Qatar urges Somalis to heal rift and consolidate national reconciliation

On Page 6

Somalia, Qatar urged all sides in the country to respect the national unity and work together to build a stable and prosperous society, and to support the efforts of the Somali government to consolidate national reconciliation, in line with the country’s commitment to national unity and the promotion of human rights and freedoms.

Somalia is facing significant challenges, including political instability, security threats, and economic difficulties. The government has been working to strengthen national reconciliation and promote national unity as a way to address these challenges.

The government has encouraged all sides in the country to engage in dialogue and work towards a peaceful resolution of disputes. This includes efforts to address issues such as territorial disputes and the use of violence.

Qatar has supported the efforts of the Somali government to consolidate national reconciliation. The country has provided financial and diplomatic support to help promote national unity and support the government in its efforts to address political instability and security threats.

In addition to providing financial and diplomatic support, Qatar has also supported efforts to address the country’s economic problems. The government has worked to promote economic development and support job creation, with the aim of reducing unemployment and poverty.

Overall, Qatar has been committed to supporting Somalia in its efforts to consolidate national reconciliation and promote national unity. The country has provided significant support to help address the country’s challenges and support the efforts of the government to promote political stability and economic development.
McDonald’s test to new plant-based meat burgers in Canada

McDonald’s Canada’s rival to the US-based fast-food chain has committed to testing new plant-based meat products in Canada.

“Can you imagine a meal where you can enjoy the taste, texture, and craveability of a plant-based patty? Our goal is to bring this to Canada,” said Tim Powell, senior vp of global innovation and sustainability at McDonald’s.

McDonald’s has also confirmed that it is investigating the possibility of launching a plant-based menu item in Canada, similar to its successful test in the US.

The move comes as the fast-food giant continues to focus on sustainable and plant-based options to cater to the growing demand for more environmentally friendly food choices.

McDonald’s Canada has already tested plant-based burgers in several markets around the world, including the US, where they have been well-received by customers.

The company’s commitment to plant-based options aligns with its broader sustainability goals and its efforts to reduce its environmental footprint.

The move is part of a larger trend in the fast-food industry towards more plant-based and sustainable menu items, as companies seek to attract environmentally conscious consumers.

McDonald’s has previously announced plans to test new plant-based menu items in other countries, including the UK and Japan, and has also invested in plant-based technologies and suppliers to support its menu expansion.

The company is expected to continue its testing and development efforts to bring plant-based options to Canada and other markets in the near future.

The move is likely to be welcomed by environmentalists and sustainability advocates, who have long called on the fast-food industry to reduce its reliance on animal products.

McDonald’s is one of the world’s largest fast-food chains, with over 39,000 locations in more than 100 countries.

The company has a long history of innovation and sustainability efforts, including its commitment to reduce its greenhouse gas emissions by 36% by 2030.

The new plant-based menu items will be part of the company’s broader sustainability strategy, which also includes reducing its use of fossil fuels, water, and paper.

The move is likely to be closely watched by competitors in the fast-food industry, who are also exploring plant-based options to attract customers and reduce their environmental impact.

McDonald’s Canada has a strong presence in Canada, with over 1,000 locations and over 100,000 employees.

The company has been a leader in the fast-food industry in Canada, with its iconic Big Mac sandwich and other popular menu items.

The new plant-based options are likely to be an important part of the company’s efforts to increase its market share and attract new customers, particularly in the growing segment of consumers interested in plant-based and sustainability-focused options.

A shallow tremor has rocked the city of Mirpur, the capital of Pakistan-administered Kashmir, as well as the cities of Lahore and Islamabad, during the early hours of today. As of yesterday, there were no immediate reports of deaths or injuries, but officials have warned of tremors in the coming days due to aftershocks.

The tremor was felt at 02:16 GMT, registering a magnitude of 4.7 on the Richter Scale. The US Geological Survey (USGS) had put the quake at 5.2 magnitude, with an epicenter located 90km southeast of Mirpur.

The tremor is part of a series of small earthquakes that have been occurring in the region since the powerful quake on October 8, 2005, which killed at least 87,000 people and caused widespread damage. The 2005 earthquake was one of the worst affected by the disasters, not the victims. Helping hands in the village of Nakkah were trying to restore electricity and provide medical aid to victims affected by the disaster.

Many buildings in parts of the disputed Kashmir were caused by old village houses that had not been built with standards. "I don't think we have any serious problems in building standards," said one resident who works for local authorities in a village named Nakkah.

In his acceptance speech, Faruqi talked about his experiences in watching films and being inspired by the mixture of culture and religion. He mentioned that his work has been a "long journey".

On October 2, 2005, a powerful quake hit parts of the disputed Kashmir, killing at least 90,000 people and causing widespread destruction. The quake registered 7.6 on the Richter Scale with its epicenter located 30km south of Mirpur.

A reporter from the World Health Organization (WHO) had traveled across Pakistan, Afghanistan, and India to assess the damage. At least 60,000 homes were damaged, and 5000 people died in the disaster.

The tremor has sparked fears of aftershocks from Tuesday's main quake, which struck the disputed region of Kashmir, as well as the Indian-administered portion of the disputed Kashmir.

A spokesman for the Indian government has confirmed that some of the deaths were caused by the earthquakes. The Indian government has also been criticized for its slow response to the disaster.

The tremor comes as the country is preparing to mark the 10th anniversary of the 2005 earthquake, which killed over 90,000 people and caused widespread destruction. The earthquake was one of the worst in recent history.

A powerful earthquake rocked Pakistan-administered Kashmir on Saturday, killing at least 28 people and injuring over 1,000 others. The earthquake was the largest to hit the region since the 2005 earthquake, which killed over 90,000 people.

Causes and treatment of apathy

THERE are many causes of apathy. Some of the more common include lack of purpose, stress, an overwhelming sense of hopelessness, physical and mental health problems, and a general feeling of disconnection from others.

Apathy is a state of mind where a person feels detached from their surroundings, disconnected from their inner self, and unmotivated to engage in activities. It can manifest as a lack of interest, motivation, or energy.

Treatment of apathy

1. Identify and address the underlying cause: Understanding the root cause of apathy is crucial to its treatment. This might involve seeking professional help or making lifestyle changes to address any underlying issues.

2. Set achievable goals: Setting small, achievable goals can help re-engage individuals and provide a sense of accomplishment.

3. Establish a routine: Establishing a daily routine can provide a sense of structure and purpose, helping to combat feelings of apathy.

4. Engage in physical activity: Regular physical activity can help improve mood and energy levels, which may help combat apathy.

5. Seek social support: Social interaction can help combat feelings of isolation and apathy.

6. Consider cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT): CBT is a form of therapy that aims to change negative thinking patterns and behaviors, which can help combat apathy.

7. Practice mindfulness: Mindfulness can help individuals stay present and engaged in the current moment, rather than dwelling on the past or future.

8. Rotate activities: Engage in a variety of activities to prevent boredom and maintain interest.

9. Consult a mental health professional: If apathy is severe or persistent, it may be necessary to consult a mental health professional for further evaluation and treatment.

10. Be patient: Recovery from apathy can be a gradual process, and it may take time to see improvements.
Impalement inquiry poses risks for 2020 Democrats

By Ginger Gibson and Simon Lewis

Washington

The congressional panel that is investigating President Donald Trump for a second time is poised to recommend that the Democratic-controlled House of Representatives begin a formal impeachment inquiry, an official familiar with developments said Tuesday.

Democrats have pointed to multiple instances in which Trump has offered quotes from the月中旬 publication of his book "The房间与" as evidence of his inciting of lawless violence. But in order to have the matter referred to the full House, the panel must first conclude that there is "prima facie" evidence of the offense, the official said.

This comes as Trump is facing growing pressure from within his own party to act on the scandal. Republicans have been divided on whether to support the president publicly, but many have voiced concerns about his actions and potential legal liabilities.

Many have pointed to Trump's tweets and public statements, which have consistently asserted that his actions were not非法 but instead were a legitimate exercise of his constitutional powers. But others have argued that his comments have crossed the line into incitement of violence.

In a statement released earlier this week, Trump said that the investigations were "a total disgrace" and warned that they could lead to "total chaos." But he also acknowledged that his team was working to prepare for a potential impeachment inquiry.

Still, the president's supporters have rallied around him, with some calling for united action against the "impeachment maniacs." Nearly 50 Republican senators have said they will vote against any effort to begin an impeachment inquiry, while others have signaled that they may vote to delay or weaken any such moves.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said last week that he would allow a vote on whether to begin the inquiry, but he has also signaled that he may try to limit the scope of any hearings. This has raised concerns among some Democrats, who fear that the Senate may ultimately be too divided to block an impeachment effort.

But others have argued that the Senate is divided enough that it could actually end up providing a check on Trump's actions, particularly if the Democrats ultimately secure a majority in the House.

Many have also pointed to the constitutional implications of an impeachment inquiry, with some arguing that it could set a dangerous precedent for future presidents.

Trump has repeatedly claimed that he is not subject to impeachment, but many have pointed to the precedent of Richard Nixon's resignation after a similar investigation.

The challenge for Democrats will be to find a way to proceed in a way that is both serious and responsible, while also ensuring that the process is conducted in a manner that is fair and transparent.

But with the president facing growing pressure from both sides of the aisle, it remains unclear whether a formal impeachment inquiry will actually be launched in the coming weeks.
LAGARDE’S EDGE IS EUROPE’S OPPORTUNITY

ightly regarded doctor ac-

ccurately diagnosed a per-nently impaired patient who was previously considered to be in good health.

The patient’s longstanding condition is not only due to negative actions on his part but also due to external factors that were beyond his control.

The problem is that we have been treating the symptoms rather than curing the disease.

The patient’s condition has been exacerbated by his lack of awareness and understanding of the underlying causes.

What we need is a comprehensive treatment plan that addresses both the root cause and the individual’s lifestyle factors.

The patient has been advised to make dietary and lifestyle changes, such as increasing physical activity and improving sleep quality.

The patient has also been prescribed medication to manage his condition effectively.

The patient’s overall health and well-being will improve gradually as a result of the combined efforts of the patient and healthcare provider.

In conclusion, the patient’s case highlights the importance of early diagnosis and appropriate management of chronic conditions to prevent further deterioration and improve the quality of life.

This lesson is applicable to many other situations, where a comprehensive and multi-disciplinary approach is necessary to achieve the desired outcomes.

SC chief promises all-inclusive Qatar 2022 World Cup

Hassan al-Thawadi, the Secretary General of the Supreme Committee for Delivery & Legacy at the 74th United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) in New York, told the Secretary General said Qatar 2022 will be a tournament for everyone — whatever their background.

The Secretary General of the Supreme Committee for Delivery & Legacy Hassan al-Thawadi speaks to NBC's Ayman Mohyeldin during the 74th United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) in New York. He was taking part in a question and answer session titled 'Sport's Transformational Power: The first FIFA World Cup in the Middle East'. The session was hosted on the sidelines of UNGA.

The Concordia Annual Summit, which launched in 2011, takes place on an annual basis in New York City on the sidelines of UNGA. It convenes the world's most prominent business, government and non-profit leaders to examine the world's most pressing social and environmental issues. The Summit facilitates constructive dialogue and provides a platform for collaboration, better dialogue and viable effective partnerships for positive social impact.

QNA

New York.

Hassan al-Thawadi, the Secretary General of the Supreme Committee for Delivery & Legacy Hassan al-Thawadi says Qatar would welcome everyone to enjoy the first FIFA World Cup in the Middle East. ‘It’s the first FIFA World Cup in an Arab, Middle Eastern country and that’s a great opportunity, don’t all necessarily share the same point of view but we are open to discuss our differences, our humanity is the commonality between us. Throughout history people have creatively solved Qatar and for sure. It’s a reconciling nation, a uniting tournament!”

All-Thawadi said Qatar 2022 was already uniting the region — three years before the big kick-off and despite the ongoing political blockade. People are supporters of the World Cup, he said. ‘People and our contractors are opening up a volunteering forum and over 200,000 people from the region expressed interest in taking part, including many people from blocking nations.

“We also launched the logo for our tournament a few weeks ago, which we projected onto iconic buildings in cities across the region so everyone could see them — whether they like it or not! People are supportive of our tournament a few weeks before the big kick-off and see that they have directly or indirectly benefitted from the hosting of the World Cup. Success will be in 2025 and 2026, that’s an example of the legacy we want to leave. ”

In addition to his appearance at the Concordia Summit, al-Thawadi also held bilateral meetings with numerous figures and organisations from public, private and civil society, including President of the Concordia Summit, President of the Cross-Border Consortium, International Humanitarian, World Economic Forum and Uber.
