The Ministry of Commerce and Amity (MoCA) has announced the launch of an initiative that sets the maximum prices of fish and seafood and regulates their sale based on a mandatory bulletin.

In a statement yesterday, the ministry and the initiative is aimed at preventing uncontrolled price increases, creating free market competition, preventing monopolistic practices, and ensuring that purchases are made at reasonable prices. The price will be published daily following an auction that will take place under the supervision of the MoCA.

The daily fish and seafood prices will be published in the gazette and on the MoCA's official website. The initiative is a response to the needs of consumers and the need to prevent monopolistic practices and ensure the competitiveness of the fish and seafood market. The initiative will help to stabilize prices and prevent price gouging.

The initiative is the result of a comprehensive study of the market and the needs of consumers. The Ministry of Commerce and Amity is committed to maintaining a balance in the relationship between consumers and suppliers or merchants in order to protect the commercial and economic environment.

The ministry will issue the daily bulletin that sets the maximum prices of fish and seafood. The prices will be in line with the market situation and will be updated daily. Violations of the mandatory bulletin will be subject to penalties.

UN official: Qatar backs global efforts in fight against terrorism

Executive director of the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate of the Arab League, Ms. Hiba, said that Qatar is an active player in supporting global efforts to find solutions to the challenge of combating terrorism and extremism.

In an interview with a local daily newspaper last week, Ms. Hiba, who is in Qatar as a member of the International Conference on Stabilizing the Causes of Extremism, said that the conference focuses on the motives of extremism and discusses the causes of the phenomenon and the efforts to address the threats posed by terrorism.

"The fight against terrorism is a battle that requires global efforts at the highest level, which must be effective and aimed at addressing the threats posed by terrorism," Ms. Hiba quoted as saying.

She said that the conference is an opportunity to learn about the experience of others, and to support and develop the process of cooperation between Qatar and the international community.

She added that this cooperation is important for member states to understand, discover and address the threats posed by terrorism, including the global terrorist threat, and more than one country.

"The conference's focus on the motives of extremism is relevant to our collective efforts to fight the phenomenon and address the threats posed by terrorism," she said.

The conference aimed at discovering solutions to the challenge and the fact that the motives of extremism can vary from country to country and region to region.

Ms. Hiba noted that the conference focused on the motives of extremism and the various ways to deal with it.

The conference aims to stabilize the causes of extremism, reaffirm that Qatar is showing progress in the exchange of information on parliamentary relations through the fourteenth meeting of the Arab League and Brazil's Chamber of Deputies president expressed his keenness to see the renaissance witnessed in various fields, praising Qatar's distinguished role at the regional and international levels.

The meeting was attended by Qatar Foundation's executive chairman with Latam American and Caribbean countries, Qatar's ambassador to Brazil and Qatari presidential official.

HMC teams perform six kidney, one liver transplant over five days

H ead Medical Corporation's (HMC) transplant team and organ donation office have performed six kidney and one liver transplant over the last five days.

The organ for the record number of transplanted organs came from four local, reduced donors and one deceased donor. These donors represent residents from seven different nationalities - Qatar, Syrian, Bangladeshi, Filipino, and Egyptian. Dr. Abdulrahman Jaddan, medical director, Hamad General Hospital and head of Qatar Organ Donation Center (QODC), said that the successful use of the OPO procedures is a testament to the teamwork, successful cooperation of the organ donation and transplant teams.

"This team includes doctors, transplant coordinators, nurses, and support staff from different departments, such as surgery, medicine, pathology, and nursing," he added. "The result was an successful kidney transplants and one liver transplant, all-like-running procedures for our patients. We wish them all good health, and we wish our patients and their families in the recovery period a quick recovery and a healthy life."

Dr. Jaddan stressed that the organ donors, including relatives, were treated with care and respect, which is the right attitude towards people who commit this noble act.

"When an organ donor is treated with respect, the quality of the organ to be transplanted is improved, and this makes the chance of survival for the recipient higher.

HMC offers an excellent standard of care and the positive outcomes of transplant recipients performed in the country encourages us to advise the public, especially relatives of potential organ donors, to consider donating their organs, particularly the liver and kidneys, to save the lives of Qataris living in Qatar and in the GCC region."

The team performed a total of six kidney transplants. Two kidney transplants were performed at Hamad General Hospital (HGH), one at Al-Shofa Hospital, one at Al-Gharrafa Hospital, and one at Al-Khor Hospital. One liver transplant was performed at HGH.

The achievement was marked by a special event and a closing ceremony at the Hamad General Hospital, gathering together the clinical and support teams and their families as a sign of thanks and appreciation for their efforts.

"We are so glad that the Qatari people have shown their support for the clinic and their appreciation for our efforts in the field of organ transplantation," said Dr. Jaddan.

"We are pleased with the success of these transplants, which demonstrate the high standard of care and the positive outcomes of transplant recipients performed in the country, and encourage us to advise the public, especially relatives of potential organ donors, to consider donating their organs, particularly the liver and kidneys, to save the lives of Qataris living in Qatar and in the GCC region."

Qatar Airways currently operates a modern fleet of more than 250 aircraft via its hub, Hamad International Airport (HIA), serving more than 150 destinations worldwide. Qatar Airways has recently launched an array of exciting new destinations, including Rabat, Morocco; Izmir, Turkey; Malé, Maldives; Shanghai, China; Singapore; Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia; and Gaborone, Botswana to its extensive route network.

Qatar Airways currently has over 140 registered countries in its network, which is likely to grow during the second half of 2019. With the addition of new destinations, the airline is on track to achieve its goal of becoming a truly global airline that connects the world of tomorrow.

Qatar Airways has been awarded the ‘World’s Best Airline’ award for the fourth successive year, with Qatar Airways being crowned as the world’s number one airline by international air transport rating organisation Skytrax. The award was presented at the 2019 World Airline Awards, managed by international air transport rating organisation Skytrax. It was also named ‘World’s Best Business Class’ for the fourth consecutive year.

Qatar Airways currently operates over 50 weekly flights to some of the world’s most popular destinations, including Kuala Lumpur, Singapore, Hong Kong, Beijing, and Tokyo. The airline has been named the ‘World’s Best Airline’ in the 2019 World Airline Awards, demonstrating its commitment to providing exceptional service to its customers.

In 2019, Qatar Airways became the first airline to win the ‘World’s Best Airline’ award five times, demonstrating its air- line’s consistency in providing world-class service. Fifth Qatar Patient Safety Week set to begin on September 15

The Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) is organizing the 5th Qatar Patient Safety Week from September 15-21, with the participation of more than 1,150 health professionals from various medical institutions across Qatar.

MoPH is collaborating with the first-ever World Patient Safety Day, which the World Health Organization (WHO) has called for to be celebrated on September 17 to raise awareness of patient safety and ignite people's commitment to making healthcare safer.

The health centre currently serves a population of 78,000 patients. It plays a critical role in delivering that care, with a comprehensive service, in handling a range of urgent medical needs. We will provide patients with a comprehensive service, delivered by a team specialized in handling a range of urgent medical needs.

Years back, QRCS has been operating in Nepal since 2013, with many water, sanitation, and food aid projects. In April 2015, a representation team from QRCS made a significant contribution to the response to the strong earthquake, by deploying the mobile medical clinic, distributing food and non-food aid, and responding to the devastation caused by natural disasters in the country. QRCS has already supported previous humanitarian activities and missions in Nepal.

The urgent care centre will be led by Dr Hayam Ali al-Sada, director of Abu Baker Siddiq Health Center, in collaboration with the Healthcare Practitioners, professional institutions and private sectors to ensure the safety of patients and to develop the primary objective of making healthcare services more patient-centered and to keep up with the international developments in the field.

MoPH launched a communication campaign aimed at spreading the concept of patient safety among the workforce in healthcare institutions and their patients, and in light of the outstanding success of the event in the previous sessions, the ministry is keen on continuously developing its activities to achieve the primary objective of making healthcare services more patient-centered and to keep up with the international developments in the field.

MoPH aims to prevent hospital-acquired infections and nosocomial infection, reduce the damage caused by natural disasters, and to provide an effective strategy to reduce infection risks.

QRCS, QFFD provide emergency aid to victims of Nepal floods

QRCS and Qatar Fund for Development (QFFD) have immediately activated its Disaster Information Management Center (DIMC) to coordinate with other partners. A field team from QRCS mission in Nepal took part in the assessment done by Nepal Red Cross Society, government officials, and National Crisis Management Committee.

QRCS-funded emergency distribution projects and relief kits were distributed by QRCS implementation teams.

The competition will award the students, researchers and institutions in the nine categories of the competition.
Saudi statement on ‘addressing violations’ totally misleading: NHRC

The National Human Rights Committee (NHRC) has slammed the Saudi statement released in late September, criticizing the kingdom for misleading the international public by giving misleading statistics to cover up their violations against citizens and residents of Qatar, warning that attempts to conceal facts would not work for the Saudi authorities.

NHRC noted that since the beginning of the blockade it has received reports from human rights bodies in Saudi Arabia to address damages affecting the rights and freedoms of Saudi citizens and residents resulting from any action taken by the Saudi authorities.

In a statement yesterday, NHRC said that, “At a time when the National Human Rights Committee and international human rights organizations are working to de-escalate the humanitarian crisis, the violators and compensate victims of the blockade, the Saudi authorities have attempted to mislead the international public by providing false data and documents, and denying the existence of any violations. Last but not least, Saudi Arabia has not allowed any visits to Saudi Arabia, to allow the technical missions of the Office of High Commissioner for Human Rights to visit the kingdom to assess violations resulting from coercive measures taken by the Saudi authorities.”

NHRC added that it has continued to provide these organizations with all the required information and evidence to prove the violations committed by the Saudi authorities.

“Whether they are human rights organizations or the United Nations, international organizations and specialized international agencies. In this context, NHRC continued that it was continuing to provide them with information and evidence that proved the violations committed by the Saudi authorities are documented by the United Nations and their international partners.”

The statement noted that since the beginning of the blockade it has received reports from human rights bodies in Saudi Arabia to address damages affecting the rights and freedoms of Saudi citizens and residents resulting from any action taken by the Saudi authorities.

NHRC also criticized the lack of responsiveness to the letter of private representatives and international organizations. But the report referred to the National Human Rights Council at its 42nd session (from September 4 to 27, 2019) issued by the Special Rapporteur on the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures on the enjoyment of human rights, paragraph 15, statute that “concrete measures imposed by various groups of international and regional systems on the rights of Qatar must be taken.”

NHRC stressed that the unilateral measures and sanctions imposed on Qatar are a complete blockade against its citizens and residents, and this is a flagrant abuse of all international human rights treaties and conventions. Most of the violations committed by the Saudi authorities are documented by the United Nations, international organizations and specialized international agencies. In this context, NHRC continued that it was continuing to provide these organizations with all the required information and evidence to prove the violations committed by the Saudi authorities.

Ministry to issue daily bulletin for fish prices

The Ministry of Commerce and Industry (MoCI) has announced that it will issue a daily bulletin for fish prices starting today, September 7, in order to support the local economy and raise public awareness of the market.

The MoCI has provided a list of tips and guidelines for consumers to follow when purchasing fish. It has also provided instructions for local fishermen to follow, such as ensuring that their catch is handled properly.

The ministry aims to help consumers by providing accurate information on fish prices, which can help them make informed decisions when purchasing fish.

The daily bulletin will include information on the prices of different fish species, as well as any relevant market trends. This will help consumers understand the current market conditions and make better purchasing decisions.

The Ministry of Commerce and Industry (MoCI) is responsible for ensuring the quality and safety of goods and services in Qatar. It also works to promote competition and protect consumers' rights.

Severely hurt athlete lauds HMC teams after full recovery

A Qatari triathlete athlete who sustained severe injuries as a result of a traffic accident has made a full recovery and praised Hamad Medical Corporation’s (HMC) Qatar Rehabilitation Institute (QRI) for the care provided to him, saying it helped him achieve a major milestone in his treatment journey.

Muath al-Qasimi remains in hospital for a month before being transferred to QGR for his further rehabilitation programme.

A member of the QTRI Triathlon team, al-Qasimi was struck by a car while riding his bicycle. He was brought to Hamad General Hospital, where surgery was carried out.

The patient’s condition improved, and the rehabilitation programme began.

Al-Qasimi said: “My therapists recommended I undergo surgery at Hamad General Hospital, which I was transferred to. This was a major milestone in my treatment journey. The first two weeks were very difficult, I could not walk or stand. My therapists supported me throughout this period.

I also went through physical therapy at Hamad General Hospital, which focused on improving mobility and function.

As his condition improved, I was able to start simple tasks and activities, such as eating, bathing and getting dressed.

Today, al-Qasimi is fully recovered and has resumed training for an Ironman triathlon, which he plans to complete in 2020.

“His positive attitude and his age helped create a game changer in my professional life. I am grateful for the wonderful opportunities, which focused on helping me progress on my path to full recovery, as possible,” he said.

Al-Qasimi’s condition had improved by around 70%.

He said within four weeks of recovering from the accident, he had already made a full recovery and was able to complete his rehabilitation in six months.

“I am grateful for the wonderful opportunities provided by QNRF, which has enabled me to pursue my dreams. I will continue to work hard to achieve my hopes and dreams. Thank you for your support,” he added.

Al-Qasimi is grateful to the HMC and the QTRI for their support and has been able to regain his confidence and health.

CO-OPERATION

Terrorists, the UN said, have been involved in at least four attacks since the UN Security Council endorsed a resolution in 2011 to target those supporting al-Qaeda and its affiliates. The US state department said four attacks were carried out in late 2012, including one in the capital Khartoum and another in the town of El Obeid in Kassala state.

The UN said in its report on Monday that it was working with the Sudanese government to investigate the attacks and support the country in its efforts to combat terrorism. The US state department has urged Sudan to continue to implement the UN Security Council resolutions on counterterrorism.

The UN said it was also helping Sudan to develop its national counterterrorism strategy and to strengthen its institutional capacity to address the threat of terrorism.

The report also noted that Sudan has made progress in implementing the UN Security Council resolutions on counterterrorism, including by adopting laws and regulations that criminalise terrorism and by establishing a national counterterrorism strategy.

The report also highlighted the work that the Sudanese government has done to improve its efforts to prevent and combat terrorism, including by increasing its efforts to prevent and monitor financial transactions associated with terrorist entities and by working with international partners to share information and expertise.
Zimbabwe plans Mugabe’s funeral, burial next weekend

By Marthe Bosu andon

Zimbabwe will hold a state funeral for former President Robert Mugabe at the National Sports Stadium in Harare on September 14, a government minister said on Friday. It will be the largest gathering of dignitaries that the city has ever witnessed, according to another government official. The burial ceremony will take place at the Harare National Heroes’ Acre, a national memorial and war cemetery.

The national mourning period will last from September 11-17, and the public will be allowed to pay their last respects to Mugabe at the stadium on September 14.

Mugabe, who was in power for 37 years, died on September 6 in Singapore at the age of 95. His death sparked a wave of mourning and a rush of tributes from around the world.

Innni attended Pope’s Madagascar mass

A estimated inni paid 50,000 people to attend the Pope’s mass in Antananarivo yesterday. This was a major event for Madagascar, a predominantly Catholic country.

The Pope’s visit to Madagascar came at a time of political turbulence in the country. Madagascar has been facing a growing crisis of poverty, unemployment, and corruption. The Pope’s message of peace and hope was seen as a positive reminder of the importance of religious values in a time of uncertainty.

The Pope’s visit also highlighted the need for greater international support for Madagascar’s economy. The country’s GDP per capita is among the lowest in the world, and the country is heavily dependent on aid from international donors.

Iinni offers Nigeria slum kids new winning moves

On Sunday, the Nigerian Professional Football League (NPFL) announced that Innii, a sponsor of the NPFL, had launched a new program aimed at helping underprivileged children in Lagos.

The program, called “Innii’s Academy,” will provide free football training and education to children from slum areas in Lagos. The program will also offer financial assistance to families in need.

Can DR Congo keep its lead in primary education?

By Morten Bonnejean and Amos Manga

While young boys began a new primary school year in DR Congo on Monday, many worry about whether the country’s education system can overcome its political instability and corruption.

“The sums paid by parents include not only the costs of attendance but also the fees charged for uniforms, transport, and other expenses,” one headmaster said, adding that with free school meals, the burden on parents would be significantly reduced.

The goal of the club is to promote chess among disadvantaged children and young people. It was founded in 2011 and now has several branches across the country.

The attention that the project has received is a testament to the potential of chess as a tool for social change. It is hoped that the club will continue to grow and bring hope and opportunity to more children in the future.
Bahrainians race to leave Dorain-ravaged islands

By Carl Jollie, AFP

Bahraini government spokesmen said Saturday that the government was working to evacuate those living on Archipelago islands in the southeastern Gulf that were hit this week by Hurricane Dorian, adding that "the situation is delicate and the authorities are doing everything possible to save those trapped on the islands." The islands, which are 1,300 kilometers from Manama, are home to thousands of people, including many Bahraini expatriates and migrant workers.

As climate debate heats up, Canada minister gets security detail

AFP

Canada's Environment Minister Catherine McKenna has been assigned a security detail, she said Saturday, claiming it makes it harder to do her job and requires security — although she noted that the security is not unusual in Ottawa and Canada has experienced "chilling confrontations," has been subjected to hateful insults, and "the vocal sexism and hateful comments that are directed to people are chilling." McKenna said the discourse has reached such a dizzying low in Canada that a senior bureaucrat had warned lawmakers and ministers on the devastated islands. McKenna was responsible for charting Canada's CO2 emissions, which are running neck-and-neck with the two main political parties,佩洛西 and Sanders, at 19% and Warren, who has been the most vocal about the carbon tax, at 7%. McKenna was also warned that the carbon tax would disrupt the country during the political campaign. The US Coast Guard, Britain's Royal Navy and private organizations have been helping to evacuate island residents in Bahamas, hampered by damaged ports and airplane runways.

Biden leads opinion polls as Democratic Party front-runner

AFP

Former vice president Joe Biden continues to hold a lead among Democratic presidential aspirants, a new poll showed Wednesday. The latest 1142-person poll, conducted by The Marist Poll, shows Biden with 34% of the vote, followed by Senator Elizabeth Warren (20%), Senator Bernie Sanders (16%), and former Mayor Pete Buttigieg (13%). President Donald Trump's approval rating is at 46%, with 53% of Americans polled saying they disapprove of his job performance.

Biden站起来，告诫年轻选民不要对民主党失去信心

Biden told a group of young voters Saturday that Democratic candidates can no longer afford to be complacent, but must continue to work hard to win back the support of voters who have been lost in recent years. "We must not fall into the trap of complacency," he said. "We must continue to fight for the issues that matter to our communities and to our country." Biden also called for unity among Democrats to win the general election in November.

Rail industry reaches key political junction

The rail industry is destined to conflict with the right-wing politics of the country, a key political junction that could decide that could end in a hugely significant investment to improve services and cut costs before the general election. Full state control of the industry is said to be the result of the opposition Labour party.

The time is now for a new round of talks between the industry and the government to resolve the rail crisis, experts have said. The issue of rail privatisation has become a key point of contention between the industry and the government, with both sides accusing each other of failure.

The industry has been hit by staff shortages, delays, and cancellations in recent months, which has led to a loss of confidence among passengers. The government has been criticized for not doing enough to fix the problems and for not investing enough in the rail network.

A new report by the Royal Economic Society has called for a comprehensive review of the rail industry, including the need for more investment in infrastructure and the introduction of a more rigorous performance regime for operators. The report also calls for a greater role for the government in regulating the industry and ensuring that passengers are treated fairly.

The industry has been in talks with the government for several months to try to resolve the crisis, but so far no agreement has been reached. The government has said that it is committed to improving the rail network, but the industry has accused it of not doing enough.

A meeting is scheduled to take place between the industry and the government later this week to discuss the situation. It is expected that the talks will be intense and it remains to be seen whether a solution can be found.

Chuka Umunna switches poll seat

Chuka Umunna is to vacate his existing south west London seat of Battersea and contest the Cities of West London and Westminster combined, as the party leaders attempt to bring the two seats together.

The change was made to ensure that both seats are covered by the same candidate, as the party risks alienating voters by running separate candidates. The party has stated that the decision was made to maximize the chances of winning both seats.

The move comes as the party faces a difficult period, with both seats currently held by the Conservatives. The party has struggled to make progress in south west London, and the change of heart was seen as a bid to boost its prospects.

The change will mean that Umunna will campaign in both seats, which are both in the same parliamentary constituency. The party has stated that it will be a challenge, but it believes that it is necessary to ensure that both seats are covered by a single candidate.

The move has been met with mixed reactions, with some calling it a good move, while others have expressed concerns about the party’s ability to manage two seats.

Merkel opens Bauhaus museum

Germany opened a new Bauhaus museum in Dessau on Sunday. The project is one of several attempts by German leaders to reassert their nation’s role in the world, including in the United States, Russia and Israel. The museum is located in a former factory building, which was partially destroyed during World War II and then reconstructed in the 1950s. The museum features a building designed by architect Walter Gropius, who was a co-founder of the Bauhaus school.

El Salvador launches anti-corruption commission

Reuters

Salvadoran President Nayib Bukele has created a new independent commission to investigate corruption, becoming the latest Latin American politician to launch such a body after a wave of corruption scandals involving state officials. Bukele, who took office in January, announced the measure in a televised address, saying it would help to root out graft and money laundering.

The commission, known as CICIES, will be led by lawyer Luis Porto, who previously served as a judge, and will have a mandate to investigate cases of corruption and money laundering. Bukele said the commission would work closely with international organizations and will be granted broad powers to investigate cases.

Venezuela's gold reserves have fallen by $1bn in the first half of 2019, according to a report by the International Monetary Fund (IMF). The reserves fell from about 102.40 tonnes in January to about 99.53 tonnes in June, according to the IMF.

The fall in gold reserves comes as US financial sanctions have come into effect, putting pressure on the country's finances. The reserves are mainly held in the Bank of England and are used to pay international transactions.

The process of repatriating gold to Mexico began exporting gold from reserves, leaving the bank to recover money lost to US authorities. The move is among the poorest in the world, according to bank officials.

The Gold Reserve Board of Directors, which manages Venezuela's gold reserves, announced the decision on Wednesday. It said it was made to ensure the country's financial stability and to prevent further declines in the reserves.

The decision to export gold comes amid concerns about the country's economic situation, which has been worsening due to sanctions imposed by the US and other factors.

El Salvadoran President Nayib Bukele has created a new independent commission to investigate corruption, becoming the latest Latin American politician to launch such a body after a wave of corruption scandals involving state officials. Bukele, who took office in January, announced the measure in a televised address, saying it would help to root out graft and money laundering.

The commission, known as CICIES, will be led by lawyer Luis Porto, who previously served as a judge, and will have a mandate to investigate cases of corruption and money laundering. Bukele said the commission would work closely with international organizations and will be granted broad powers to investigate cases.

Parents who urge their children to "eat your veggies" have received a big morale boost in the form of a scientific paper titled "Blindness caused by a junk food diet," published last week in the Annals of Internal Medicine. The study, led by Faisal Abuhammad of the Gulf Times University, examined the effects of a diet high in processed foods on vision.

"We have a lot of data suggesting that our diets influence cardiovascular health, cancer, dementia, mortality, but not vision," said Dr. Atan, a neurologist involved in the study. "This case illustrates how severe cases of disordered eating can lead to irreversible vision loss."

The study followed a teen in the UK who has been eating nothing but French fries, potato chips, and sometimes slices of white bread, and not really any fruit or vegetables. The teen, who was 14, first noticed his vision loss two years later. His vision was 20/200, which is considered legally blind in the US, and he was found to have vitamin deficiencies and malnutrition damage.

The teen's case is not unique. In fact, a recent case study published in the Journal of Pediatrics found that a teen in the US who ate nothing but fried chicken and French fries every day for a year also developed severe vision loss. His vision was also 20/200, and he was found to have vitamin deficiencies and malnutrition damage.

"This is a growing problem," said Dr. Atan. "We need to educate the public about the dangers of a diet high in processed foods and lack of vegetables."

The study also highlights the importance of diet on vision health. "Nutritional optic neuropathy occurs because of damage to the optic nerve (the nerve that transmits vision)," said Dr. Atan. "A diet high in processed foods and low in vegetables and fruits can cause this damage."
