Former astronaut says people of Qatar can ‘transform the world’

As an astronaut and science educator, Dr Mary Ellen Weber has said that Qatar will be a “travesty” if the country does not join the global movement of innovation, and be a bystander, instead of being at the very forefront of what the future will bring.

“We are on the verge of entering the digital age, and the potential of what we can do with the latest technology is enormous. The world is at an exciting moment in history, and Qatar has the opportunity to be a leader in this transformation,” Dr Weber said.

She added: “The people of Qatar have the ability to be a global leader in innovation, and be a bystander, instead of being at the very forefront of what the future will bring. This is a testament to the efforts QU has undertaken to gain international recognition and is a great achievement for QU and Qatar Foundation (QF),” he added.

The new model offers “exceptional cabin quietness and smooth acceleration,” explained Dr Weber. “People would be stunned at just how quiet it is,” he said.

Qatar Charity to organize a side event on sports and refugee empowerment at UN

On the sidelines of its participation in the 74th session of the United Nations General Assembly, Qatar Charity will hold a side panel discussion entitled “The Role of Sport in Safeguarding and Empowering Refugees and IDPs” on September 22, 2019, at UN Headquarters in New York, in cooperation with the Qatar Fund for Development (QFFD) and many international humanitarian organizations. It will also sign several cooperation and partnership agreements with UN agencies.

Qatar Charity’s delegation, participating in the meetings of the 74th session of the UN General Assembly, will include Mr. Yousef Al-Kuwari, CEO, Mohamed Al Ghani, chief governance officer, and Mr. Ahmed Al Rumaihi, head of International Partnerships.

Qatar Charity, in collaboration with the Qatar Fund for Development (QFFD), UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, International Organization for Migration (IOM), the German Corporation for International Cooperation (GIZ), and SAVE THE CHILDREN, will organize the panel discussion. It will talk about the shift towards sports in conflict-turn communities, the importance of the use of sports as a tool to achieve peace and development goals, and strengthening the global framework for leveraging sport for development and peace. The dialogue will also discuss the perspectives and horizons that sports can create for a more dignified life for refugees and IDPs and the challenges that face the use of sports as a tool for development.

Several officials from many international humanitarian organizations, humanitarian experts, and sports stars from Kenya, Somalia and Afghanistan, who fled their countries and settled in other countries, will also take part in the dialogue.

At the end of the event, Qatar Charity will sign many cooperation agreements with several UN agencies and organizations, including an agreement with UNHCR and IOM, in addition to signing a framework agreement with UNICEF.

The event will also include an accompanying exhibition with different pictures and materials showing humanitarian programs and projects that use sports for peace and development, like Qatar Charity’s initiative entitled “Sports for Peace in Darfur” launched in cooperation with QFFD, in addition to GIZ Sports for Development in refugee camps in Jordan and Palestine, and “Save the DREAM” projects.

Guests will have the opportunity to see and understand the refugees’ situation through VR video shots.

60,000 workers to benefit from Qatar Charity’s “Soqya” project

As part of the ongoing implementation of its “Soqya” project, Qatar Charity has distributed bottles of water to 700 workers within the country, while tens of thousands of laborers are expected to benefit in the coming period.

The distribution of water bottles to workers takes place during summer, in cooperation with local partners, including the Ministry of Administrative Development, Labor and Social Affairs, Doha Festival City, and IKEA Qatar.

Qatar Charity takes this opportunity to thank governmental and private partners for providing tremendous support for this project within the framework of social responsibility, considering them as partners in its success.

Besides, awareness events are held, as part of the implementation of the project, to educate workers about the importance of drinking enough water, especially during the hot summer days, to stay healthy. Such initiatives come as part of Qatar Charity’s keenness to appreciate the magnificent roles played by workers in building the infrastructure of the country.

The Soqya project aims at distributing water bottles to 60,000 workers within the country this year to keep them well hydrated and increase their fluids intake during the peak hours of the day.

The project also aims to instill the values of philanthropy and voluntary work in the hearts of young people and university and school students by engaging them practically in implementing some of such projects intended for the local community.

It is worth mentioning that Qatar Charity commenced the implementation of the Soqya project at the beginning of the current month and expects that the distribution of water bottles to the workers will continue before the onset of winter.

Last year, 40,000 people from Asian, African and Arab communities benefited from the project, in cooperation with the Ministry of Administrative Development, Labor and Social Affairs, and the Aster Medical Center. Also, volunteers from the “O Type” and “Qatari Awareness” initiatives participated in giving water bottles to workers last year.
Vegan Dominance

2019 has been labelled the ‘Year of the Vegan’ and the plant-based industry is growing faster than ever before. According to a report from Global Data, 45% of US consumers are being influenced by vegan growth over 2018 in a three-year period. This is why the company launched a brand reducing plant-based investment in the world’s first vegan exchange-traded fund (ETF). The VeganX Global VeganX ETF is managed by Beyond Meat, famous for its plant-based burgers and sausages. The fund's creators believe that its vegan range is growing at a rate of 120% per year, and that it could potentially help to reduce the number of animals killed for food. The fund also aims to include companies that are not involved in the meat or dairy industries and that are committed to reducing their environmental impact. The fund is available to investment platforms on the New York Stock Exchange, and is known as Beyond Investing, has grown over 600% in a three-year period.

Wealth of Stars

Today is my birthday. It’s been a year filled with changes and experiences. I’ve realized that the more I engage with the multiple lives I interact with on a daily basis, the more I must embrace the multiple lives I encounter. I’ve come to find that understanding the people in my life, the way they think, and the way they feel, is key to understanding the people around me. I’ve also learned that the more I understand someone else, the more I understand myself. I’ve found that by being open-minded and understanding, I can find common ground with others.

Iran warns of response to any strike

Iranian state media warned on Tuesday that Tehran would retaliate if US or any of its allies launched any attack on US targets in Iran. The Iranian media warned on Tuesday that any such attack would be immediately met by a response, with Iranian missiles targeting the US military bases in Iraq. The warning followed US President Donald Trump’s announcement that the US would designate Iran’s Revolutionary Guard as a terrorist organization.

President Cyril Ramaphosa admitted yesterday that South Africa was in a “state of emergency” due to the rising violence against women and children. The president said that the government was working to stop the violence and that the first state of emergency order had been issued on July 5.

President Trump’s announcement that the US would designate Iran’s Revolutionary Guard as a terrorist organization has sparked concern among international leaders, who have warned that such a move could increase tensions in the region. The US is currently engaged in talks with Iran over its nuclear program, and there are concerns that a designation could escalate the situation.

President Franklin Roosevelt announced yesterday that the US would designate Iran’s Revolutionary Guard as a terrorist organization in response to the group’s role in supporting Hamas. The announcement comes after the US State Department designated the Revolutionary Guard as a terrorist organization.

Roosevelt said in a televised speech that the designation was in response to the group’s support for terror attacks in the region, including the September 11 attacks.

The announcement follows a series of attacks on US military bases in the Middle East, including a drone strike on a US air base in Iraq last week. The US has also imposed sanctions on Iran in response to its support for terror groups.

The US has been engaged in talks with Iran over its nuclear program, and there are concerns that a designation could escalate the situation. The Trump administration has said that it will not make any new commitments to the Iran nuclear deal, which was signed in 2015.

The announcement comes at a time of increased tension between the US and Iran, with both countries blaming each other for recent attacks on US military bases in the region. The US has also imposed sanctions on Iran, which it says are a response to the group’s support for terror groups.

Eight people have been charged with engaging in healthcare fraud schemes that cost more than $1 billion in losses, according to US authorities.

“I hope today’s action brings home the point that our allies will trust and our adversaries will fear,” US Attorney General Bill Barr said yesterday.

The charges in Texas come after a federal jury in Brooklyn, New York, last month returned guilty verdicts on more than two decades. The charges in Texas come after a federal jury in Brooklyn, New York, last month returned guilty verdicts on more than 50 counts for violating federal laws.

“With this action today,” he said, “we remind the world that our alliances are stronger than ever.”

The move came after a trip to the Middle East, where he met with Saudi Arabian officials to discuss the situation.

“Let’s do it. We’re going to have a much better relationship with the Middle East,” Trump said.

President Donald Trump yesterday named his pointman on hacking and cybercrime, Emmet O’Brian, as the new US homeland security advisor, just a day after he revealed that a cyber attack had occurred on Tuesday.

“Emmet is a very important person for us,” Trump said.

O’Brian will be the fourth national security advisor in Trump’s administration.

“Emmet has been with us for a long time and he’s always been a strong advocate for the country,” the president said.

He will succeed John Bolton, who was dismissed from the administration on August 18.

“Emmet will do an amazing job,” Trump said.

O’Brien was appointed as the US homeland security advisor in 2017, shortly before Trump took office.

“I will work very closely with my colleagues, including the White House and the Department of Homeland Security, to ensure that we are protected against any threats to our country,” he said.

The appointment of O’Brien is seen as a move to counter the perceived threat from China.

“China is a rising power and we have to be prepared to deal with it,” Trump said.

On Tuesday, Trump made a surprise visit to a military base in Florida, where he held a joint news conference with Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe.

“Japan has been a great ally and I want to thank the Japanese people for what they’ve done,” Trump said.

The Trump administration yesterday announced that it plans to introduce new rules for the green card lottery.

The move comes as the US government faces pressure to make its immigration system more selective.

“We’re going to make sure that we’re getting the best and the brightest,” Trump said.

Under the new rules, only individuals who have a strong likelihood of becoming self-sufficient will be eligible for the lottery.

“This is a great way to make sure that we’re getting the right people into our country,” Trump said.

The new rules also include provisions to prevent fraud and ensure that only eligible applicants are selected.

“The Trump administration is committed to ensuring that our immigration system is fair and just,” said Secretary of Homeland Security Chad Wolf.

The changes come as the US faces a massive backlog of visa applications due to the pandemic.

“I will make sure that our system is fair and that we’re not going to let fraud into our system,” Trump said.

The new rules are expected to take effect in the second quarter of 2021.

The official announcement of the election was made on Thursday by the electoral overseer. The presidential election is scheduled for November 16.

According to the announcement, a total of 28 candidates have so far joined the fray for the presidential post. The main opposition, the Sri Lanka People’s Freedom Party (SLPFP), has fielded 13 candidates so far.

However, the official said that the list of candidates is subject to change as more candidates are expected to join the fray. The announcement also stated that the electoral overseer will issue a final list of candidates at a later date.

The presidential election is expected to be a key test for the government of President Gotabaya Rajapaksa, who came to power in 2019 and is facing several challenges, including a growing economic crisis and protests against government policies.

The election comes amid ongoing economic hardships, with high inflation and unemployment, and political tensions. The country has also been facing international pressure to address human rights abuses.

The presidential election will be held on November 16, and the winner will serve a five-year term.

Post-techy blackout in Japan raises questions of disaster preparedness

A massive blackout in Japan on Thursday has raised questions about the country’s disaster preparedness and response capabilities.

The blackout affected an estimated 500,000 people in the Kanto region, which includes Tokyo, and lasted for several hours. It was caused by a problem with a transformer at a power plant that supplies electricity to the area.

According to the government, the blackout was caused by a failure in a backup system designed to prevent large-scale power outages. The government said it was investigating the cause of the failure.

This is the latest in a series of blackouts and other power disruptions in Japan in recent years, including a major blackout in 2011 that was caused by a severe earthquake and tsunami.

The government has been criticized for its response to those events, with some accusing it of being unprepared and slow to react.

In response to the latest blackout, the government said it was working to restore power as quickly as possible and would review the country’s disaster preparedness and response capabilities.

While the government said it was working to prevent similar events in the future, some experts and citizens have expressed concerns about the effectiveness of the country’s disaster preparedness measures.

The government has introduced various measures to improve disaster preparedness, including the establishment of a national emergency operations center and the creation of a national disaster response plan.

However, some experts say that more needs to be done to improve the country’s preparedness, including the development of more comprehensive plans and the allocation of more resources to disaster preparedness and response.

Overall, the blackout has raised questions about the adequacy of Japan’s disaster preparedness and response capabilities and has prompted calls for more action.

Pence rebuff Solomons PM after Taiwan ties cut

US Vice President Mike Pence said Washington and Nuku’alofa would “continue to work together” after the US government cut ties with Taiwan, the South Pacific nation to which it had close diplomatic relations.

Mr Pence said in a statement on Thursday that the US government had decided to end its diplomatic relations with Nuku’alofa, the capital of the Solomon Islands, and open an embassy in 12 March 2016. The former prime minister was seeking a seat in the cabinet.

The move comes after the Solomons government announced it would open an embassy in Taiwan, which has close ties with Washington.

The US government has said it will continue to support the government of the Solomon Islands in its efforts to strengthen ties with Taiwan.

However, the move has been criticized by some in the region, with concerns raised about the potential impact on regional stability and security.

Spain PM seeks clear majority in latest vote battle

By Patrik Stollarz, AFP

Spain's Prime Minister Pedro Sánchez, who has faced four elections since December 2015, faces an uncertain future as he asks voters to return him to power for a fifth time.

Sánchez, who has already governed for almost two years, is struggling to secure a majority in Parliament, with the Socialists facing a relentless campaign from the right-wing Popular Party.

The Socialists' last election in 2019 was marred by the coronavirus pandemic, which has hit the country hard, and a series of scandals involving corruption and illegal campaigns.

Sánchez, who has previously sought to form a coalition government with the Catalonian pro-independence party, has so far failed to win the support of the right-wing eurosceptic Vox party, which has gained ground in recent elections.

Despite this, Sánchez remains confident of winning the vote and securing another term in office, arguing that he has been able to implement necessary reforms and tackle the pandemic effectively.

Opposition leader Pablo Casado, who has run hard against Sánchez's policies, expressed his belief that a new election would only lead to more uncertainty and instability.

Sánchez's campaign has focused on his record in office, particularly his handling of the pandemic and the rollout of the vaccine, as well as his efforts to strengthen social rights and fight corruption.

The centre-left Socialists have promised to continue with their economic policies, including further tax cuts and support for the elderly and vulnerable, while also promising to tackle the climate crisis and invest in education and healthcare.

The far-right Vox, on the other hand, has promised to reverse these policies and introduce a more conservative approach to government, focusing on reducing taxes and cutting public spending.

As the country heads for its fifth election in five years, it remains to be seen whether Sánchez will be able to secure the clear majority he needs to govern for another term.

Venezuela releases key opposition figure from jail

Brazilian prosecutors are now looking into Schvartsman’s defence that his company failed to mention his companies’ financial and legal obligations. They are also investigating the possibility that his action was politically motivated, according to a court document.

The latest development adds pressure to the opposition’s legal challenge, which the government says will be held accountable by shareholders.

Mining watchdog ANM has been called to examine Vale’s conduct, an investigation into the causes of the dam collapse, and told miners they had to stop storing tailings.

Brazilian market regulator CVM has also opened at least 21 criminal investigations into the company’s actions, as well as a civil case involving the dam’s bankruptcy, which could lead to fines.

The government has already threatened to close Vale’s Brazilian operations, and has said it will consider cancelling the licence of one of its suppliers.

On Monday, Madrid’s govern- ment released a series of tweets in response to the US extradition request, including a statement from the Spanish foreign minister, Josep Borrell, saying that it was in line with Spain’s international obligations.

The US has also said it will continue to work with its international partners to ensure that justice is served.

The US extradition plea for Carvajal, who was arrested in Spain in 2018, was based on evidence that he had helped the FARC rebels smuggle cocaine.

The company has said that it has not been previously reported.

Climate change: How it led to an unequal world

When a 16- or 17-year-old girl who has inward trans to become a writer to speak on a conference on climate change while the Amazon wildfires are still raging, it’s time to stop playing politics and to act. The agenda is no longer the military budget, but the need to save the planet. The situation is grave, and there is no time for procrastination.

Historically, developed countries have had a major contribution to the greenhouse gas emissions. The result of this inequality is evident in small island states, which are already experiencing a rise in sea levels due to global warming. Developed countries, which are responsible for the majority of greenhouse gas emissions, have a moral and legal obligation to take action to address this crisis.

One of the main challenges in the fight against climate change is the lack of cooperation among countries. Developed countries, which have a significant share of global emissions, have been reluctant to take action or to provide financial assistance to developing countries. This has resulted in a lack of progress in addressing the climate crisis.

Developed countries must take responsibility for their actions and work towards reducing their emissions. They should also provide financial assistance to developing countries to help them adapt to the effects of climate change and to transition to a low-carbon economy. The recent G7 meeting in Biarritz, France, was a missed opportunity to take bold action on climate change.

In conclusion, the fight against climate change is a global issue that requires urgent action. 5G to positively disrupt gaming industry

The technological advances behind 5G offer a leap in processing. New technology allows for faster and more reliable ultra-low latency and lightning fast streaming. With the speeds that 5G is capable of delivering, it is possible to download a full HD film in under one second, each with much less interference. The second is new MIMO, a new form of radio antenna that is much more effective than a single channel. In a high-speed broadband connection, there will be fewer pockets and we’re heading to a future where gamers need not wait more than access to the Internet to instantly play on any device. This high-speed Internet connection has never been played faster.

The kind of seamless connectivity the industry has for gaming experience is now possible with 5G connectivity. With ultra-low latency and lightning fast speed, the industry needs to elevate current gaming experience. A truly seamless experience, faster and more reliable is fuelled by advances in digital technology.

In Qatar, the transformative potential of 5G is already clearer as a reality. Qatar switched on its 5G network a year ago. Vodafone Qatar offers the “real-time” connectivity needed to open the door to brand new possibilities, making gaming with 5G and augmented reality for multiplayer mobile AR gaming a reality. A truly seamless experience, faster and more reliable is fuelled by advances in digital technology.
