Staycation packages boost hotel industry

By Peter Alagos

Qatar’s hospitality sector has seen a surge in staycation packages and hotel reservations across the emirate, with tourists choosing to stay home rather than travel abroad.

Qatar has become a popular destination for tourists looking for a staycation, and this trend has been driven by the COVID-19 pandemic.

By booking a staycation package, guests can avoid the uncertainties and risks associated with travel, while still enjoying the comfort and amenities of a hotel room.

This trend has also been fueled by the success of Qatar’s tourism and hospitality industry, which has been growing steadily over the past few years.

With the help of staycation packages, hotels are able to attract more guests and generate revenue during a time when travel is limited.

The success of the staycation package trend is a testament to the adaptability and resilience of Qatar’s tourism and hospitality industry.

UN launches talks among Libya's rival parties

The UN launched talks among Libya's rival parties on Saturday ahead of a closure date next week that is aimed at launching a new round of peace talks. The talks are being led by UN envoy Martin Kobler and will involve delegates from the NoD and UN-backed government of national accord (GNA) led by Fayez al-Sarraj, who is seeking to unify the country's rival administrations. The talks are expected to focus on key issues such as the withdrawal of foreign troops, the formation of a government of national unity, and the drafting of a constitution.
At least three people have died and dozens are missing following a large gathering to protest against the newly elected president of Ivory Coast, President Alassane Ouattara, who has been in power for 10 years and has been subject to widespread international criticism. The protest was in response to Ouattara's decision to seek a third term in office, which has been met with widespread opposition across the country. The protests have resulted in clashes between the security forces and protesters, with at least three people confirmed dead and many more injured. The situation remains tense, with protests continuing in various parts of the country.

The country has been facing a growing crisis in recent months, with economic difficulties and political tensions escalating. The protests are taking place in a context of growing social and economic inequality, as well as concerns about the government's handling of the COVID-19 pandemic. The government has been criticized for its slow response to the pandemic, with a surge in cases and deaths in recent months.

The protests are also taking place against the backdrop of the upcoming presidential election, which is scheduled for October 31. The election is expected to be a key moment in determining the country's future, with Ouattara's candidacy already confirmed and several opposition candidates set to run.

The situation remains tense, with a high risk of further violence and instability in the coming days. The international community is closely following the developments, with ongoing calls for dialogue and peaceful resolution to the crisis.

BRITAIN

The army is being sent in to help with mass Covid-19 testing of schoolchildren, as the UK’s chief medical officer said parents would be asked to self-isolate if their children tested positive.

The government announced plans to test the entire school population in England each week from January, with the aim of reducing the spread of the virus and preventing mass outbreaks. The new strategy follows a months-long bout of wrangling over how to carry out mass testing in schools as is a smooth as possible.

The plan, announced by the health secretary, Simon Stevens, on Tuesday, follows months of discussion and months of discussions about the feasibility of the plan. The government has faced criticism over its failure to deliver mass testing in schools as a result of supplier delays and logistical problems. If the Masters is a tradition unlike any other, a unique piece of American sport, then 2020 has been an eerie year. Usually, the sun rises on a sea of fans before the Masters even begins, while the gallery roars that reverberate across the entire course. This year, those familiar scenes will be missing in the absence of fans. Instead, we will see a tournament with no spectators for the first time, an eerie silence expected with just a faint breeze whispering through the trees in place of the gallery roars that customarily reverberate across the entire course.

Mostly, it’s a tournament he has won five times! Joe Biden, is likely to be as obstructionist as his administration was chaotic. Biden should draw two lessons from a previous incumbent US president who didn’t handle defeat well. The next US president will put the country on the road to ruin. There are two lessons here. The president-victor and his opposition need to take extra precautions for their personal safety, given the inflated expectation that he will be targeted by the opposition’s efforts to facilitate his removal.

Similarly, we can expect Biden to support extremist politicians such as Abott’s Libyan Long, Turkey, unification, and economic support. Hope was formed for the building team. The question is how far will he go to impede President-elect Joe Biden’s efforts to advance legislation and confirm nominees to administrative positions, likely to be the Senate majority leader?”

Al-Sabah collection at NMoQ offers new insights into roots of Islamic art

The National Museum of Qatar (NMoQ) is currently running the landmark exhibition on the Antiquities of the Ancient East. Antiquities from The al-Sabah Collection, which is part of the temporary exhibition gallery. Works from the extraordinary holdings assembled in Kuwait by Sheikh Nasser Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah and Sheikha Hessa Sabah Al-Salem Al-Sabah, the objects in the exhibition provide a unique overview of the artistic and material culture of the ancient world, while also revealing new insights into the roots of Islamic art.

NMoQ’s landmark exhibition, Splendours of the Ancient East: Antiquities from The al-Sabah Collection, showcases 170 objects drawn from the extraordinary holdings assembled in Kuwait by Sheikh Nasser Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah and Sheikha Hessa Sabah Al-Salem Al-Sabah.

Sheikh Nasser Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah and Sheikha Hessa Sabah Al-Salem Al-Sabah for sharing their wonderful treasures with our community. The objects selected for Splendours of the Ancient East: Antiquities from The al-Sabah Collection range in date from the third millennium BCE to the fifth century CE. They include jewelry and adornments (rings, earrings, bracelets, necklaces, pendants, brooches, buckles and buttons); household furnishings (beads, bowls, jars, ewers, cups, ibis, bottles, vases and vessels); metalwork, glassware and ceramics; and ritual objects: decorative elements, carved pomegranate and seals.

“My husband Sheikh Sabah and I take great joy in sharing this exhibition with the people of Qatar and the region,” said Sheikha Hussa, chairperson of Qatar Museums, and the director of the Dar Al-Athar Al-Islamiyyah and co-owner of The al-Sabah Collection.

“Splendours of the Ancient East offers a glimpse of the art, history and culture of the ancient world, while also revealing new insights into the roots of Islamic art.”

Sheikha Al Mayassa bint Hamad bin Khalifa Al-Thani, chairperson of Qatar Museums, said: “We thank Sheikh Nasser and Sheikha Hessa for sharing their wonderful treasures with our community. Successful projects are not just about art and culture; they are about sharing the values we hold with our community. Splendours of the Ancient East is one such project and it is my great honour to celebrate the landmark collection at NMoQ as we mark the passing of His Highness Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah. May Allah Almighty have mercy upon him.”

Initiative to fence 50 wild fields launched

An initiative to fence 50 wild fields (Rawdah) across the country has been launched by the Ministry of Municipality and Environment’s Protection and Wildlife Department in co-operation with the Public Works Authority (Ashghal) and the Ministry of Municipality and Environment’s Protection and Wildlife Department (Al Reem Protectorate).

The aim is to protect the greeneries in particular during the rainy season and springtime when people go to the open desert more frequently.

Most fields will be fenced off with pipes which allow pedestrians while preventing vehicle entry.

The areas to be protected include plant cover, especially greenery in particular during the rainy season and springtime when people go to the open desert more frequently. However, endangered fields, whose planting operations are carried out, will be fenced off with nets to bar entry.
