US Congress set to vote on more relief aid

Democrats in the US Congress will seek to push through lawmakers relief payments of $1,400, in an effort to increase aid for Americans that has put the lame-duck president, Donald Trump, on the spot.

The Republican president last week threatened to block a $2.3tn pandemic aid and spending package of Congress, which did not boost stimulus payments from $600 to $2,000, and cut other spending.

Trump backed down from his demands for a possible government shutdown brought on by the sticking points.

But Democratic lawmakers who have a majority in the House of Representatives and have long wanted $2,000 relief cheques hope to use the leverage to push to advance the proposal – at least part of Republicans are ready against it – in the next few days.

It was unclear why Trump, who leaves office on January 20 after losing re-election, would not be more likely to back the aid bill passed by the Senate.

Many of Trump’s fellow Republicans, who control the Senate, oppose the aid on the grounds that it is wasteful and ineffective.

Brazilian Vice-President Hamilton Mourão is in the second week of hospital treatment for COVID-19, his office said yesterday.

The coronavirus causes the COVID-19 respiratory disease.

In a statement, Mourão’s office said the vice-president’s condition had improved today, with his fever and breathing normal.

He began his treatment yesterday, at the specially equipped unit at his official residence in Brasilia after testing positive for the virus on Friday, the office said.

“Some days and nights with high fever, but no symptoms such as cough or shortness of breath,” said Mourão’s office.

“Tests were carried out and the result is positive. The patient is being treated according to the protocol,” it added.

Authorities still looking for motive in Nashville blast

F ederal, state and local law enforcement officers were searching for the motive behind a bombing that rocked Nashville on Christmas morning, with officials pointing to the 51-year-old suspect who handed himself in, Cullen Ray Ellis, as the bomber.

Ellis, 51, was identified as the suspect by Anthony ’Tony’ Womack, and said he dealt in the Blast, which damaged more than 40 businesses in downtown Nashville, Tennessee’s largest city and the United States’ country music capital.

Ellis said that he had turned on Friday morning after police responding to reports of gunfire and blast heard and damage emanating from the vehicle warning of a bomb.

Police hurried to evacuate people in the area, and Womack is the only person who was injured in the blast, which occurred near a ARMY transmission building on the city’s busy Second Avenue, and the building.

The explosion injured three people, and police are still looking to answer a series of questions, including the motive in the blast.

Bangladesh moves more Rohingya to barren island

Bangladesh’s government has faced criticism for moving more than 400,000 Rohingya refugees to the island of Bhashan Char, which is located in the Bay of Bengal. The government has been criticized for the forced relocation of the refugees to the island, which is considered to be a dangerous and inhospitable environment. The government has been accused of violating the refugees’ rights and of failing to provide them with adequate food, water, and medical care.

The government has defended its actions, saying that the island is not appropriate for human habitation, and that the refugees are being moved to a safer place. However, critics have said that this is not true and that the refugees are being moved to the island under duress. The government has also been criticized for not providing adequate information about the island to the refugees, and for not giving them the opportunity to choose whether or not to go to the island.

EU’s vaccine drive off to an uneven start

By Marlowe Hood, AFP

The EU’s campaign to vaccinate Europeans against coronavirus causing the pandemic is off to an uneven start on December 30.

The COVID-19 respiratory disease – which has already claimed at least 3,500 lives and displaced millions worldwide – began in Spain over the weekend and is expected to be completed by next September in all EU’s 27 member countries across its 27 member countries.

About 56mn doses have been procured based on their populations, with the virus death toll rising by the day but the EU said that each of the 16 German states should be vaccinated. The EU is due to receive its first 12mn doses of the Pfizer vaccine this week, with a further 27mn in March, based on projections for the year 2021, a day after Spain began vaccinating care-home residents.

Wuhan started a marathon effort to administer the vaccine disbursements to patients in the public sector. The coronavirus causes the disease COVID-19, which has been linked to a number of deaths worldwide.

The vaccine is typically used for picnics or other outdoor activities and has been transported in cool boxes to ensure it is mixed with five times the recommended dose of the vaccine provided by Pfizer and BioNTech.

In Italy, some politicians said that each of the 16 German states should be vaccinated. The EU is due to receive its first 12mn doses of the Pfizer vaccine this week, with a further 27mn in March, based on projections for the year 2021, a day after Spain began vaccinating care-home residents.

Olympics will still rule sports calendar in 2021

The rescheduled Tokyo Olympics will be the centrepiece of a summer sports calendar this year as sports enthusiasts who had their calendars wiped away by the coronavirus pandemic try to get their lives back on track.

While the Games will still be held in 2020, they have been changed by Covid-19. Tokyo organizers have said that the event is under pressure from all corners as the virus continues to circulate across the country.

The challenge is to reduce the risk of spreading the disease, while also allowing visitors from abroad to attend the Games.

In early December, organisers said they would cancel plans to allow foreign visitors to attend the Games.

If the pandemic does not ease, they will have to cut back or cancel the Games altogether.

The games are due to go ahead next year, even if the pandemic has not been eradicated.

QF students can volunteer for foal-sitting project

QF’s Equine Veterinary Medical Center offers a unique volunteer opportunity for students

Students at Qatar Foundation (QF) have a unique opportunity to learn more about equine medical care through an educational volunteer programme designed to equip them with the skills and knowledge they need to help care for critically ill neonatal equine patients.

The Foal Sitting Project, offered by the Equine Veterinary Medical Center (EVMC), a QF member, aims to engage university students providing critical and intensive care for newborn foals, who are often sick with health concerns regarding safety due to the lack of dedicated undivided attention. They need stimulation, interaction and support. And just like baby people, they have a strong desire to interact and engage with their environment.

The programme was implemented under supervision of Dr Mees Al-Mubarak, executive director of the Corporate Quality and Patient Safety Department (CQPSD) at Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC), and Dr AbdulJaleel Zakariya, AED of Health informatics at Al Wakra Hospital, and was coordinated by Dr Sara Musheif Kadhib, assistant professor of Health informatics at the Department of Health informatics at the College of Science and Engineering, and Nada Al-Rahim, assistant professor at Al Wakra Hospital’s Quality and Patient Safety Department.

In a special celebration ceremony held at Al Wakra Hospital to mark the completion of the six-week training programme, Dr Sabah Al-Kadhi, acting CEO and medical director of Al Wakra Hospital, honoured CSE faculty members who delivered the training and the hospital’s CSE staff members who delivered the training workshops.

The programme was implemented in collaboration with the Corporate Quality and Patient Safety Department of Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC) and IMC’s Corporate Quality and Patient Safety Department.
