Doha to host global youth peace conclave in May 21

Qatar has affirmed its keenness on supporting international efforts to implement youth, peace and security agendas in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 2250 (2015), announcing the hosting of a high-level global conference on youth-inclusive peace processes, which will be held in Doha on May 29-30, 2021.

This came in a statement made by HE the Permanent Representative of Qatar to the United Nations, Sheikha Alya Ahmed bin Saif al-Thani at a session held in the UN Security Council Arria-formula: ‘Women, Peace and Security: Constructing political will and commitment towards engaging youth in peace processes’.

She pointed to the participation of women from countries in conflict, and the main outcomes of the conference will mark a turning point for the youth, peace and security agenda by generating a five-year strategy to promote comprehensive peace processes.

Sheikha Alya stressed that the issue of enhancing youth participation in peace processes plays an enabling environment for inclusive youth-inclusive peace processes that has 17 important recommendations for enhancing youth participation in peace processes.

She also expressed confidence in the outcomes of the conference will mark a turning point for the youth, peace and security agenda by generating a five-year strategy to promote comprehensive peace processes.

Stressing that this conference will mark a turning point for the youth, peace and security agenda, she explained that the conference aims to strengthen political will and commitment towards engaging youth in peace processes, and to present good practices in implementing the main recommendations of the global policy paper issued by the first international symposium. Ambassador praised the initiative for the participation of young women in peace processes as an integral part of the programme, and said that the participation of young women is an important element of the conference outcomes.

Concluding, Ambassador Sheikha Alya stressed that Qatar, along with the participating countries, is working tirelessly to ensure that participation in the conference includes the largest possible number of young women and women from countries in conflict, in addition to the broad participation of civil society organizations.

The conference was held in Helsinki and will include the largest number of young women from countries in conflict.

Qatar Policy Paper: We are engaging youth in peace processes

Qatar is engaged in peace processes worldwide, not only in its own region, but also in other regions.

The policy paper issued by the first international symposium on youth participation in peace processes was presented at the meeting by HE member of the Council Dr Ahmed bin Khalifa al-Rumaihi.

The paper aims to encourage countries that play a mediating role in peace processes to enhance the participation of young women in peace processes, and to promote comprehensive peace processes.

The paper was presented at the meeting in Helsinki, which was attended by the presidency of the Conference on Interaction and Confidence Building Measures in Asia (CICA), the Office of the Secretary-General of the Conference on Interaction and Confidence Building Measures in Asia (CICA), and the office of the Secretary-General of the Conference on Interaction and Confidence Building Measures in Asia (CICA).
Qatar reiterates efforts to foster security, peace in Afghanistan

Qatar’s chief diplomat has demanded that security, peace and prosperity in Afghanistan reflect its firm commitment to regional stability and prosperity.

In a statement delivered by HE the Permanent Representative of Qatar to the United Nations, Abdullah al-Qahtani, to the 75th Session of the UN General Assembly, the Qatari envoy said that, after more than 20 years of war and conflict, putting an end to the conflict in Afghanistan, “is an important step towards ending the suffering of the Afghan people and the various efforts aimed at empowering them an important step towards the achievement of security, peace and prosperity in the region.”

In this context, Ambassador al-Qahtani stated that Qatar hosted the Assembly on ‘The situation in Afghanistan’ in July and Qatar Foundation, and in partnership with the Ministry of Municipality and Environment, has been able to empower the community’s need for the arts and culture that help us to go on and send us messages of resistance that help us to go on as long as we feel that we can do this. It is a creative expression that can be seen in the local and international levels. We are preparing the peace process towards Qatar’s role in containing the current crisis and to make a positive impact.

The envoy added: “I hope that the coalition of Gulf countries will continue its efforts towards the negotiated and comprehensive political solution in Afghanistan. It threatens the economies of all countries in the Gulf. It’s our view that the Gulf crisis is a regional crisis and we will continue discussions on this issue.”

The Gulf - Qatar relations are of crucial importance for the region and the world. They are based on the principles of non-interference, non-aggression, respect for human rights, and peaceful dialogue. The Gulf countries’ support for the international community’s efforts towards a comprehensive and inclusive solution to the Afghan crisis is an important step towards ending the suffering of the Afghan people and the various efforts aimed at empowering them an important step towards the achievement of security, peace and prosperity in the region.”

The diplomat further stated that Qatar has been a key player in the Afghan peace process, hosting several high-level meetings and consultations with leading Afghan political figures.

He also highlighted Qatar’s support for the Afghan people, emphasizing its commitment to providing them with the necessary assistance to enable them to lead a normal life.

The envoy concluded by reiterating Qatar’s commitment to continuing its efforts towards a comprehensive and inclusive solution to the Afghan crisis, stressing the importance of continuing discussions on this issue and encouraging all stakeholders to work towards a peaceful and prosperous future for Afghanistan.

Priceless passion for a unique collection

● Indian expatriate Abdul Salam has been a lifelong collector of rare banknotes.

By Laminah Roja

With the advent of modern technology and the proliferation of digital transactions, traditional banking practices are gradually giving way to electronic payments. However, in the era of the golden age of paper currency, banknotes have always been a symbol of wealth and security. A 33-year-old Doha-based Indian expatriate, Abdul Salam, has long been collecting banknotes, coins and stamps. His passion has led him to build a remarkable collection of rare banknotes.

Salam, who hails from the Indian state of Kerala, has been collecting paper currency for over two decades. His collection includes a variety of rare and unique banknotes from different countries, including Qatar.

“I started collecting rare banknotes when I was a child, and it has been a lifelong passion for me. Over the years, I have built a significant collection of rare and unique banknotes from different countries,” Salam said.

For Salam, it is not just a hobby but also a way to connect with his heritage and the history of different countries. “Each banknote is a piece of history, a story of its own, and it’s fascinating to learn about the different cultures and economic systems that have produced them,” he added.

Salam’s collection includes a Qatar 5 Qatari Riyals note from 1971, which is considered one of the rarest banknotes in his collection. He also has notes from other countries, such as the United States, India, and Japan.

“I have been lucky to find some of the rarest banknotes, including some that are no longer in circulation,” Salam said. “For example, I have a rare note from the kingdom of Saudi Arabia, which is no longer printed.”

Salam’s collection is not just for show; he is also passionate about sharing it with others. “I enjoy educating people about the history and significance of these banknotes,” he said. “I have given talks and presentations about my collection to various audiences.”

Salam’s dedication to his hobby and his commitment to sharing his collection with others have earned him recognition. “I have been featured in various media for my collection, and I have even been invited to speak at conferences and events,” he said.

Salam’s passion for collecting rare banknotes has also helped him make new friends. “I have met many other collectors from around the world, and we share the same passion,” he said. “It’s a wonderful feeling to be part of a community that shares a common interest.”

For Salam, collecting rare banknotes is not just a hobby; it is a way to honor the past and preserve history. “I believe that each banknote is a piece of history, and it’s important to keep these pieces of history alive,” he said.

Salam’s collection is a testament to his love for collecting and his passion for history. “I am proud of my collection, and I will continue to collect and share my passion with others,” he said. “It’s a fulfilling hobby, and I enjoy every moment of it.”

US vaccine near but deaths continue rising by 9/11 proportions

US vaccine near but deaths continue rising by 9/11 proportions

A US rollout faces significant logistical challenges to meet the goal of inoculating 100m people within 100 days, even with a surge of doses anticipated over the next few weeks.

Merging with unprecedented speed, the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) was yesterday on the cusp of approving emergency use of the coronavirus vaccines developed by Pfizer with its German partner BioNTech.

The FDA informed Pfizer that it should proceed to emergency use of the two-shot vaccine after its panel of outside experts voted unanimously to recommend it.

The FDA said Dr Mark Miller, director of FDA’s Vaccines and Related Products Branch, had “the authority to review and authorize emergency use.”

The authorization, expected to be made official in the coming days, would mean Americans as young as 16 could be vaccinated by Christmas Eve.

But any American who wants a vaccine should be able to get one by May at the latest, according to HHS chief Dr Alex Azar.

He said the US was “on track” to make doses available to all adults by early June, which would mean “millions and millions of Americans” could get a shot by then.

States will determine who gets the vaccine first and will likely focus on healthcare workers and people in long-term care facilities, followed by the elderly, people with serious conditions and front-Line workers, said Mr Azar.

“Not going to get to like a light switch on and it’s going to be more like a dimmer switch,” he said.

As of Saturday, the US had recorded more than 14m cases and 400,000 deaths.

Britain hailed ‘a Go-go’ when its first large-scale immunisation programme got underway. But, as one expert put it, “This is a marathon even by the European Union’s standards.”

It was a marathon even by the European Union’s standards. For hours, leaders of countries in the eurozone argued, haggled and shotballed at each other. After two hours of debate, they argued, haggled and shotballed some more.

The hour-long overnight summit staggered to an end. Many uncertainties remain. Among them: What side effects on older adults anticipate and how often will these occur? With some vaccines, people over 60 and those with comorbidities have been excluded from vaccine trials, and so it is difficult to tell how the virus behaves in these groups.

Several in-country leaders and some young people will be among the first vaccinated, followed by many older people and others at high risk. But it remains unclear how many older people are actually vaccinated in each country. The groups who are first to receive the vaccine in each country are likely to vary from country to country, and even from region to region within a country.

Seventeen members of the eurozone and Austrian living conditions will be among the first vaccinated, followed by many older people and others at high risk.
