The World Innovation Summit for Health (WISH) has launched Qatar’s first podcast, QF’s Omnia Seheya, to coincide with World Mental Health Day as well as the WISH 2020 conference.

QF, a member of the Qatar Foundation, will be launching a series of podcasts to coincide with the 7th World Innovation Summit for Health (WISH) 2020 to generate awareness and promote discussions around various health topics.

The first podcast, an engaging series of six episodes, will be released on Android and Apple devices.

WISH 2020, which will be held from October 10 to 13, 2020 in Doha, Qatar, will bring together international experts, focusing on global best practices and offering practical solutions on various topics, including precision medicine, societal innovation, and digital health.

The first episode, ‘Innovation Hub’ exhibition, is set to be released on October 12, 2020.

According to Dr Mahmoud Al Jalahma, QF’s Director of Innovation and Scale-Up, the series of podcasts is important as it will promote healthy dialogue and stimulate real-world action.

As part of WISH 2020, the series of podcasts will be available to everyone, for free at https://2020.wish.org.

The podcasts aim to spread awareness on maintaining mental well-being.
Qatar, Tunisia enjoy close ties, common goals

Qatar and Tunisia have close historical, cultural and diplomatic relations in many fields. Qatar stood by the Tunisian people and their leadership since the beginning until it achieved its goals. "Qatar, which is the second country to visit the Tunisian capital after France, was the second country to visit Tunisia since 1956," President Saadallah told the press during his visit to Tunisia.

The visit also reflects the importance of the role that Qatar and its wise leadership play in Arab and international relations at all levels, especially in the face of the global and regional challenges.

It is of particular importance that Qatar has successfully completed most of the objectives that it set out to achieve and the doors of communication will open to it and its Arab friends.

The visit shows that addressing the current pandemic, which is a current and acute reality of the world, presents an opportunity to strengthen the economic, social and humanitarian relations between the two countries and the national and humanitarian role towards friends on all levels and everywhere.

It is certain that the meeting is a good opportunity to review what the two countries have achieved and to assess the opportunities for the coming period. Qatar and its leadership seek to maintain the relations between the two countries, as they are of national importance.

Qatar attracts thousands of Tunisians through job opportunities in social, cultural and sports sectors

Qatar and Tunisia have deep economic, cultural and social relations. The number of the Tunisian community in Doha, because Qatar is considered one of the most important investors in Tunisia, is at around 100,000, in terms of the volume of foreign direct investment.

In November 2019, it was announced that a Qatar visa centre would be established in Tunisia, the first of its kind in the Arab world and Africa.

Qatar ranks first in the Arab world and second internationally in terms of the number of agreements and international cooperation projects signed between the two countries, with investments and services in many fields, oil refining, real estate investment, trade, tourism, education, medical aid, training and development opportunities, which cover a wide range of technical and vocational training and curricula in various fields.

The number of agreements and international cooperation projects signed between the two countries exceeds more than 600, including 10 signed in 2019, covering the political, diplomatic, economic, industrial, commercial, banking, health, agricultural, technical, media, cultural, tourism, health, education, culture, transport, communication, information technology and vocational training fields, oil rail, real estate investment and many more.

The number of the Tunisian community in Doha, because Qatar is considered one of the most important investors in Tunisia, is at around 100,000, in terms of the volume of foreign direct investment.

The meeting will discuss the progress made and the economic, social, trade and other relations between the two countries and the ways to further develop them.

The meeting reviewed the challenges posed by the Covid-19 pandemic on the world and on the standardisation activity in particular, and how the pandemic demonstrated the central role of international standardisation in tackling the global crisis and in ensuring the continuity of economic and production activities.

The meeting also approved the agenda and their technical consultation and the financial contributions of both countries to the standardisation programme in the Arab region and agreed to hold a consultation meeting to exchange technical reports on technical work and activities on international level and in the technical committees, and to continue the work by the joint teams.

Last May, Tunisia received medical aid from Qatar to combat the coronavirus pandemic, including a field hospital equipped with 100 beds, and an efficient medical team of experienced doctors and nurses.

The economic relations between the two countries have witnessed a great boom in recent years, as trade exchanges between the two countries and Tunisian agricultural exports to Qatar the market have been doubled, and the Qatari-Given programme has furthered these relations, according to the foreign minister.

The Qatar-Friendship Fund (QFF), the Qatar Fund for Development and Silatech have doubled, and the Qatari private sector has invested heavily in Tunisian agriculture and Tunisian agricultural exports to the Qatari market.

Qatar is a key player in the energy sector, and the Qatari minister of energy and the Qatari fund have shown their commitment to the Tunisian government, to support the development of the Tunisian energy sector.}

Qatar takes part in IEC meeting

Qatar participated in the 65th International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC) general meeting, which was held in Stavanger, Norway, under the framework of the international standardisation programme of the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC).

Qatar represented the IEC member country of the Arab Organisation for Standardisation and Metrology (ANS-M) at the 65th General Assembly of the IEC General Organisation for Standards and Metrology (ANS-M) at a meeting of the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC).

The meeting reviewed the status of IEC technical committees and their projects, as well as the international standardisation programme under the framework of the World Trade Organization (WTO) and the International Organization for Standardization (ISO). The meeting also discussed the contributions of the member countries to the IEC technical committees and the implementation of international standards.

The meeting also approved the agenda and the technical consultation and the financial contributions of both countries to the standardisation programme in the Arab region and agreed to hold a consultation meeting to exchange technical reports on technical work and activities on technical level and in the technical committees, and to continue the work by the joint teams.
Construction work for Mazaya Marina Plaza project begins

The Municipality Development Department at Al Duhail Municipality carried out an inspection campaign on unauthorized street vendors in the workers’ accommodation area Al Quran Street Al Umm Slal, on Friday evening. The campaign was carried out in co-operation with the Ministry of Interior (Al-Fazaa and the Criminal Investigation Department) along with the Ministry of Commerce and Industry and the General Control Department at the Ministry of Commerce and Industry. According to an official, necessary legal measures were taken against the violators and a fine was imposed on the vendors when the vendors were removed from the area, the MME said in a statement.

Qatar gets praise for commitment on hazardous waste

The Secretariat of the Basel Convention, a United Nations body, has congratulated Qatar on its 25th anniversary this year as an active international body for work on the prevention and control of hazardous waste. Qatar’s Ministry of Municipality and Environment said Qatar is a member of the Basel Convention and conferences related to it. It is one of the 192 countries that adopted the Basel Convention in 1989, and is in the national point of contact for the Secretariat’s Basel Convention. The convention was adopted by the United Nations on March 22, 1989, and entered into force on May 6, 1992. It is an international multilateral environmental agreement (MEA) based in Geneva, Switzerland. It was prepared and approved by the representatives of developed and developing countries to ensure the transfer of hazardous wastes from developed countries to the least developed countries.

This agreement is part of the United Nations Environment Programme’s efforts to prevent, reduce, and control the release of chemicals, waste, and similar materials that are hazardous to human health and the environment. It is based on the principle of shared responsibility and, in particular, on the need for developed countries to assist developing countries in meeting their environmentally sound management of hazardous wastes and other toxic materials. It requires the transfer of environmentally sound methods and technologies from developed countries to assist developing countries in managing hazardous wastes.

MoPH reports 137,577 Covid recoveries

The Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) in Qatar reports today 235 new confirmed cases of Covid-19, bringing the total number of cases in the country to 137,577. The new cases are in isolation and are under medical supervision.

The ministry said measures to tackle Covid-19 in Qatar have assisted in flattening the curve and reducing the number of daily new cases. The number of daily new cases is continuously declining to achieve zero.

The ministry said it has been working with the public healthcare sector, Qatar's medical population, providing compassionate, expanding hospital capacity, protecting the elderly and those with chronic diseases. Through these efforts, Qatar has been able to control the virus, the ministry said.

Qatar: 7.5 million doses delivered

Qatar, a World Health Organization (WHO) member state, has signed an agreement with the UN World Health Organization (WHO) in the form of a federal memorandum of understanding (MoU) on health. The agreement is expected to facilitate health care cooperation between Qatar and the WHO in various fields.

The agreement, which was signed on the sidelines of Secretary General of the Ministry of Public Health and Health Affairs H.E. Dr. Yousef Al Othman’s visit to the WHO headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, covers areas such as health workforce development, health systems strengthening, health emergency preparedness and response, and health-related research and development.

The agreement aims to enhance Qatar’s capacity in responding to health challenges and to support the implementation of the Global Health Security Agenda (GHSA) and the International Health Regulations (IHR). It also seeks to strengthen the collaboration between Qatar and the WHO in the field of health, particularly in the areas of public health, disease prevention, and response to health emergencies.

The agreement will promote the exchange of information and best practices between Qatar and the WHO, contributing to the development of a robust national health system and promoting international cooperation in health.

A high number of positive cases in the community

Qatar has one of the lowest Covid-19 death rates in the world. This is a result of very high vaccination rates in the country and the implementation of strict public health measures. Qatar also has a well-developed health care system, including a strong primary care network that allows for early detection and treatment of cases.

The number of new confirmed cases has been declining steadily since the peak of the pandemic in February 2020. The government has continued to take measures to prevent the spread of the virus, including the mandatory use of masks in public places, social distancing, and limiting large gatherings.

Qatar’s successful approach to contain Covid-19 has earned the country international recognition and praise. The government has been praised for its proactive and extensive testing, contact tracing, and the implementation of public health measures.

The government has also been praised for its transparent communication and the provision of accurate and reliable information to the public, which has helped in building trust and confidence in the health system.

The government has been proactive in ensuring that the health system is well-equipped to handle any potential increase in cases, including the provision of additional hospital beds and medical equipment.

The government has also been praised for its efforts to support the global response to Covid-19, including the donation of medical equipment and the sharing of best practices.

Construction work for Mazaya Marina Plaza project begins

Mazaya Real Estate Development has announced the start of construction work on its new project – Mazaya Marina, located on the Corniche Road, in the area of Rawdat Al Khail, north of the district of Al Wakra, south of Doha in the city, next to the Katar Park and the Corniche, in addition to the start of construction work in the first phase of the project, which is expected to be completed in July 2022 and consists of a four-storey building. The second phase of the project will comprise a large area of land and open terraces on the second and third floors in the waterfront. The latest networking and heating systems have also been adopted in the construction of the project. The project will also comprise shops facing open spaces, roads and corridors connected to the Marina Walk, which can be used as commercial areas. The commercial areas can contain information centers for visitors as well as contemporary cinemas, in addition to one-minute shops and screens. The area of the commercial space is approximately 33,000sq m.

The first phase of the project, which will be completed in June 2023, will consist of four residential buildings adjacent to the commercial area. It will consist of 320 furnished apartments of different sizes, part of which will be managed as distinguished services.

This stage will also include the establishment of new projects and the acquisition of real estate properties, as well as maintaining the level of outdoor works, and men and women. The area of the commercial space is approximately 33,000sq m.

Flame Al-Kowait, Mazaya Real Estate Development managing director, said that the project will be the company’s second project in the Marina Walk area, in addition to the first project named Flame Al-Kowait, which is under construction. He added that the company worked diligently this year to develop a business plan that combines the development of new projects and the acquisition of real estate properties. Flame Al-Kowait also said that the Mazaya Marina project is the company’s first real estate development project for this year. There were two major acquisitions in this area.

Mazaya Real Estate Development has been carrying out its business in the field of real estate development and engineering and consultancy in the field of architectural and engineering design work for the past 10 years. The company also carries out work in the fields of krijing, Tendering and Contracting. The company’s second project in the Marina Walk area is estimated at a total area of 33,000sq m.

In implementation of the grant of His Highness the Amir, Qatari Charity (QC) and the Qatar Fund for Development (QFFD) continue coordination to carry on implementing the projects of the $50mn grant by His Highness Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani the Amir of Qatar for Rohingya refugees in Malaysia.

The grant projects cover three main areas: health, education and economic empowerment.

The work started in the health sector in October 2018, as agreements have been signed with the Malaysian National Welfare Foundation, and other under the women, family, and community development ministry, and the society for research and supervision of the medical field have been selected to carry out several projects within the medical area. The budget allocated for the health program is estimated at 14.7 million dollars over three years.

The health activities include six major programs, which are setting up five comprehensive primary health centers, opening four mobile clinics to cover the same peripheral areas inhabited by refugees, adopting the health awareness and education program for Rohingya refugees, providing necessary vaccinations for children, establishing medical shelters to receive patients who need special follow-up, and Patient Referral Program to provide appropriate medical care.

The Qatari initiatives works on the improvement of the refugee situation in Malaysia, especially as the official figures of United Nations confirm the presence of more than 178,000 refugees and asylum-seekers registered with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in Malaysia.

Children Vaccination

Support for the vaccination program for refugee children has been approved in Malaysia to meet the urgent need of children for vaccination services. The program aims to provide basic vaccination doses to 24,000 children, over three years, according to the vaccination system of Malaysia.

Patient Referral

The initiative also contributes to providing secondary health care services to refugees through the referral program for critical cases and complicated deliveries. This program targets 10,000 patients over 3 years, in cooperation and coordination with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and hospitals certified by the Malaysian Ministry of Health.

Health Shelters

The initiative adopts the health care shelter program, due to the poor financial situation of refugees in Malaysia, which creates great difficulty for the refugees to follow up their treatment, especially patients who need to see a doctor more than once, who are waiting for the results of medical examinations, or who need special care. The initiative, therefore, works to establish, furnish, equip, and operate five health shelters for a period of three years, in addition to providing housing, nutrition, and case follow-up services.

Health Promotion

Through the Refugee Health Promotion Program in Malaysia, the initiative works, in cooperation with health partners, to implement the health promotion project to ease the main barriers to refugees’ access to health care, which are the lack of literacy, lack of awareness of individual rights to health care, and linguistic and cultural differences. This is carried out through training health workers, who are chosen from among the refugees themselves to educate the refugees about health of care, health rights, methods of accessing health care, appropriate hygiene, and provide guidance on mental health and mental health and psychosocial support services.

Achievements:

The first health center was inaugurated in November 2019, and it started working in January 2020 after obtaining the necessary permits. Despite the challenging situations the world is going through, due to the spread of the coronavirus pandemic, the work continues, as the remaining four clinics have been set up, and the restoration, furnishing and furnishing works have been completed, with the exception of one center, which has recently received a permit. The number of operating clinics will be five by the end of the current.

Some 11,687 refugees benefited from primary care services for chronic diseases, including nutrition, personal hygiene, and risk factors for chronic diseases, in addition to dispensing basic drugs, especially medications for children and women, and providing care for chronic diseases.

the first hybrid edition of the ajyal film festival, presented by the doha film institute (dfi) and national tourism council (qntc), was launched on november 15 with a strong call to action to join hands with the community and global partners in partnership with lead sponsors qatari diar and strategic partners ooredoo and culture village, to continue to deliver a festival that is more inclusive, engaging and accessible to all.

"we are deeply grateful for our community’s successful collaborations and innovative programmes, especially in these times of adversity, as they continue to build the creative ecosystem they are so rightly proud of," said maysaa almumin, who takes to the streets collecting trash to help those in need.

"ajyal film festival is a source of great pride for us as an academy of qatar," almumin added.

"the event will culminate in the ajyal awards, which will be determined by the ‘live’ audience, an international-acclaimed programme open to youth aged 15 to 25."
UN former envoy very optimistic for peace in Libya

The UN’s former envoy to Libya, Ghassan Salame, said yesterday that “the people of Libya are more ready than ever for a political solution and the road to a future where they can live in safety and security,” after the UN announced that it had accepted a new two-week ceasefire which began on Saturday. The ceasefire was agreed to in Berlin in February and was designed to halt the violence that has plagued the country since 2011.

Salame said that the ceasefire was a “positive step” towards ending the conflict in Libya and that it was a “welcome development” for the country. He added that the ceasefire was a “positive development” for the country and that it was a “welcome development” for the country. The ceasefire was signed by the government of national accord, which was established in 2020, and the Tobruk-based opposition. The government of national accord is backed by the UN, which has said that it is the only legitimate government in Libya.

The ceasefire was brokered by the US, which has said that it is committed to supporting the government of national accord and its efforts to establish a stable government in Libya.

However, the ceasefire has been met with scepticism by some Libyan politicians and civil society groups, who say that it is not enough to bring peace to the country.

In a statement yesterday, the government of national accord said that it was “happy to see the ceasefire signed and that it is committed to implementing it.”

The government of national accord has said that it will continue to work with the UN and other international partners to bring peace to Libya.

The ceasefire was signed in the presence of the UN special envoy to Libya, Ghassan Salame, who has said that he is “optimistic” that the ceasefire will succeed.

Salame said that the ceasefire was “a small step towards ending the crisis in Libya” and that it was “a positive development.”

However, the government of national accord has said that it will not be committed to the ceasefire unless it is verified and monitored by the UN and other international partners.

Thousands of people have fled their homes in Vietnam yesterday as Typhoon Vamco barrelled towards central regions, already pummelled by weeks of incessant storms.

Flights have been cancelled and roads blocked as maximum winds of 100kph are expected by tonight. Airports have been shut, beaches closed and a fishing fleet put in place, as the country braves for winds of up to 220kph.

The second-most populous state’s deputy health official, Allen Chang, told a news conference that the rate of new cases was “about as good as it can get”.

Neighbouring New South Wales, the most populous state, has also closed its borders, and locked down local travel, while Queensland has had its own community infections for two months. High-risk areas saw a handful of new cases in man-made quarantine settings.

“Typhoon Vamco has already caused devastation in the Philippines,” said the Lanzhou Municipal Health Commission, which said the virus had been determined, the statement added.

A Tropical Storm Iota barrels toward Central America

The National Hurricane Center (NHC) in Miami said Tropical Storm Iota was about 460 miles (740 km) southeast of the Bocas del Toro province in Panama and was moving north-northwest at 10 mph (16 kph). The center said Iota’s eyewall would impact the same area that was struck by Hurricane Eta last month, bringing a second round of heavy rains to a region already grappling with flood damage.

Coronavirus death toll exceeds 1.3mn globally

By Ioanna Kourbela, AFP

The world passed another grim milestone yesterday as the number of deaths from COVID-19 exceeded 1.3 million, according to a tally maintained by Johns Hopkins University.

The pandemic has claimed more lives than the annual death toll from malaria, the world’s leading cause of preventable deaths.

The milestone came on the day that the global death toll from COVID-19 surpassed 2 million, with the World Health Organization warning that the world was still far from safe from the virus.

"It’s a milestone that will be remembered in history," said World Health Organization (WHO) Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus in a video message.

"It is a stark reminder of the risk we face as we step into the second year of the COVID-19 pandemic, and the consequences of our choices.

"As we approach 2 million deaths, we are at a critical moment as the global community, in the battle against COVID-19.

"We must not let our guard down and we must intensify our efforts to get all the societies over the finish line."

The World Health Organization said the number of daily deaths from COVID-19 had been increasing in recent weeks, topping 11,000 on Tuesday, the highest level since the pandemic began.

The milestone comes amid growing concerns about the new omicron variant of the virus, which was first identified in South Africa and has spread to dozens of countries around the world.

Health experts are still trying to determine how contagious omicron is and whether it is more virulent than previous variants.

But the omicron variant has caused a flurry of travel bans and restrictions, with countries around the world scrambling to close their borders to contain the spread of the new strain.

The COVID-19 pandemic has claimed more than 1.3 million lives worldwide since it was first detected in China in December 2019.

"This is a tragic milestone, but it is also a reminder of the progress that we have made in recent months through vaccination and other public health measures," said WHO chief Tedros.

"But it is also a reminder of the ongoing risks and the urgent need for continued vigilance."

Economists and policymakers say the pandemic has caused the biggest global economic recession since World War II, which ended in 1945.

The International Monetary Fund estimates that the global economy will shrink by 3% this year due to the pandemic.

"The world has now lost an entire year to the COVID-19 pandemic," said IMF chief Kristalina Georgieva.

"It has been a year of immense human suffering and economic disruption, and the challenges we face are far from over."

On Tuesday, the World Health Organization said the pandemic was far from over and warned that the world needed to remain vigilant.

"The global pandemic is not over, and we must all remain committed to containing the virus and saving lives," said WHO chief Tedros.

"We must continue to act together to strengthen health systems and improve access to vaccines and other essential health services."

The WHO said the pandemic had claimed more than 1.3 million lives worldwide since it was first detected in China in December 2019.

This year it’s nothing – just expressly managed. Our business has been affected. We have hardly sold any flowers outside the Jhandewala temple, one of the oldest in Delhi, since February and Delhi is going through a new spurt with nearly 4,000 new cases a day. Experts have blamed the rise in the number of cases on Delhi’s decision to relax curbs. “There were no reports of Covid cases in Delhi for eight weeks up to Diwali” said a businessman who runs a shop in Vinay Garg’s gold and jewellery store near the central Connaught Place, in Delhi. “We have sold only 30% of our usual stock since the lockdown.”

The world’s focus is firmly on the coronavirus pandemic and how it’s affecting lives and economies worldwide. The death toll from coronavirus surpassed 1.3mn with more than 65mn people currently affected because of the pandemic worldwide. With Covid-19 infections rising around the world, the World Health Organization will send teams of experts to 70 countries to talk to 15mn people into areas where the virus is spreading. The world’s most pressing immediate priority therefore is to speed the development and delivery of vaccines that can control the spread of Covid-19. Recently, US drugmaker Pfizer announced its experimental coronavirus vaccine – made in partnership with Germany’s BioNTech – worked more than 90% effective at preventing Covid-19 in trial participants and could be ready by the end of this year.

The expected vaccine roll-out in the next few weeks, however, poses new challenges for the global community. Reaching the billions of people who need vaccines poses new challenges for the global community. Reaching the billions of people who need vaccines and immunisation generally.

The aviation industry will be particularly important in distribution. That’s why the global body of airlines – IATA – recently urged governments to begin careful planning with industry stakeholders to ensure that the industry’s networks can deliver vaccines for the entire world.

Beyond the urgent responses to Covid-19, the global community needs to fix what went wrong for future pandemics. One such initiative is the Health Emergency Preparedness and Rapid Response Global Fund. The fund is designed to help developing countries prepare for better diseases outbreaks, including when they can’t access the World Bank’s regular funding. Resilient systems will be key not only to distributing vaccines, but also to ensuring that other critical services, especially maternal and child health continues during a pandemic. Early estimates are that the child mortality could rise by 49% with health services curtailed and less access to food.

Policymakers at a virtual roundtable convened by World Bank President David Malpass agreed that the world needs to move to a new model of global governance that focuses much more on health and safety. Policymakers agreed that even if the lives lost in the pandemic are counted, the economic impact of the pandemic will cost the world $16trn.

Participants agreed that national and community-based communication campaigns are needed to defuse growing vaccine hesitancy and educate people about protecting themselves and their families from the virus. Strong partnerships and co-operation, within countries and across regions, are at the heart of effective action to combat the pandemic.

Obviously, the road to a resilient recovery requires massive investments across countries, as well as outstanding commitment and financial support from the international community.

What Muslim voters want from Joe Biden

I n the lead-up to the midterm elections, two years ago, there was a sense of hope that Muslims and other religious minorities would finally have their voices heard in the US political process. Many felt that their voices would matter, or at least be navigated a bit.

The most vocal, of course, was the Islamic Society of North America (ISNA), which launched in 2018 the “Muslims at the Polls” campaign to help voters make their voices heard. As the new US administration has pledged to do more to protect the rights of American Muslims, the campaign is now more important than ever.

ISNA, like many other Muslim and religious organizations, has been working to get-out-the-vote the Muslim community when they supported Barack Obama’s re-election. This year, she organized for both Biden and other civil engagement campaign, calling potential voters in swing states, and Arizona, and helping them register to vote. She will be in charge of the same efforts for the Biden campaign in the coming election.

She is not alone. Many of the other Muslim organizations are working on getting-out-the-vote this election season, including by using new digital technologies and information.

Bakhtawar to get engaged with son of a US-based businessman this month

The prime minister said the Pakistanis will get engaged on a date to be determined by the couple. He added that following the engagement, the couple will travel to the United States for a week-long honeymoon. The prime minister said that he had personally arranged for an opulent engagement ceremony for Bakhtawar, who is the only daughter of Prime Minister Imran Khan and his wife, Bushra Maneka.

Meanwhile, the US-based businessman, who is also a Pakistani, has arrived in Pakistan to be present at Bakhtawar’s engagement ceremony. The couple will get engaged in the presence of the Pakistani prime minister and other officials.

The engagement ceremony will be followed by a wedding in the United States, where Bakhtawar will start her married life. The couple will return to Pakistan for a brief visit to meet with family members before heading back to the United States.

The prime minister said that Bakhtawar and her fiancé are both highly educated and have successful careers. He added that the couple is expected to bring a lot of joy and happiness to the Pakistani nation.

Moreover, the prime minister said that the engagement ceremony will be a great opportunity for Pakistan to showcase its rich culture and traditions to the world.

The prime minister also expressed his congratulations to Bakhtawar and her fiancé on their impending engagement and wished them all the best for a happy and prosperous future.
