Qatar builds capacity to deal with bioterrorism

A workshop that got underway in Doha yesterday will be the first major event relating to the topic in the Gulf region.

The event aims to build and strengthen the capacity of Qatar to face biological accidents, addressed by Nabeel Al-Ajmi, representative of the Medical Chemical and Biological Cooperation in Doha.

The event is being held under the KCAID project in cooperation with the World Health Organization (WHO) and will take place over an entire week, from today until next Friday.

Al-Ajmi said the workshop is designed to respond to biological disasters at the national level and to respond to emergencies.

He added that the workshop had been established due to the need to establish a national committee for the prevention and control of biological accidents.

A seminar will be held during the workshop on the mechanisms of response to biological accidents.

The event is being held under the auspices of the Ministry of Health and is part of the national strategy to prepare for biological accidents and is aimed at mobilizing the resources of various segments of society, to respond to such incidents.

QRCS marks World First Aid Day with training sessions

QRCS (Qatar Red Crescent Society) celebrated World First Aid Day on Saturday, 10th August 2019, with a series of seminars and training sessions, which continued until Wednesday, 14th August 2019, to promote awareness of basic first-aid skills. It aims to ensure that people are well equipped to deal with emergencies and can provide immediate assistance to the sick or injured.

The workshops, which took place in preparation for and first-aid training that utilises the first-aid kits, were aimed at empowering individual to provide the necessary assistance when needed. This is done by providing a systematic approach to identifying the situation, assessing the injury, and determining the appropriate first-aid actions to prevent further harm and promote recovery.

The workshops were conducted in collaboration with the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Education and Higher Education. The sessions were divided into five categories: Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), Bleeding and Wounds, Burns and Scalds, Burns and Scalds, and Burns and Scalds.

The workshops were conducted in coordination with the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Education and Higher Education. The sessions were divided into five categories: Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), Bleeding and Wounds, Burns and Scalds, Burns and Scalds, and Burns and Scalds.

QRCS encourages active participation of all ages and genders, and fully prepared for any emergency that may arise. It aims to educate society members in the field of public health, as well as the importance of voluntary health education role in maintaining public health awareness and prevent the health knowledge among individuals. Through health education programs, QRCS seeks to educate society members in the field of public health, as well as the importance of voluntary health education role in maintaining public health awareness and prevent the health knowledge among individuals.

Through our participation in the event, QRCS presented a paper showcasing the centre’s efforts in contributing to the development of a well-integrated and cross- sector career development policy that links the needs and aspirations of Qatar’s professionals, among various other topics.

The centre’s participation in the event was part of QRCS’s ongoing efforts to promote career development and exchange knowledge and expertise. In 2019, World First Aid Day was started by the International Federation of Red Cross Societies (IFRC). Every year, more than 8,000 QRCS staff, volunteers, and other organisations across the world come together to raise awareness and encourage the public to learn basic first-aid skills.

Despite the progress made, the need for basic first-aid skills is still prevalent in Qatar, with the rates of injuries and illnesses continuing to increase. QRCS is committed to promoting the importance of basic first-aid skills and encouraging individuals to take the necessary steps to prevent accidents and injuries.

The Qatar National Committee for Combating Terrorism (QNCCT) has a strong commitment to combatting terrorism and maintaining national security. It aims to ensure that individuals are well equipped to deal with emergencies and can provide immediate assistance to the sick or injured. QRCS is a proud partner of the QNCCT, and its efforts are aligned with the goals of the committee.

QRCS has been actively involved in organizing and conducting workshops, seminars, and training sessions to promote awareness of basic first-aid skills. The organization has also been organizing first-aid training sessions and workshops for schools, universities, and other organizations.

According to QRCS, the theme of World First Aid Day 2019 is “First Aid and Excluded People.” Its main aim is to raise awareness of how first aid can prevent injuries and illnesses, and how to help the various companions and workers to raise the value of saving lives, and be fully prepared for any emergency that may arise.

Palestinian children receive school bags from Qatar Charity

In conjunction with the start of the new academic year, Qatar Charity, with the support from the people of Qatar, distributed 2,560 bags with school supplies to students belonging to families suffering from a challenging living and economic situation in Palestine.

The project, which was carried out in cooperation with the Ministry of Social Development and the Ministry of Education, aims at meeting some of the needs of the beneficiaries and easing the economic burdens on their families.

The school bag distribution programme targeted students, both male and female, in younger age groups within Palestinian schools, providing each student with a bag containing school tools and supplies, depending on his/her educational level.

The distribution took place in the entire West Bank, including Al Quds Al Sharif, in cooperation with schools and centers belonging to ministries participating in the project, in addition to Qatar Charity.

At the beginning of the new school year, many Palestinian families suffer from a tough living and economic condition in light of the increasing prices of school goods and products.

Besides, Qatar Charity’s office in Sudan organized an educational and recreational activity for its sponsored orphans, both girls and boys, in the Kassala State of the country. More than 250 orphans accompanied by their mothers took part in the activity.

The activity included purposeful games, competitions, plays, and songs reflecting some educational values such as truthfulness and honesty, and good morals.

The orphans and their mothers expressed their happiness with this activity that brought joy and pleasure to them, extending thanks to sponsors in Qatar for their support and to Qatar Charity’s office in Sudan for the follow-up and good attention.

The event was organized as part of the 2019 general plan for the activities of the sponsored orphans, which aims to provide integrated care to them. The sponsorship of orphans falls within Qatar Charity’s “Rofaqa” initiative, which sponsors more than 162,000 orphans worldwide.

WCM-Q Lectures discuss umbilical cord clamping in newborns

The European Union has plans

The impact of the timing of umbilical cord clamping on the health of mother and newborn baby was discussed at the event, titled “Grand Rounds lectures at Well Cornell Medicine - Qatar (WCM-Q)”. Speaking to an audience of physicians, pharmacists, nurses and hospital professionals, Dr Debra Lee, medical director of Neonatology Services and intensivist, discussed the existing research into how clamping the umbilical cord affects the newborn’s health outcomes. Dr Lee, who was an affiliate faculty member of WCM-Q, also explained the proven benefits of delaying clamping, such as improving oxygen supply to the placenta, resulting in healthier babies, and analyzed the impact of ventilation and cord clamping on this transition.

Finally, Dr Lee identified the key to success of cord clamping is to prevent hypoxia of the newborn cord. The procedure should never be delayed longer than 60 seconds, two minutes or five minutes; however, the newborn in a few seconds to 10 seconds.

Taiwan in the single-day ballot, the independent commission said in a statement handing over the rolls to the Supreme Election Council. The head of the electoral council, Rida Aabidi, explained the decision after heated debate among coalition delegation members to choose who would register to vote in the single-day ballot.

"The people are the ones who will decide who will substitute them, who will have the benefit of the decisions," the cabinet concluded its statement. The White House has condemned the Trump administration’s referendum campaign in Iran over its nuclear and ballistic missile capabilities, saying it will continue with the two leaders met, she added.

Democrats issued a statement critical of the coalition administration on Iran’s nuclear program as a vote in a parking station during the presidential election in Tunis, yesterday.

Tunisia’s presidential election, which was scheduled for November, was postponed in October after the country’s first-time voter, had similar words. "For me, I am not a politician. I look forward to the 10th of November, when I will cast the vote for the 19-year-old son of Tunisia’s second democratic revolution," President Beji Caid Essebsi said.

GM workers down tools in native-wide strike

By Mike Warren, Reuters

Washington

A whisper campaign among United Auto Workers members in Detroit that the automakers could not make a deal with labor over a strike at General Motors has become a reality.

The union said it is striking on Tuesday over attempts to win greater pay and job security for its members. The company, meanwhile, said it will shut down its Flint, Michigan, plant if no agreement can be reached.

The strike comes after a rash of major floods, wildfires and hurricanes that devastated the midwestern and southeastern United States, prompting GM to make concessions to union leaders.

The automaker, which employs about 4,000 workers at its Flint plant, is one of the largest employers in the state and its closure would have a significant impact on the local economy.

The union said it has not received an offer from GM that would meet its demands, and it plans to continue negotiating.

GM has expressed concern that a strike would hurt its ability to compete with other automakers, and it has threatened to take legal action.

The strike poses a significant challenge for GM, which has been struggling to recover from a series of recalls and safety issues. The company has also been dealing with a labor dispute at its Marysville, Michigan, plant, where workers are demanding better pay and benefits.

The union said it is prepared to continue the strike until a deal is reached, and it has called on GM to make a better offer.

GM's workers have gone on strike before, in 1998, and the union said it is prepared to make the same demands this time.

The strike is expected to last for several weeks, with workers planning to picket outside GM's factories and offices.

The union said it is hopeful that GM will come to the bargaining table and make a better offer.

The strike is seen as a test of GM's ability to handle labor disputes, and it comes as the automaker is trying to recover from a series of recalls and safety issues.

GM's workers have long been a source of strength for the company, and the union said it is prepared to make the same demands this time.
Fiji PM Bainimarama to play down climate row on Australia trip

BRISBANE

Fiji's leader Frank Bainimarama is to arrive in Australia on Sunday, just weeks after the pacific island nation was hit by some of the worst bushfires on record. Bainimarama arrived in Australia on Saturday afternoon, to take part in a summit of the Fiji community in Sydney and Canberra, as well as a bilateral meeting with Morrison today when they are expected to talk trade and investment.

The former military strongman, who took power in a coup in 2006, said he did not expect a repeat of the downward trend in the Pacific, with a number of countries still under fire from the fires. Australia was the region's largest foreign aid donor.

While reiterating his call for Australia to move away from coal, Bainimarama told Fiji's parliament last week that he had visited Palangka Raya, the capital of Borneo, and was surprised by the conditions there, as well as by the presence of some fire chief officers on the ground.

"Whatever our differences on climate change, we have far too many things in common and we have been through this long and trying period," Bainimarama said. "I insist that we must not allow this crisis to distract us from the bigger picture."

Bainimarama also praised Australia for its efforts to contain the fires, including the deployment of water cannon and aerial firefighting. He said Australia's response had been "outstanding" and that he was confident the region could overcome the crisis.

"The fact that we are sharing this crisis with Australia is a testament to our shared values and commitment to the region," Bainimarama said.

Australia has faced criticism from some countries for its response to the fires, with some accusing it of not doing enough to help.

"We have been doing everything we can to help our partners and neighbours in the Pacific region," Bainimarama said. "We have sent support and resources to help contain the fires, and we will continue to do so until the situation is under control."

Bainimarama added that Fiji was also working with other Pacific countries to ensure that the region is better prepared for future bushfires.

"We will continue to work with our partners in the region to ensure that we are better prepared for future bushfires," he said. "We will also continue to work with Australia to ensure that we can better manage these crises in the future."

Bainimarama is scheduled to meet with Australian Prime Minister Scott Morrison on Sunday, as well as with other Pacific leaders.

Fiji is a member of the Pacific Islands Forum, which is holding its annual meeting in Sydney this week. The forum is expected to discuss the bushfires and other regional issues.

The Fiji leader also said he would continue to push for greater cooperation between Pacific countries on climate change and other issues.

"We must work together to address the challenges that we face," Bainimarama said. "We must also work together to ensure that we can better respond to these challenges in the future."

Bainimarama is expected to conclude his trip on Monday.

Almost 100,000 Britons are at risk of dying from hepatitis C

Guardian News and Media

A high of 100,000 Britons are at risk of dying from hepatitis C, health officials are warning.

Almost 10,000 people in the UK, mainly drug users, are known to have the virus which causes a liver disease that can increase the risk of dying because people with the liver disease are at higher risk of dying from other causes.

The virus is spread of viral and bacterial infection at the injection site and with the frequent injection, more damage to the liver.

The virus is undiagnosed hepatitis C sufferers.

Peck said: “It’s extremely important to make a fully informed decision to have the condition. The virus is present in one of the UK’s 17 bat species as “pathetic”.

The report says HMCTS has “made good progress in returning cases” to the trial and “has so far been facing difficulties in returning cases”.

The report states that 10,000 people who inject drugs such as heroin or have done so in the past year are estimated to have the virus.

As police scrambled to locate it when he first heard news of the theft, he said: “I hope it still is. I want to see it back in the park.”

Kyiv vows tough stance from Zelenskiy at Putin talks

Kiev's top diplomat has warned that his country will not make concessions to Moscow unless Russian President Vladimir Putin and his authoritarian regime end recent aggression in eastern Ukraine, where Russian-backed separatists have seized control of almost one-fifth of Ukraine's territory.

In an interview with The Associated Press in Kyiv, Ukraine's Foreign Minister Dmytro Kuleba said that Ukraine would not negotiate with Moscow unless Russia meets the conditions set by the so-called Minsk II agreement, which the two countries signed in September 2014 to end fighting in eastern Ukraine.

Kuleba said that the Minsk II agreement cannot be renegotiated and that Ukraine would be prepared to negotiate only if Russia follows its terms.

Ukraine has demanded full and unconditional withdrawal of Russian forces from eastern Ukraine, the return of all Ukrainian servicemen captured by Russia, the measures to ensure compliance with the Minsk II agreement, and the provision of robust international monitoring and verification of Ukraine's territorial integrity and sovereignty.

Ukraine has also demanded that Russia respect Ukraine's sovereignty, territorial integrity, and independence, and refrain from any actions that could undermine the stability and security of the region.

Kuleba said that Ukraine would not be deterred by Russia's threats or attempts to pressure it.

He added that Ukraine would continue to work with its allies, including the United States and the European Union, to pressure Russia to comply with the Minsk II agreement and to support Ukraine's sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The foreign minister also reiterated Ukraine's commitment to the path of democratization, transparency, and accountability, and its efforts to strengthen its economic and social development.

NEWLY WEDS AMONG MIGRANTS CLINGING ON TO US ASYLUM DREAM

Mexican asylum seekers who have married a US citizen will remain eligible for asylum under the previous administration’s policy that allows couples to seek asylum and stay in the United States. The Biden administration has reversed the Trump-era policy that barred such couples from seeking asylum in the US, but a court ruling last week could put the new policy on hold.

Mexico to probe officials over case of 43 missing students

Mexico’s Ministério Público (MP) announced last Thursday that it will investigate officials who were handling a “discredited” probe into the 2014 disappearance of 43 students from a rural teachers’ university in Iguala, Guerrero state. The previous administration’s investigation was widely criticized for its lack of progress and transparency.

The MP said it is giving the probe a fresh start, and that it will work closely with the three independent experts who were appointed by the government in 2020 to conduct a new investigation.

The case of the 43 missing students has been at the center of a ongoing conflict between the Mexican government and civil society groups. The government has been criticized for its response to the disappearance, which occurred during the administration of former President Enrique Peña Nieto.

The new investigation will be led by a team of experts from the United States and Mexico, and will have the support of the UN and other international organizations.

The investigation will focus on the police and military units involved in the disappearance, as well as on the government’s handling of the case. It will also examine the role of the federal government in the investigation.

The investigation will be conducted in the context of a larger effort by the Mexican government to address the country’s ongoing crisis of violence and human rights abuses. The government has been under pressure to take action to address the situation, and the investigation is seen as an important step in that direction.
Pakistan's Prime Minister Shahid Khaqan Abbasi has announced the resumption of talks between Pakistan and India. The announcement comes after India scrapped special status for Kashmir, a region that has been at the center of conflict between India and Pakistan for decades. Abbasi stated that "only an idiot, when he's on a warpath, does any U-turns," stating that Pakistan would not take any U-turns on the issue of Kashmir.

Abbasi also emphasized that Pakistan would respond to any aggression from India with "equal aggression." He further stated, "If say Pakistan, God forbid, we have to fight the second nuclear war, we will do so with all our might, whether it is economic or diplomatic support that will be given to the Indian people."

Abbasi emphasized that India's decision to abrogate Article 370, which granted special status to Kashmir, will not be tolerated by Pakistan. He concluded by stating that Pakistan will fight to defend its honor.

The statement follows a series of meetings between Pakistan and India, with a focus on reopening the Line of Control (LoC), a ceasefire line that divides the region, and resuming talks aimed at resolving the long-standing conflict.

Abbasi's remarks come amidst increasing tensions between the two nuclear-armed neighbors, with both countries engaging in a diplomatic and media war. The resumption of talks is seen as a positive development, as it marks a significant step towards de-escalation and peaceful resolution of the dispute.

The announcement was met with mixed reactions, with some praising it as a move towards peace, while others expressed concern about the potential for further escalation.

Overall, the statement by Pakistan's Prime Minister Shahid Khaqan Abbasi highlights the ongoing efforts to resolve the Kashmir dispute and the importance of diplomatic engagement in the region.
Lacson wants steps to tackle corruption in Bilibid prison

By Bernadette E. Etusan

Senator Richard Lacson wants the Department of Justice to consider a new “big three” to oversee the prison system, which he said is rife with corruption and inadequate management.

“The system is already tailor-cut for corruption, and government officials have used these anomalies to enrich themselves,” Lacson said in an interview.

The lawmaker cited the North Luzon Expressway South Luzon Expressway connector road that is expected to be completed in four years and the North South Link (NSL) toll project in Metro Manila as examples of government projects where the rules of public bidding had not been followed.

“Unlike in previous times, there are no longer enemies of the state who should be arrested in the name of national security, so the law should be used for the benefit of those who are meant to benefit from government projects,” he said.

He also suggested that government agencies should be monitored more closely so that they will not “abuse the system” and that “the government’s tendency to be lenient to those who engage in corruption is no longer acceptable.”

Lacson assured that his proposal to impose stricter measures in the prison system will not affect the ordinary citizen.

“Because the ordinary citizen is not the one who supervises the prison system, they will not be affected as long as they are honest,” he said.

He added that the proposed measures will only be implemented in the national penitentiary system, which he said is already “rife with corruption.”

In a related development, Lacson raised the need for a well-studied master plan to solve the traffic problem in EDSA.

“People are now using EDSA (as the alternative route to the north), so we should ensure that by the time this road is widened, we can also ensure that the national capital region (NCR) planning is well-planned to avoid the same traffic situation that we’ve experienced in the past,” he said.

He also reiterated his call for the restoration of the 8.5-billion-peso Metropolitan Public Transportation Co. (MPTC), arguing that it will not only provide alternative transport services in the capital but will also create jobs.

“By the time the MRT is up and running, we can also complete the construction of the North Luzon Expressway South Link (NSL),” he said.

Lacson added that the government should not wait for problems to arise before it acts.

“Instead, the government should be proactive in addressing problems before they become crises,” he said.

Albayalde proposes longer tenure for police chief

Manila Times

Sen. Christopher Lawrence “Bong” Go has continued to push for the improvement and modernisation of the country’s Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP).

Go, who leads the Senate Committee on Public Services, has filed SB 204, the Fire Protection Modernisation Bill.

Go told the Gulf Times that his bill seeks to provide lawmakers with the power to review and approve the release of inmates from the Department of Justice to the Bureau of Fire Protection, now that the General Community Term Amnesty Law (GCTA) is back in effect.

He said Bong Go, had proposed the measure following a report by the Senate Blue Ribbon Committee investigating the anomalies at the Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP) under the administration of its Director General, Lisa Marie Bautista.

Go noted that the administration of BFP Director General Lisa Marie Bautista had not been “able to stop the release of inmates.”

Poe also said she was just one vote in the Senate, and that the “revolving door policy” at BuCor had to be stopped because it is leading to the “inhumane treatment of inmates.”

Go said that as the Senate’s priority bill, the Fire Protection Modernisation Bill gives lawmakers the power to suspend the release of inmates and to remove a member of the BFP if needed.

Go said that after the BFP receives an emergency powers bill, it will go to the Senate’s general committee where a hearing will be held to decide on the measure.

“Even during the time as a junior officer, I noticed that the Bureau of Fire Protection is the first to be deployed after a disaster, but it has no fund to buy the equipment needed to respond to emergencies,” Go said.

Boeing’s woes with modern capitalism

By Matt Stoller

The plight of Boeing shows the peril of modern capitalism. It is no coincidence that a company that was once the highflying leader of the 777 and 787 programs is now a giant who has stumbled. Boeing could increase prices, lay off workers, and speculatively cash back hostages. But in the modern era, when we are not the hands of kings or the vassals of empires, but the people of a new kind of world, the modern way to deal with it is to lead from the back, not the front. That is the modern way to deal with it.

New Yorkers ‘confused and fearful’

By Miriam Bryant

Fighting that erupted in early April when eastern stronghold Khartoum (Darfur and El Fasher) and the first Dreamer to run for office in New York, told the group: “My daughter will be the first of her kind to get a green card. This rule will put families at risk and force immigrants into making impossible decisions.”

The Trump administration is sending a clear message that if you are not white and you are not from war-torn Yemen or a few other places, you are not welcome in the US," she said.

In the past, immigrants were often seen as a threat, leading to the rise of political movements designed to warn of the loss of immigrants. And in the country’s most diverse neighborhoods in New York’s most diverse borough, 43% of Queens population was born outside the US, according to census data, while a record report by the Pew Research Center showed that the US has 116 million immigrants. But now, as the country faces an unprecedented crisis, “said RSF’s Naas, “we are here to stay. “Over the years, journalists have dug in too — taking sides and supporting each other, writing about what it means for them. It is a very complex situation and the threat of being separated from family and friends.
