Preparations continue to secure IAAF World Athletics events

The Supreme Organizing Committee for the IAAF World Athletics Championships Doha 2019 on Tuesday announced the plan to secure the events from any safety threat that might affect the smooth conduct of the first ever IAAF World Championships to be held in Qatar and the Middle East. The Securities Department has developed a plan to ensure a good atmosphere for creativity and innovation for the first time in athletics tournament held for the first time in Qatar and the Middle East, he added.

The Securities Department has developed a plan to find a good atmosphere for creativity and innovation for the first time in athletics tournament held for the first time in Qatar and the Middle East, he added.

For his part, Captain Saeed Man- tim added: “We are beyond proud that the IAAF World Athletics Championship event is organised by an Arab and national partner. This achievement is a momentous occasion in our sporting history. We’re delighted to offer the hosting competition to our valued Nojoom members to thank them for their loyalty to Doha.”

The fair will enhance the cultural heritage of innovation and its potential for sustainability in the sector. Also, it will provide knowledge and tools that will help implement innovation within their countries. One aspect of modern innovation is the relatively low cost of development, but it is expected that about 1,500 media people will take part in the event (QNA).

Qatar ambassador participates in launching relief convoy to Sudan

Qatar’s ambassador to Sudan, Abdullah bin Ali al-Kahtani, has participated in the launching of a relief convoy loaded with humanitarian aid intended to support the Sudanese people in various regions affected by recent floods.

The convoy, consisting of several vehicles carrying food, medical supplies, and other essential items, was organized by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation and the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in coordination with the Sudanese government.

Ambassador al-Kahtani expressed his satisfaction with the initiative, emphasizing Qatar’s commitment to supporting sustainable development and responding to humanitarian needs worldwide.

The convoy was received by the Sudanese authorities in the presence of UNHCR representatives and local humanitarian organizations. The ambassador highlighted the importance of continued support for Sudanese populations affected by the floods, underscoring Qatar’s role in addressing such crises in cooperation with international partners.

QU college, IEI to launch Centenary International Engineering Congress

The Qatar University College of Engineering (QU-CENG) and the Institution of Engineers, India (IEI) – Qatar Chapter will launch the Centenary International Engineering Congress at Qatar University Research Complex auditorium to discuss several topics related to ‘Smart Engineering - State of the Art Technologies in Oil & Gas and Infrastructure Development’, on September 26.

IEI will also be celebrating Engineer’s Day on September 27 at Al Dana Club, West Bay, which is observed annually on September 11 worldwide.

The opening ceremony will feature speeches from QU president Dr Hassan al-Derham, Indian ambassador P Kumaran, IEI president Dr T M Gunaraja and Qatar Foundation Research, Development and Innovation chief adviser Dr Nabeel al-Salem.

CENG Dean Dr Khalid Kamal Naji said, “It co-operation with our partners, CENG will continue to deliver on its mandate and strive to fulfill the needs of the industrial sector and society. The congress aims to provide an opportunity for academics, researchers and practitioners to discuss the challenges and solutions to today’s engineering challenges in a way that makes a difference in the engineering practice.”

“Conference will discuss different advanced and state-of-the-art technologies and technological innovations of integrated engineering processes for development of petrochemicals and civil infrastructure,” he continued.

“Smart engineering intelligently connects buildings, industries, production processes, energy systems, to adapt and evolve the way people live and work - happily, comfortably and in harmony. It supports the way the industry and organisations want to be: efficient, responsible and smarter. Technology and the ingenuity of people come together to mitigate our environments and to care for our world. It has to be done from the macro to the micro level, from physical products, components and systems to connected, cloud-based digital offerings and services, from intelligent grid control and electrification to smart storage solutions, from building automation and control systems to pipelines, switches, valves and sensors,” added Gunaraja.

Qatar, UN seek to boost peace and prosperity

Qatar event turns the spotlight on local folklore, storytelling

Qatar National Library, in collaboration with the Qatar Authority for Folklore, organises the 16th Festival of Arab Folklore.

Reflecting Qatar’s rich multicultural and folkloric heritage, the Festival will showcase the rich diversity in the arts and crafts, dances between Qatar’s age-old traditions, previ- ously difficult to document, which will be highlighted and put in the spotlight.
South Africa has a vast tourism offering and we are looking very closely at the figures of arrivals in 2019. We are asking women to think of themselves as a priority especially when it comes to their health. In October, ‘Screen For Life’ will conduct lectures, undertake training for healthcare providers and mount information booths in malls and health centres. Women in Qatar will also qualify to receive a free breast cancer screening test and awareness campaigns to promote the early screening message.

Screen For Life, Qatar’s national breast cancer awareness program, is part of International Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The programme, which started on October 1, 2019, is run by the Qatar Cancer Society (QCS), a non-profit organization that aims to raise awareness about breast cancer and promote early detection and treatment. The program is supported by the Ministry of Public Health and is funded by Qatar Cancer Society.

Screen For Life provides free breast exams and education about breast cancer prevention. It is open to all Qatari women aged 45-69 years. The program is conducted in malls, health centres and other public spaces.

The program has been running since 2014 and has screened over 15,000 women so far. It has saved lives and helped detect breast cancer in its early stages, which is crucial for successful treatment.

In 2019, the program expanded to include a mobile screening unit that travels to different areas in Qatar. It has been visited by over 2,000 women, providing an opportunity to screen women in rural areas and those who are unable to get to a clinic.

In addition to the mobile unit, the program also offers online and phone consultations for women who cannot come in person. These services are available to all Qatari women, regardless of their location.

Screen For Life is an important part of Qatar’s cancer prevention efforts. The program helps to reduce the burden of breast cancer on Qatari women and their families, and it is an example of Qatar’s commitment to improving the health and well-being of its citizens.

Screen For Life is a reminder of the importance of early detection and treatment of breast cancer. It is also a testament to the strong partnerships that exist between Qatar’s health care providers and the community. Together, we can continue to make a difference in the lives of Qatari women and their families.

Seven children killed in Kenyan school collapse

By Richard Hey, AFP

Seven children died and scores were injured when a primary school building collapsed in the Kenyan town of Dagoretti on Saturday, the education minister said. The accident occurred outside Nairobi, the city where 50 tons of school materials were stored in a warehouse.

Numerous buildings have collapsed in Nairobi and other Kenyan towns in recent years, with the city's safety commissioner saying there have been at least 30 collapses since 2015.

The collapse of the two-storey building in Dagoretti, a poor suburb where many children live in makeshift homes, thronged the site where rescue workers searched through the rubble until the search for victims ended in the afternoon.

An AFP reporter at the site said books and desks were thrown through the debris of the two-storey building, a semi-permanent structure made of metal sheets and plastic sheeting.

"We had to use our hands," said a rescue worker at the scene: "This school was not just a classroom, it was a home for these children." The educational materials included textbooks, school bags, pencils and other equipment.

"What happened here today is regrettable but investigations have been launched," said the minister. "We have to stop this from happening again."

Numerous buildings have collapsed in Nairobi and other Kenyan towns in recent years, with the city's safety commissioner saying there have been at least 30 collapses since 2015.

"It is a very unfortunate incident," the minister added. "We can confirm that we have seven fatalities, " said government spokesmen. "We regret the loss of life but investigations will be carried out to establish the cause of the collapse."

"Niyala, police used violence against them," the FFC said in a statement. "We demand an independent investigation into the death of the student who was killed and injuries to the others."

The student had been questioned or detained over allegedly disrupting a state office. The FFC said it was a rare protest in Cairo.

Hundreds arrested after rare protest in Egypt

Egyptian authorities have rounded up hundreds of protesters against President Abdel Fattah el-Sissi, according to Human Rights Watch.

In a rare public display of dissent, hundreds took to the streets in Egypt, a country with strict anti-protest laws. At least 400 people were arrested, according to Human Rights Watch.

The demonstrations, shooting slogans and holding banners denouncing el-Sissi, caused a rare show of defiance in a country with strict anti-protest laws and a history of state repression.

Separate scenes of violence were played out in Alexandria, where el-Sissi's supporters say the crackdown is essential to stabilize Egypt after the revolution.

"It is a rare protest," said Mohamed Othman, deputy director of the Arab-Left National Council. "We demand an independent investigation into the death of the student who was killed and injuries to the others."
Trump shrugs off impeachment talk

President Donald Trump yesterday downplayed talk of impeachment over reports that he asked Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy to look into the financial dealings of Joe Biden and his family.

The president, who is embroiled in a widening political crisis over his treatment of Ukraine and his personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, told reporters: “W e had a perfectly wonderful phone call with the president. Hunter, his son, is into a great thing in that country. We’ve seen a lot of good things happen in recent times. The corruption issue in Ukraine is a huge problem. I think the American people want to see a lot of good things happen. It’s a very important phone call.”

Moments earlier, Trump had told reporters: “We had a perfect phone call with the president. Everybody knows it. It’s just a perfect phone call.”

“Trump did not provide evidence for the assertion that the phone call was perfect and said he would release any transcript. "I would release it, you know what? That was a perfect phone call," he said.”

Judge sequestered in trial of ex-cop who shot black man in his home

A federal judge was sequestered Monday in the trial of former Dallas police officer Amber Guyger, who is charged with manslaughter for fatally shooting Botham Jean, a 26-year-old African American in his home.

Guyger entered Jean’s apartment by mistake, believing it was her own. She mistook Botham Jean, 26, for a burglar and shot and killed him. The trial is scheduled to start on Tuesday.

Guyger, who has been on the force for six months, was responding to an interior disturbance call when she entered the apartment. She fired a gun into the apartment and killed Jean.

The trial was sequestered on Monday after attorneys for both sides agreed to the move. The decision to sequester the jury was made by Judge Aileen Bouvier, who is overseeing the trial.

The trial is expected to last for two weeks. It is the first trial in a high-profile case involving a police officer who killed an unarmed black man.

Two new cases in measles outbreak

Two new cases of measles were reported in the United States, bringing the total for the week to 1,241, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) said on Tuesday. The two new cases were reported in Illinois and Oklahoma. The number of cases in the outbreak has risen sharply since the beginning of the year, with the number of cases for the year at 1,241.

More than 71,000 doses of MMR vaccine have been administered in New York state to combat the outbreak, according to the state Department of Health.

A crowd of climate activists block traffic in the US capital

By Thomas Garvin, Reuters

A climate activist seeking to place US politicians to "think green" blocked traffic in the US capital, climbing alongside cars in a demonstration that was part of a global climate movement.

The activists were dancing at attention, waving placards with the words "Climates Action Now" in New York, where more than 15,000 people have been arrested on climate-related charges.

Several thousand people were arrested in New York on Wednesday as part of a global day of action to push for action on climate change.

Companies were expected to make announcements, including the building of new offices and the closure of old buildings, as part of the global day of action.

Some 1,000 people were arrested in New York, police said, as part of a nationwide day of action aimed at drawing attention to the dangers of climate change.

The protesters were demanding that politicians take action on climate change, calling on them to "think green" and "act now."
A 20 killed, dozens injured in Papua unrest: military

A military spokesman for Indonesia's military said on Monday that at least 20 people were killed in recent protests in the country's Papua region, and dozens more were injured, following unrest sparked by an agreement to build a new bridge in the region.

The military has deployed troops and police to the area to quell the protests, which have been ongoing since last week, after local leaders called for a new bridge linking the city of Wamena, where the unrest started, to the rest of the region.

The spokesman said the deaths occurred on Monday, but it was not immediately clear how many people were killed or what caused the violence.

The military has said it is investigating the deaths and injuries, but it has not provided any further details.

Meanwhile, opposition leader Sam Rainsy has called for an international inquiry into the violence, saying authorities are not doing enough to investigate the deaths and injuries.

Rainsy, who is based in Cambodia, has said he plans to return to Indonesia to see the situation for himself.

The military spokesman said it was too early to say whether any arrests would be made in connection with the violence.

The military has also said it will continue to deploy troops and police to the area until the situation stabilizes.

In a statement, the military said it was committed to ensuring the safety and security of its citizens.

The military has also called on the local authorities to take action to stop the violence and ensure the safety of local residents.

China sees Kiribati relations soon, no word on space tracking station

Korea, US to launch defence cost-sharing talks this week

Taxes will formally resume space station tracking station, which was suspended yesterday, following the Pacific Island and Australia’s relations with Taiwan. If it did not resume, the space-tracking station that China used to operate in Kiribati would be in doubt.

Kiribati announced last week that it was cutting relations with self-ruled Taiwan in favour of China, which claims Taiwan as a wayward province with no right of self-determination. Kiribati broke relations with Taiwan on July 15, 2021, when Taiwan’s President Tsai Ing-wen visited the island, causing Taiwan’s President Tsai Ing-wen to break off diplomatic relations with Taiwan.

Until then, China had operated a space-tracking station in Kiribati, which played a role in tracking China’s first manned space flight in 2003, just before the suspension of this. In addition, in Beijing, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Zhao Lijian said that China had suspended relations with Taiwan. China has been sending signals to Taiwan that it would continue efforts to reunify the island with mainland China. Kiribati’s decision to cut relations with Taiwan was an obvious sign that China would continue to send signals to Taiwan.

On the timing of when China and Kiribati would resume diplomatic relations, Zhao said that Kiribati’s move would serve as an example for other nations. Zhao said that China would continue efforts to reunify the island with mainland China. Kiribati’s decision to cut relations with Taiwan was an obvious sign that China would continue to send signals to Taiwan.

Korea, US to launch defence cost-sharing talks this week

South Korea and the United States will kick off negotiations this week on sharing the cost of American troops stationed on the Korean Peninsula. The first round of the new talks will take place in Washington, D.C., on Thursday, the ministry said.

In a previous round of talks, South Korea and the United States agreed to realign South Korea until 2027. But the government had been pressing for a faster timeline for the realignment.

The next round of talks will be held in South Korea, the ministry said.

Johnson is keeping his eye on an early general election

Boris Johnson is reportedly considering calling a general election as soon as next week in order to ensure his Brexit deal is approved by MPs.

Boris Johnson advised Queen Elizabeth about his intention to prorogue parliament to stop MPs from debating Brexit. He was accused of acting illegally to stop the UK from holding a no-deal Brexit.
Salmonella alert issued as 100 people infected by UK eggs

Guardian News and Media

The government has issued a salmonella alert as 100 people have contracted the bug thought to be specific to a English flock could be years.

Previously the FSA had insisted that the contamination had been caused by meat prepared in the UK, with the British Lion stamp, which is supposed to guarantee safety measures, is key to preventing salmonella, which can be spread to consumers via infected farm workers.

The government has set out a plan to prevent salmonella entering the food chain.

The latest report reveals that since 2000, salmonella has fallen in the UK. But the government has come close to eliminating the bug.

By 2025, the Woodland Trust is aiming for 5,000 hectares a year for the net zero carbon target, and to meet that target we need to plant 1mn people. Local groups are being prepared to start the tree-planting campaign.

The figure lays bare the scale of the problem has the government is approaching.

Trouble for Nath as riots witness deposes before SIT

Prime Minister Narendra Modi yesterday said the nation was not doing enough to tackle the climate crisis. "Eating for global warmth," he said, "is a serious issue." Speaking at the United Nations Climate Action Summit in New York on Monday, Modi said, "We are the architects of our future."

"We are going to increase our renewable energy capacity from 20 GW by 2022, and we are committed to further increasing it," Modi said.

According to him, trade and diplomatic relations with other countries have also been impacted due to the climate crisis. "Climate change is not an issue of our choice, it is a reality we have to face," he said.

After listening to the speeches of world leaders, the prime minister also urged the international community to work together to combat climate change. "We need, not greed. " he said. "Need, not greed has been the most from the deal."

Modi also said that India will increase its renewable energy target to 450GW by 2030. "This will be the most from the deal."

Prime minister added. Eighty-some countries have already committed to the Paris Agreement, he said. "We need, not greed has been the most from the deal."

Colombia’s ex-rebels turn to fashion to make a living

Colombia’s former guerrillas, who are now taking a break from their 52-year war, are turning to fashion to make a living. They have launched a new clothing line, “Rebels Design,” which features clothes made from recycled materials. The line is called “Rebels Design” because it represents a new chapter in the lives of these ex-combatants. The clothes are made from old uniforms, bullet shells, and other materials retrieved from their abandoned camps. The line is not only environmentally friendly but also a symbol of their transition from the conflict to peace. The clothes are designed by former combatants and reflect their experiences and struggles. The line is available for sale, and proceeds from the sales will support former combatants’ reintegration into society. This initiative is part of an extensive process of peacebuilding and reconciliation that has been underway in Colombia since the signing of the peace treaty in 2016. The treaty was signed between the Colombian government and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC). It has brought hope for a lasting peace in a country that has been torn by conflict for decades.

Ecuador tribes face choice between water and gold

A gold mining company that has sought to extract water from a sacred mountain in Ecuador has faced opposition from the indigenous community. The Tule people, who live in the Quimsacocha area, have been fighting against the mining project for years. The mine, which is proposed to be built by the Canadian company INV Metals, is said to have the potential to produce 500,000 ounces of gold per year. However, the Tule people believe that the mine will destroy their source of water, which is essential for their survival. They have organized protests and blockades to prevent the mining company from proceeding. The government has been caught in the middle, as it faces pressure from both sides. On one hand, it needs to attract foreign investment to boost its economy, but on the other hand, it has a responsibility to protect the rights of its indigenous people. This issue highlights the ongoing conflict between development and the preservation of cultural heritage and natural resources.

Big tech’s move to fund local news a cynical ploy?

By Emily Bell

nouncement this week that Google and Facebook both of whom are busy carving out recommendations for 2020 make it clear to what extent the two might just be related.

The growth of non-profit news in some places is being driven by the idea that a collective response to the near collapse of all local news holding companies – essentially accepts and potentially sources existing global effort. In particular, it promotes a reassessment of aid objectives and significant reductions in foreign aid spending.

If the threat facing development policy is to reverse globalisation, the initiative proposes developing a collective global effort to achieve the SDGs by 2030. This would bring about what I call a modus operandi that would help us transcend the simplistic binary division between local and global.

For lack of a better alternative, we might have to face with increasing regularity.

Amir addresses UN Climate Action Summit

Amir pledges $100mn to combat climate change

“Amir pledges $100mn to combat climate change

In the same context, and to achieve our long-term environmental goals, Qatar has prepared a set of fixed goals, the most important of which, is the integration of 200MW from solar energy within the next two years which will increase to 500MW afterwards, and we are working on regulating carbon pricing as one of the main steps in reducing emissions and rising investments towards cleaner options. The Amir also visited the United Nations headquarters in New York, the home of the UN, and attended the 74th session of the United Nations General Assembly. During the meeting, they reviewed bilateral relations and ways of promoting them. The meeting was attended by a number of members of the official delegation accompanying the Amir. From the Qatari side, the meeting was attended by members of the delegation accompanying the Amir.”
