon and Somerset police, say the scheme is the only one of its kind in the country and is designed to divert young people away from crime.

In England, the scheme is set to target young people caught drug-dealing, with the aim of diverting them from a life of crime. The scheme is part of a wider strategy to reduce youth crime in the area.

Passengers who have seen their flights cancelled should be reimbursed for their travel costs. The Civil Aviation Authority said there should not be any compensation for flights that were not cancelled, and it is unlikely that the flights will be rescheduled.

Couple find treasure hoard worth millions

A recently discovered hoard of coins has been valued at millions of pounds. The find, which was made in a field in the UK, contains a significant number of medieval coins.

The find was made by metal detectorists, who discovered a large number of coins that were previously unknown. The coins, which date back to the 12th century, were found in a field near the town of Suffolk.

The hoard has been valued at around £1 million, and the find is expected to be the largest of its kind in recent years. The find is likely to attract a lot of interest from historians and collectors.

Musicians, drivers die in plane crash

A musician and his tour manager were killed in a plane crash in Sweden. The plane was carrying the musician and his band to a gig in Denmark, and crashed near the town of Ulricehamn.

The musicians involved in the accident were Johnathan Golden, 30, and his tour manager, Johnathan Golden, 30, from London. The plane was carrying the musicians, along with their equipment and a road manager.

The plane crashed near an airport in Sweden, and the musicians were killed in the accident. The cause of the crash is still under investigation.

BA told to reimburse travellers for e-mail blunder

BA has been ordered to reimburse passengers who were affected by the airline's decision to cancel flights. The airline was due to cancel flights to some destinations, but the cancellations were not announced in time.

The Civil Aviation Authority said that the airline should have informed passengers of the cancellation in advance, and that the passengers should be reimbursed for their travel costs.

The airline has also been ordered to pay compensation to passengers who were affected by the cancellations. The compensation will be based on the cost of the flights, and will be paid to passengers who were affected by the cancellations.

Time out

The finding of a large hoard of coins in Suffolk is causing excitement among historians and collectors. The hoard is likely to be the largest of its kind in recent years, and will attract a lot of interest from museums and collectors.

The hoard is expected to be valued at around £1 million, and will be displayed in a museum as soon as possible. The museum is currently being discussed with historians and collectors, and it is likely that the hoard will be displayed in the near future.
Feeling its WWII wounds, Poland seeks German reparations 80 years on

By Stanislav Ważak and Feist

In Warsaw, which has now become a permanent host of world leaders, Poland is feeling the 80th anniversary of World War II. The city is also feeling the pain of its WWII wounds as it seeks reparations from Germany. The reparations issue has been a contentious one since the end of World War II, and it is a point of frustration for many people in Poland.

FEELING ITS WWII WOUNDS

Poland’s feeling of pain and frustration is evident in the city’s current political climate. The right-wing Law and Justice (PiS) party, which has been in power since 2015, is focused on唤起 their history of suffering and seeking reparations from Germany. The party has been vocal in its demand for reparations, stating that Poland has been wronged by Germany in the past.

A HISTORY OF REPARATIONS

Poland has been seeking reparations from Germany for decades. The reparations issue has become more pressing in recent years, as the PiS party has made it a central issue of their political agenda. The party’s goal is to get Germany to pay for the damage caused during World War II.

THE ROLE OF THE LAW AND JUSTICE PARTY

The Law and Justice party has been pushing for reparations in a number of ways. One of the most prominent ways is through the issue of reparations. The party has been calling for a compensation package that includes financial reparations, apologies, and apologies for past wrongs.

THE FUTURE OF REPARATIONS

It is unclear what the future of the reparations issue will be. The German government has been reluctant to address the issue, stating that it is a matter that should be handled by the courts. However, the Polish government remains determined to get reparations, and it will continue to push for the issue in the years to come.

Poland has a history of feeling wronged by Germany, and it is likely that the reparations issue will remain a point of contention for many years to come. The relationship between Poland and Germany is complex, and it will take time to resolve the reparations issue.

Manila rollout hit by lack of funds

Universal Health Care plan of Health Secretary Francisco Duque is facing a serious realisation. We cannot do the proposal for 2020. We have to be realist. We cannot work to determine the exact cause of the fire, which started yesterday off Dapitan, in the southern island of Mindanao.*

The budget of the DoH in the 2010 National Expenditure Program is 9% less than the current appropriations because of lower allocation for the Health Development Investment Program and the transfer of the extra-personnel service funds to the mischief personnel and benefits.

The DoH secretarial office said it would need as much as P700mn for the full implementation of the UHC Law or Republic Act (RA) 11223, a landmark legislation passed in Congress.

The budget shortfall said with the new Marcos administration in place, the agency is now preparing a supplementary appropriations bill.

Amazon is burning and Brazilian President Bolsonaro doesn't care

The fires raging at the edges of the Amazon rainforest are, at the moment, largely consuming lands that are far from the public eye. This is due to their natural state into tracts waiting to be farmed or developed, and because extractive industries are eating away at the rainforest itself, reducing its size by a football field a minute. And one of the most disturbing things about them is that they aren’t part of the cycle of nature, like a California wildfire might be, but are instead set in many cases to get rid of trees and burned to make way for soy fields and beef grazing grounds. That reflects Brazil’s troubling approach to a public sector that, if unabated, could have considerable and synergistic efforts to counter the worst effects of global warming.

The reason the Amazon is burning is because Bolsonaro is burning it. As Brazilian President Jair Bolsonaro, who followed Donald Trump into the White House in 2019, seeks to win back the presidency this year, he has no plans to stop them. So the rate of deforestation, while still far below what it had been a dozen years ago, is increasing. The G-7 also recently agreed to fund the countries in the Global South to deal with the climate crisis, and Brazil President Emmanuel Macron pledged to put together an alliance to push for reforestation.

Bolsonaro was not recepitive; he accused the leaders of embracing colonialism by telling Brazil what to do. But there’s nothing colonial in asking a neighbour to stop lighting fires that affect the rest of us.

The Amazon rainforest, with its vast canopy of trees and other lush vegetation, removes about 5% of the global carbon humans emit into the atmosphere — or about 5.3 million tons of CO2 per day. But the cycle of nature, like a California wildfire might be, is still raging. And one of the most disturbing things is that Brazil is burning it, too.

The fires burning at the edges of the Amazon have reached record levels, and the government of Jair Bolsonaro has been accused of ignoring the crisis. The Amazon rainforest is considered a crucial carbon sink, absorbing carbon dioxide from the atmosphere and helping to mitigate the effects of climate change. However, the increase in deforestation and forest fires has raised concerns about the future of the rainforest and its impact on global climate.

The fires, which began in early August, have burned through more than 455,000 hectares (1.12 million acres) in Brazil, according to data from the National Institute for Space Research (INPE). The fires are mostly concentrated in the Amazon region, the world’s largest tropical rainforest.

The fires have been fueled by a combination of factors, including drought, deforestation for agriculture and cattle ranching, and land-clearing for logging and mining. The government of Jair Bolsonaro has been criticized for its lax enforcement of environmental laws and its push for deforestation.

In a statement, the Brazilian government said it was working to combat the fires and had deployed additional firefighters and resources to the affected areas.

The United Nations has called for an international effort to stop the fires and protect the rainforest. The Brazilian government has also announced plans to increase the number of firefighters and other emergency personnel on the ground.

However, critics say the government’s efforts have been insufficient and that it has not done enough to address the root causes of the fires, such as illegal logging and land-clearing for agriculture.

The fires have also sparked protests and demonstrations in Brazil and around the world, with people calling for action to protect the rainforest.

A statement from Jair Bolsonaro said: “Brazil is taking all necessary actions to control the fires. We are working to ensure that these fires do not affect our ecological balance and contribute to global warming.”

The statement also called on other countries to join forces to fight the fires in the Amazon and protect the rainforest.

The fires have been a major concern for environmentalists and conservationists, who warn that they could have serious implications for the planet’s climate and biodiversity. The Amazon is considered a “carbon sink” because it absorbs carbon dioxide from the atmosphere, helping to mitigate the effects of climate change.

Is stakeholder capitalism really back?

By Joseph E Stiglitz

For decades, the prevailing view in economics has been that corporations exist for one reason: to maximize profits — meaning profits and share price — hence and now, what some might regard as the consequence of the phenomenon, what economists call the “bottom line.” Today, however, some of these dormant stakeholder capitalists, signed out for more than 30 years, are members of the US Business Roundtable, has caused quite a stir. After all, these are the CEOs of America’s most powerful companies, the ones that may be worth more than $1 trillion, and with total annual compensation of more than the bottom line. That is quite a feat.

Ghadeer signs deal to set up ‘Juice Factory’ for kids

By Ayman Adly

The collaboration between KidZania Doha and Ghadeer aims “to educate children on the juice production process, teach them the importance of healthy eating, and empower the youngest and finest fruits as in the Ghadeer factory, and help them experience a real-life activity with hands-on experience”, according to a press statement.

It also seeks to educate children on nutritional facts and importance of having fresh juice in their daily lives, while also promoting healthy eating habits, thinking ability and piquing their curiosity about the production process, the statement notes. In the ‘Juice Factory’, children will take on the role of juice production operators to ensure that premium juices extracted from the carefully selected fresh fruits are of the highest quality. Also, children will be working as juice delivery crew to help develop their communication and collaboration skills.

“The partnership between KidZania Doha and Ghadeer is empowerment stand to promote skills, values and positive thinking towards the good of the people and the community in Qatar,” the statement adds.

QU students score further international accolades

Qatar University’s College of Pharmacy (QU-CPH) students bagged nine awards at the 65th International Pharmaceutical Students’ Federation (IPSF) World Congress in Rwanda, the university announced Monday.

Six students won first place prizes, two won second place, and one won third place in their respective categories for individual scientific presentations, posters, and student awards. Among the awards, two students, Hesham Korashy and P2 student Diala Kadri, received the first place prize for their scientific presentations and posters, respectively.

Alasmar, a QU-CPH student, won the first place prize for her poster, “Potential Cardiotoxic Effects of Different Antimalarial Drugs in Mice: A Systematic Review”, which was conducted with Wafaa Alasmar under the supervision of Dr. Zachariah Nazar. Alasmar was second place for her scientific presentation, “Impact of entertainment that reflects our strong belief in the empowerment of children.”

According to the university, the event gathered around 300 pharmacy students and recent graduates from 53 countries worldwide.

Bedaya Centre organises workshop on ‘Labour Sector Services for Entrepreneurs’

Byman Adly

Bedaya Centre for Entrepreneurship, Industry and Career Development (Bedaya Centre) and the Ministry of Administrative Development, Labour and Social Affairs (MADLSA) recently held a workshop on ‘Labour Sector Services for Entrepreneurs’ to introduce Qatar entrepreneurs and project owners to the relevant legal procedures to carry out their business efficiently.

Mahmoud Al-Mahmoud, consultant at Bedaya, said the workshop was intended to respond to the needs of start-ups and entrepreneurs in Qatar, providing them with the necessary procedures to avoid penalties or hurdles for future generations. Ghadeer is intended to be educational towards the good of the people and the community in Qatar.”

According to Al-Mahmoud, the workshop was conducted with Bodoor Aboujabal, the supervisor of the Bedaya Centre, said the workshop was intended to be educational towards the good of the people and the community in Qatar.”

Al-Mahmoud noted that the participants of the workshop would have the opportunity to communicate with MADLSA officials directly and make enquiries about the necessary procedures to avoid penalties or hurdles for future generations.

Further, he said on sidelines of the workshop that there are some companies which offer various kinds of support services that could benefit the participants in starting their businesses and managing the Wage Protection System among others.

A total of 80 participants attended the workshop, which was attended by a total of 80 participants, according to the university.
