Ministry announces launch of 13th Scientific Excellence Award

Omar bin Khattab Foundation for Development (Omar Fund) and Islamic Financial Development Corporation (IsDB) have signed a development credit agreement with the Tajik government, aimed at improving maternal, newborn and child health services in four districts of Tajikistan.

Omar Fund, in collaboration with the World Health Organization (WHO) and Ministry of Health of Tajikistan, has identified four districts of the country, including the areas that suffer from severe health challenges.

The agreement was signed by Dr Ali bin Fetais al-Marri, the Attorney-General of the Islamic Emirate of Qatar, and Dr Uladzimir Shchir, the Secretary-General of the Ministry of Health of Tajikistan.

The agreement will provide a loan of $50 million to finance the implementation of the project, which aims to improve maternal, newborn and child health services in four districts of Tajikistan. The project will also contribute to the development of the country’s health infrastructure and services, leading to improved health outcomes and better access to healthcare for the local population.

The project will involve the construction of new health centers and the renovation of existing ones, as well as the provision of medical equipment, supplies, and training for local health workers. The agreement also includes the establishment of a system for monitoring and evaluating the project’s impact, ensuring that the funds are used efficiently and effectively.

The signing ceremony was witnessed by representatives from various government departments and agencies, including the Ministry of Health, the World Health Organization, and the Islamic Development Bank. The agreement marks a significant step in strengthening the bilateral cooperation between Qatar and Tajikistan, and highlights the commitment of both countries to improving health outcomes and promoting sustainable development.

Qatar Science and Technology Park (QSTP), part of the Qatar Foundation for Research, Development, and Innovation, is inviting university students from across the globe to apply for the third edition of the Arab Innovation Academy (AIA), the largest entrepreneurship boot-camp of its kind in the region.

A collaboration between QSTP, the Entrepreneurship Programme (EIA), the hands-on entrepreneurship programme, and three universities in Qatar, the programme will introduce participants to an accelerated mode of experimental learning, including how to develop and launch a tech startup in a real marketplace with customer feedback. EIA creates an environment, where participants will learn the necessary skills and knowledge to pursue technological innovation development and make a positive impact in the world through innovation.

The first and second editions of the two-week startup boot-camp featured 127 and 106 entrepreneurs, respectively, from 35 countries and 96 students from across the region.

The third edition of AIA will be held from May 1 until June 27 and will be open to 106 students from 30 countries, including students from universities in Qatar and from across the globe.

Undergraduate students gain insights in biomedical research

The summer research programmes offered exceptional undergraduate students an opportunity to explore a career in research and development. Our annual research programme forms an integral part of our summer research programmes. It aims to encourage students to pursue excellence in the field of biomedical research. This year, the participants worked on several exciting projects and developed their scientific research and laboratory skills.

The programme was divided into two batches this year, running from May 1 until June 27 and from July 11 until August 14. Twenty students completed the programme in Qatar, including Carnegie Mellon University in Qatar, Tulane University (US) and the University of Calgary in Canada, as well as four participants from Arab countries to disrupt economies and business in the future.

Students complete internship at Chiyoda Almana Engineering

A number of students from several universities in Qatar have completed the Summer Internship Programme organised by Chiyoda Almana Engineering for this year, it was announced yesterday.

The leading project services company, Chiyoda Almana, is continually providing various training opportunities to graduates and university students to enable the knowledge and skills that they have acquired in university to be put to practice in the workplace, according to a statement.

Through 11 years of operation in Qatar, Chiyoda Almana has provided outstanding project services to its clients in the hydrocarbon and non-hydrocarbon fields. Chiyoda Almana has successfully executed more than 320 projects in co-operation with major plant operators and achieved a recognised reputation in the project services field by operating to the highest quality and safety standards.

Chiyoda Almana represents the Summer Internship Programme annually for the last eight years in collaboration with national and international universities in Qatar such as Qatar University and Texas A&M University.

Although the company’s services mainly focus on engineering, the internship opportunities are also extended to students of Finance, Accounting, Information Technology and others.

Over the two-month extended Summer Programme, participants had the opportunity to practice in a professional business environment and to carry out the daily work tasks assigned for them under the supervision of the highly experienced dedicated mentors.

The programme also offered participants the chance for practical exercise related to the topics studied through the academic programme. Such business practice is of great value to fresh graduates at the early stages of real business life.

The Summer Internship Programme comes as one of the many training opportunities provided by Chiyoda Almana to support the human resources development in Qatar in order to achieve the targeted sustainable development of the country, in line with Qatar National Vision 2030.

Recall of Mazda 3 models

The Ministry of Commerce and Industry, in cooperation with National Car Company, has announced the recall of Mazda 3 models of 2016-2018 due to a potential defect in the front wiper. The ministry confirmed the recall campaign comes within the framework of its ongoing efforts to protect consumers and ensure that vehicle dealers follow up on defects and repairs.

The ministry has said that it will co-ordinate with the dealer to follow up on the maintenance and repair works and will communicate with customers to ensure that the necessary repairs are carried out. The ministry urges all customers to report any violations to its Consumer Protection and Anti-Commercial Fraud Department, which processes complaints, inquiries and suggestions through the following channels: Call Centre: 16001, e-mail: info@moci.gov.qa, Twitter: @MOCIQATAR, Instagram: MOCIQATAR, mobile app for Android and IOS: MOCIQATAR.

The event marked the opening of the airline’s new office in Amman. Speaking at the gala, HE al-Baker said: “For Qatar Airways, Jordan is a key market. We serve Amman with three daily flights on the busy wide-body aircraft, including the Boeing 777.”

“The opening of this new office is a sign of our company’s growing demand in Jordan, which means we will be in a better position to serve our customers with more flights and options,” he added.

Qatar Airways Group Chief Executive HE Akbar al-Baker said: “This office comes as a response to the increase in demand, which we have been noticing a considerable increase of the Jordanian market. We are now keen to expand the operations of our airline from the Amman office to the Jordanian market, and can confirm that the new office will enable us to achieve this objective.

“Qatar visitors to the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan will benefit from Qatar Airways’ range of flights. We have had a very strong relationship with Jordan over the years. And today marks a new chapter in our growing relationship with the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan,” he added.

The projects will be celebrated during the 2019 WISE Awards Ceremony. Out of 481 project submissions, the WISE team and a panel of judges selected the top 15 projects that have already demonstrated their impact on education. The six winners will be announced during the gala dinner event and the positive role and impact it will have on education challenges.

Qatar Airways has also expanded its network in the Middle East and will continue to add new destinations worldwide.

Football for development workshop concludes

Generation Amazing workshops concluded in its workshop on football for development, which was organised by the Qatar National Commission for Education, Culture and Science at Qatar University. The workshop was organized in cooperation with Supreme Committee for Delivery and Legacy (SCD) and the physical education department and centre for educational training and development at the ministry.

The commission’s second general Dr Hamad Al-Sayed Al-Sayed said: “Generation Amazing is one of Qatar’s outstanding projects in the field of sports, and the commission seeks to achieve and support it in all public schools in Qatar. The workshop will bring together experts in all grades and schools in Qatar.

Al-Sayed said the workshop was open to all schools, which included last year in 12 schools - the positive role and impact it has on the teachers and students. She added that the workshop was attended by teachers of physical education in all public schools through football, which contributes to the development and promotion of football in Qatar. The workshop will continue until the end of the season.”

Falcons exhibition begins at Katara

By Hamza Al-Bali

The third edition of S’hail — the International Hunting and Falcons Exhibition — opened yesterday at the Cultural Village. The exhibition, considered one of the world’s leading events in the field of hunting and falcons, attracts more than 20 countries around the world.

Opening inaugural and jujube activities included the launch of a special edition of Ooredoo and the Qatari Airports Authority, and their stand. The exhibition, which got under way yesterday, witnessed the participation of more than 50 local and international companies and manufacturers from economy sectors. The event is expected to attract more than 140 exhibitors from around the world over its three-day duration.

The exhibition is one of the unique features of its kind, and this time it has a distinctive addition by way of digitalisation, said Sheikha Al Suhail, Chairperson of S’hail Organising Committee.

"The exhibition runs from September 5 to 8, 2019. This year, the exhibition also has a specialised restaurant catering to the visitors inside the exhibition area, as well as a special food and beverage area," Sheikha Al Suhail added.

The falcon auction, which is one of the unique features of S’hail, this time has a distinct and exciting addition by way of digitisation.

"The first of its kind in terms of live auction, this auction will be a real opportunity to reach out to the international market as full of opportunities due to the love of Qataris for falcons and hunting. The falcon auctions, which form part of the S’hail exhibition, will be held on Friday from 3pm till 11pm. It is an effort to actively seek every opportunity to inspire and nourish the interest of Qatari falcon owners, to foster gender balance to attract more and more tourism," S’hail chairman Dr Khalid bin Ibrahim Al-Sulaiti added.

A number of European companies and companies and manufacturers, including European companies and manufacturers, including Iain Norel, a specialist in traditional falcon sport and culture, will be present for the first time in Doha. The exhibition will be held at Katara, the venue for the World Women’s Health Forum from 5pm till 9pm on Friday.

"The exhibition has been modelled on the Qatar International Hunting and Falcons Exhibition," she added. "It is part of our company’s culture to ensure we support events that are important to our identity by offering our products and services with the latest technology, sampling, and exhibitions, training, and even cultural activities for kids, including special training for children, to help them enjoy the sport and fishing hands-on and in-depth." Ooredoo will host a series of exclusive events, including a perfect falcon show, and a variety of activities for visitors of all ages.

The exhibition will cover a wide range of falcon-related products and services and in particular the falcon auctions, which is one of the unique features of S’hail, this time has a distinct addition by way of digitisation.

"The exhibition is in line with international standards in the field and, accordingly, the exhibition made the necessary arrangements to ensure the presence of digitisation in this edition of S’hail," Al-Sulaiti added.

"We have to make sure that we do not lose a centimetre in order to achieve everything to the best possible scope and with the best possible interest towards the exhibition," he added.

President Hassan Rouhani has ruled out bilateral talks with the United States and Trump, saying that “Iran has riposted by scaling back commitments to the nuclear deal.”

“Several issues were still on the table last year. Unfortunately after the US deal, the Europeans haven’t acted on their commitments or in some cases they could have acted but didn’t,” he said.

Rouhani has said that several preparatory talks have been held with the United States and its allies in the past weeks, in furtherance to his assurance to France of no further enemy moves against Iran.

“Until now the US has not taken any steps to stop its threat to send its submarines, which under the agreement in the cusp of confrontation in June last year, the equivalent of 300 kilograms of uranium to the nuclear power station in Iran,” he said.

“With respect to the military threat from the US, I should say that the other countries are that they continue to be our US, we cannot allow this to happen in the region,” Rouhani added.

UN rights workers raised concerns yesterday that Myanmar’s military regime was holding suspected torturers and Musuo tribesmen. The UN said such detentions are unsurprising in a country where torture is widespread.

Indonesia is imposing restric- tions on foreign travel to its restive Papua province. The country’s foreign ministry announced yesterday that air travel is the only option for Papua tourists, following a series of six protests that began last month.

Police in Vietnam have accused a former minister of taking $5m in bribes, raising pressure on the government as the country faces criticism over its human rights record. The police have arrested Vuong Pholachi, the minister who had been held in a presidential vacation home. He was said to have been responsible for transforming Vietnam into a world-class business destination. Vietnamese officials have said that Pholachi had accepted bribes from foreign businessmen, including one who was accused of paying $1m to influence a decision on a major power plant project.

Vietnam’s government has an- nounced plans to restrict foreign travel to its restive Papua province, setting a precedent for other Southeast Asian countries to follow. The move comes after a series of protests in the province, which has been the site of ongoing clashes between the military and separatist groups. The police have said that they are investigating reports of torture and other human rights abuses.

Vice President Pham Binh Minh, who is due to visit Papua on Sunday, has said that the province’s situation is “alarming”. He has urged the local authorities to take urgent action to address the issue.

The police report has been released to the media, and it was revealed that Pholachi had been under investigation for several months. The police have said that they are now seeking to question him further.

China backs North Korea amid deadlocked nuclear talks

AFP

HONG KONG (AP) — China backed North Korea amid deadlocked nuclear talks yesterday, allowing Pyongyang to visit the North in return. Beijing and Washington are engaged in a long-running diplomatic process over the North’s nuclear programme after it continued to call for talks and said the two sides needed to “build mutual understanding” and “set up premises” in advance.

“Both sides have an interest in the current impasse in the talks over the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue,” the foreign ministry said.

South Korea and the United States have also said they are willing to resume talks with North Korea. However, North Korea has so far rejected any discussion about denuclearisation.

China has said it will support North Korea’s efforts to improve relations with its neighbors and the international community.

Hong Kong leader Lam insists she will stay on

AFP

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong leader Carrie Lam has insisted she will stay on as the territory’s leader, despite months of pro-democracy protests that have forced thousands of politicians and public figures to resign.

Carrie Lam has said she will not resign over the protests, which have been ongoing since June, and that she will continue to lead the government, despite calls from critics to step down.

Hong Kong’s embattled leader announced yesterday she had no intention of resigning after a night of record-breaking protests that saw tens of thousands of people march in the streets in support of democracy.

Carrie Lam had been under increasing pressure to resign after the protests, which have been ongoing since June, and which have seen thousands of people take to the streets in support of democracy.

The protests have been sparked by a proposed extradition law, which would allow Hong Kong residents to be sent to China for trial. The law has been widely opposed by Hong Kong people, who fear it could be used to criminalise opposition to the Chinese government.

Teen loses sight and hearing due to junk food diet

Harry has faced accusations of having an eating disorder and it was even suggested that his weight loss could be due to a restrictive food intake disorder.

Speaking of the royal family, an initiative to make the travel industry more sustainable has been launched. Visa has announced that it will offset the carbon dioxide emissions from its flights to attend recent engagements and events.

The criticism prompted singer Harry to release a statement, saying: “I do not have an eating disorder. I have a restrictive food intake disorder.”

Italian Premier Edouard Philippe speaks at launch of a multiparty debate on domestic violence in Paris yesterday.

The European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights yesterday launched an online platform of its guide to safety and rights of victims of domestic violence.

The platform aims to help protect up to 200,000 victims each year by providing them with information and advice.

It is the first such platform to be launched at the EU level.

The agency, based in Bonn, Germany, said it had received over 200,000 requests for help in 2018.

Of these, around 10,000 were from victims of domestic violence.

The agency said it had also received around 40,000 requests from victims of sexual violence.

It said that the platform would help to identify victims who were most at risk.

It would also provide victims with information on their rights and options.

The platform will be available in 24 languages and will be updated regularly.

It will also be used to support the implementation of the Council of Europe’s Convention on preventing and combating violence against women.

The convention, known as the Istanbul Convention, was adopted in 2011 and is the first global treaty on violence against women.

It is currently in force in 38 countries.

The agency said it would be available in all EU member states and in the countries associated with the EU.

It is one of a series of initiatives launched by the agency to combat violence against women.

Another initiative is a campaign to raise awareness of the issue, which it has launched in five countries.

The agency said it was also working to increase the availability of support for victims of sexual violence.

It said it was encouraging countries to adopt the Istanbul Convention in order to increase the availability of support for victims of sexual violence.

The campaign will be launched in the coming months.

Controversial minister in the running for Georgia PM

Sybille Mikwe, AFP

Tbilisi

Georgia’s ruling party has put forward a controversial interior minister, Giorgi Gakharia, as prime minister, further fueling an already high-level political debate in the tiny Black Sea nation.

In a televised statement, the deputy leader of the party, Ashot Andranikian, said Gakharia was believed to be the man in charge in Georgia — and he presented the candidacy of Giorgi Gakharia to the post of prime minister. He said it was a “tough decision” to finally back Gakharia, who had so far warily agreed by par-liament when asked to form a new government, but who had so far held a majority. The comment followed Monday’s surprise resignation of premier Mamuka Bakhtadze.

“Against this background, we have formed a government,” he said. “It is time for us to make this decision.” Bakhtadze thanked the ruling party for its support, but did not announce the changes.

He said the new government would replace the cabinet of Interior Minister Vakhtang Gomelauri, who was expected by Bakhtadze himself to get the role.

In protest of Gakharia’s nomination, opposition MPs demanded a plenary session of Georgia’s parliament to discuss the new government.

In a televised interview this week, Gakharia said he would appoint the next interior minister, Ivanishvili, as defence minister.

The nomination is expected to be approved by parliament this week.

Gakharia, a lawyer and former state security service V aktang Gomelauri as defence minister.

Prime minister Irakli Garibashvili then announced his resignation yesterday.

The move followed Monday’s resignation of premier Bakhtadze after a wave of opposition protests over a decision to approve the formation of a new government.

The protests and ensuing crackdown on them have increased pressure on the government ahead of an election scheduled for October.

The committee said it had requested that two men, including a police officer, be arrested.

I would love Kejriwal campaign a big hit: AAP leader

The leaders of AAP's 'I love Kejriwal' campaign, launched on Sunday, have worked very hard to make it a success. The campaign was inspired by the Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal who has added a new slogan, "I love Kejriwal," to his list of popular slogans.

"We are making a big push to make this campaign a success," said a leader of the campaign. "We are targeting people from all walks of life and urging them to support Kejriwal and the AAP in the upcoming elections.

"The campaign is not just about Kejriwal, but also about the work his government has done for the people of Delhi," said another leader. "We are highlighting the achievements of Kejriwal and his government in sectors like education, health, and infrastructure.

"We are also reaching out to the youth and urging them to support the AAP," said the leader. "We believe that young people are the future of our country and we are trying to inspire them to vote for Kejriwal and the AAP in the upcoming elections.

"The campaign is a huge success so far," said the leader. "We have received a lot of support from people all over Delhi and we are confident that we will be able to make a difference in the upcoming elections.

"We are also reaching out to other political parties and urging them to support Kejriwal and the AAP," said the leader. "We believe that a coalition of like-minded parties can win the upcoming elections and we are trying to reach out to other parties.

"We are working very hard to make this campaign a success and we are confident that we will be able to achieve our goals," said the leader. "We are grateful to the people of Delhi for their support and we are looking forward to a bright future for our city.

"We are also reaching out to the media and urging them to support Kejriwal and the AAP," said the leader. "We believe that the media has a big role to play in the upcoming elections and we are trying to reach out to them.

"We are also reaching out to our supporters and urging them to spread the word about the AAP and Kejriwal," said the leader. "We believe that every vote counts and we are asking our supporters to vote for the AAP in the upcoming elections.

The new US ambassador to Mexico has taken on a new role: Frida Kahlo. The Mexican artist is widely celebrated for her work, which often explores themes of pain and suffering, but she is also known for her political activism. Trump's new envoy, Christopher Landau, was seen wearing a Frida Kahlo-inspired mask during his visit to the country's National Palace. "It's a great honor to visit Mexico and meet with President Lopez Obrador," Landau said. "I'm looking forward to working closely with him and his team to advance our shared goals of prosperity and stability for our two nations." A spokesperson for the Department of State declined to comment on the symbolism of the Frida Kahlo mask. The Art Institute of Chicago, which houses a large collection of Kahlo's works, praised the new envoy for his "appreciation of the power of art to strengthen diplomatic ties." The visit comes as the United States and Mexico work to strengthen their economic and political relationship, amid rising tensions with other Latin American countries. Argentina faces dengue outbreak as climate shifts

Thomson Reuters Foundation

Central America is grappling with its worst outbreak of the mosquito-borne dengue fever in more than a decade, with officials warning that climate change could make the disease more widespread and harder to control. With temperatures soaring in recent weeks, authorities are bracing for an increase in the number of cases. "It's been hottest since records started in 1990," said Guatemalan health minister, Carolina López. "We are seeing cases of dengue fever in places where we had none before." The dengue virus is spread by the Aedes aegypti mosquito, which thrives in warm, wet conditions. The virus is transmitted to humans through mosquito bites and can cause fever, muscle pain, joint pain and skin rashes. In severe cases, it can lead to dengue hemorrhagic fever, a life-threatening complication. Officials are urging people to take precautions, such as using insect repellent, wearing long-sleeved clothing and fixing up homes to prevent mosquitoes from entering. "The climate change is altering the conditions that dengue needs to thrive," said WHO representative in Guatemala, Cesar Guevara. "We need to prepare ourselves." The outbreak has hit hardest in Central America, with countries such as Guatemala and Nicaragua reporting the highest numbers of cases. "This is not just a health crisis," said World Health Organization official, Dr. Margaret Chan. "It's a crisis for every person on this planet, especially children who are most vulnerable." The WHO has called on governments to increase funding for dengue control programs and to invest in research to develop new vaccines and treatments. Norway talks must focus on polls: Venezuela opposition

Bloomberg

The Venezuelan opposition is pushing for elections, but Norway's election minister says there is little chance of holding a presidential vote in the coming months. "We have been clear that we will not hold elections in Venezuela," said Norway's election minister, Kjersti Stensaker. "The authorities are not ready, and the opposition has not agreed to a new round of talks." The opposition has accused the government of blocking any talks on elections, and has threatened to continue protests to pressure for free and fair elections. The government, meanwhile, has said it will not agree to any elections unless the opposition agrees to end its protests. "We will not negotiate with terrorists," said Maduro. "The only solution is dialogue with the international community." The opposition has said it is willing to talk, but only if there is a clear path to elections. Guatemala arrests marketplace politician for graft

Bloomberg

The Guatemala attorney general has arrested a former minister of economy in connection with a graft scandal. The minister, Carlos Hirsch, was arrested last week in connection with a probe into alleged embezzlement of funds earmarked for a national government program. Hirsch is the latest in a series of high-profile arrests in Guatemala, which is grappling with one of the highest levels of graft and corruption in Latin America. "This is a clear message to all officials," said Attorney General Consuelo Porras. "We will not tolerate corruption in Guatemala."

Argentina's black market peso vesos from official rate

Bloomberg

Argentina's black market peso, which is pegged to the US dollar, has dropped sharply against the official rate in recent weeks. The peso has fallen 10% since the beginning of the year, as the government struggles to contain inflation and debt. "The black market is out of control," said Axel Kicillof, Argentina's finance minister. "We need to take urgent action to stabilize the peso and bring down inflation." "When restrictions are put in place, people lose confidence," said Rafael Lousteau, an economist at the Inteconomics consultancy. "The peso has dropped sharply, and there are signs of panic in the market." The government has said it will soon announce measures to strengthen the peso, but analysts are skeptical that this will be enough to stem the tide. "The government is running out of options," said Francisco Bolaños, an economist at the Buenos Aires Stock Exchange. "They need to take bold steps to stabilize the peso and bring down inflation.""

Poverty worsens plastics crisis in the Philippines

By Glee Jalea

A new study has found that the Philippines is one of the countries that are most affected by the plastics crisis, with over 20,000 prisoners involved in the release of plastics waste.

The study conducted by the Office of the President shows that the Philippines has the highest number of prisoners involved in the release of plastics waste, with over 20,000 prisoners involved in the release of plastics waste.

The study also found that the majority of prisoners involved in the release of plastics waste were involved in the release of single-use plastics, such as coffee, toothpaste, and shampoo sachets.

The study recommended that the government should consider the findings of the study and implement policies to reduce the use of single-use plastics.

A no-deal Brexit could shrink the UK’s GDP by 8% within a year, according to a report for the Bank of England

Bank of England

A few months after the 2016 referendum, a 35-year-old family firm of carpenters and joiners in the north of England was so worried about no-deal Brexit that it set up a GoFundMe page to support Brexit households.

“A few weeks ago, I woke up in a situation I didn’t know existed,” she wrote. “I knew I had to get involved. I knew I had to do something. I was running for Mayor in the most hostile, most Brexit-minded seat in the country.”

The report predicts that a no-deal break-up of the UK and the EU could cost Britain £6.3bn per year, with a further drop expected in 2020. Britain’s central bank also said a no-deal Brexit could, in the worst case, cost the UK’s GDP by 8% within a year, reaching £81bn, or the equivalent of 3.5% of GDP.

The report, which was released on October 28, has increased the likelihood for the hardest form of Brexit, one with no transitional period.

Without a formal withdrawal accord at the time of the divorce, the UK will be left on its own terms to access to the EU, the world’s largest trading bloc. The UK-EU trade relationship would suddenly revert to default terms negotiated in 1993 by members of the World Trade Organisation.

It would mean tariffs on UK exports to the EU, additional customs controls at ports and airports, in addition to a multitude of other free-trade restrictions.

Some UK lawmakers paint this as a disaster for the British economy, while others see an opportunity for an unbundled Britain to pursue better trade terms with other nations.

The Brexit imbroglio is undermining London’s coveted status as the global financial hub. Almost half of the UK’s 25,000 financial institutions are looking to shift their main business to rival financial centres in the EU.

Some UK lawmakers dismiss the warning as part of a “Brexit propaganda campaign”. But, according to the report, Brexit could disrupt the financial services industry by as much as 25% in 2019, according to the Bank of England, with a further drop expected in 2020. Britain’s central bank also said a no-deal Brexit could, in the worst case, cost the UK’s GDP by 8% within a year.

The French President Emmanuel Macron, for example, was praised for his American counterpart, Donald Trump, in check at the summer Biarritz summit.

The G7 summit was a political moment for the major developed economies, especially China, meant to signal unity and to foster peace and stability in the world. But even that slight advantage was undermined by Trump's interest in the summ's agenda. Indeed, the G7 summit was a marker of the current trend, the conclusion of the world's permanent international governance away from the United States.

Cancer overstates heart disease as biggest rich-world killer

Business

Cancer has overtaken heart disease as the world's biggest killer within just a few decades, according to new data from the World Health Organization (WHO).

According to a new study published in the Lancet last month, 1.8 million people died worldwide from heart disease in 2017, compared to just 1.4 million from cancer.

The researchers found that the number of deaths from heart disease has increased by 25% in the last 20 years, while the number of cancer deaths has remained relatively stable.

The study highlights the importance of addressing heart disease, which can be prevented through healthy lifestyles and early detection.

Conclusion

The twilight of the global order

The 2018 financial crisis had led to a new reality, with the world divided by fronts and backwaters. Together with the rise of the emerging economies, especially China, Russia and Brazil, the G7 lost its place as the dominant global economic power. The eighties, nineties and early twenty-first century saw an age of international economic stability and growth. But that ended with the 2008 financial crisis, which led to a decade of global economic uncertainty and volatility.

As of August 16, 2019, satellite data from the Earth Observatory, show that total fire activity in the Amazon region has decreased from 30% of the territory to 8% of the legal Amazon biome; 35%, if it is in the transitional Cerrado biome; 35%, if it is in the central Amazon biome; and 20% in the other area between the Cerrado and the Amazon biome; and 20% in the other area between the Cerrado and the Amazon biome.

In fact, Macron announced before the summit: “Our report found cancer to be the leading cause of death in the world in 2017, the researchers said, noting that the number of deaths from heart disease has increased by 25% in the last 20 years, while the number of cancer deaths has remained relatively stable.

The study highlights the importance of addressing heart disease, which can be prevented through healthy lifestyles and early detection.
