The center is also one of the qualitative projects implemented by Qatar Charity in the field of health relief to contribute to reducing the spread of diseases and epidemics in refugee camps.

The center started operations in 2017, and over the past three years, it has received between 400 and 500 cases per day, providing diagnostic, clinical, and pharmaceutical services free of charge to Syrian refugees living in Zaatari camp. It has 40 medical and technical personnel.

Strategic Partnership

Believing in the importance of medical relief to reduce the spread of diseases and epidemics in camps, Qatar Charity, Arabian Medical Relief, and Jordan Hashemite Charity Organization have signed a contract in December last year to operate the center in the Zaatari refugee camp, to continue providing medical care to Syrian refugees in the camp for another year.

Under the signed contract, Qatar Charity shall provide expenses for operating the center (staff, medicines, and medical and technical supplies), while the Arabian Medical Relief shall manage the center. However, the Jordan Hashemite Charity Organization shall facilitate procedures for remittances and disbursement.

CSE workshpurs nurture future leaders

A part of its mission to nurture tomorrow’s leadership and innovators in computer science, the Computer Science Engineering (CSE) department at Hamad Bin Khalifa University (HBKU) has launched a series of workshops for high school seniors with an interest in computer engi- neering.

The workshops offer high school students the opportunity to discover the potential the field holds for them and to learn more about the depth and breadth of the field.

They also get to experience working in a team to solve complex problems, something they may not be able to do in a high school setting.

The workshops are taught on HBKU’s campus and are designed to give students a glimpse into what they can expect in college and what courses they can take in order to pursue this field.

The workshops are taught by professionals in the field, including faculty members, and are designed to give students a taste of what it’s like to be a computer scientist.

Killing animals causes another worldwide health crisis

By Ghanim al-Sulaiti

People choose to eat meat for various reasons such as concern for animal welfare, the environment impact of meat production, and for religious or cultural reasons and considerations. While some countries have banned the sale of most or all types of animals, this is not true for all. China, however, is not one of those countries – nor is Taiwan. Photos have emerged this week of multiple animals, including a variety of birds, rabbits, snakes, bats and other species being sold in cages, plus piles of skinned birds, exotic species and other animals. Some countries have more respect for animals, some believe in environmental vegetarianism, People choose not to eat meat for their approach to animals, but this is simply not enough. A photo of a menu list from a seller in the Wuhan market shows that there was a plethora of meat and seafood items that would have posed no threat to human life or health that have left alone. We are only able to afford one to eat the world's sick animals and not to destroy or deforested the real freedom. The reality is that being considered as an animal or dead means to be dead Human. In the public, we will have continued to face animal rights from potential new virus.

Iraqi president gives parliament three days to name prime minister

Iraqi President Barham Salih has said he would give the next parliament three days to name a new prime minister after the current caretaker government stepped down on January 12, 2020.

Iraq's parliament had been expected to meet on Wednesday to elect the next prime minister, but has not convened yet. The new government is needed to clarify Iraq's political landscape after the resignation of Adel Abdul-Mahdi in December, following protests by millions of Iraqis demanding an end to corruption and the ousting of political elites.

The United Nations has said Iraq is facing a “total economic collapse” and a “humanitarian crisis” due to the ongoing political deadlock, with millions of Iraqis struggling to make ends meet and basic services spiraling out of control.

The United Nations Development Program (UNDP) has said over 12 million Iraqis are in need of immediate humanitarian assistance, while another 12 million are in need of non-food items.

A senior government official said on Wednesday that the new government would be responsible for addressing the economic crisis and improving the standards of living for all Iraqis.

A spokesperson for the United Nations said that the new government should focus on implementing reforms and dealing with the country's intertwined economic, social and political crises.

The new government's priority will be to secure the country's stability and stability, according to the United Nations.

Iraq's political situation has been strained by the ongoing crisis, with the government unable to form a new government due to the lack of a quorum in the parliament.

The United Nations has repeatedly called on Iraq's leaders to act in the interests of the Iraqi people and to implement the necessary reforms to address the country's challenges.

The United Nations has also urged the international community to provide necessary support to Iraq, including financial assistance, technical expertise and capacity building.

The White House today took the first steps toward the impeachment of US President Donald Trump, hours after he was acquitted in his first ever impeachment trial. The move comes amid growing concern among Democrats that Trump'speated public attacks on former US Ambassador to Ukraine Marie Yovanovitch merit an investigation by Congress.

Democrats have launched a number of investigationss into the Trump administration, including probes into the Ukraine matter when he left his post. In his published book, Trump has said that he wanted to freeze $391mn in security assistance to Ukraine in return for Yovanovitch's removal. Bolton's book, meanwhile, has been a source of controversy, with his publisher, Henry Holt, saying it understood "that stu- died information" and could not be pub- lished or otherwise disclosed.

“Bolton’s book is not about facts. Bolton’s book is about Donald Trump’s temperament,” said White House Director of Legislative Affairs Marc Short. “I think it’s very important that reporters continue to fact-check Bolton’s book, which is about temperament and not about facts.”

The White House announced today that it would not release the manuscript of Bolton's book, saying it was a "confidential communication." Bolton's publisher, however, has expressed confidence that the book will be published.

The White House said it would not comment on the content of Bolton's book until it had been released, and that it would not use the book to influence the course of the impeachment investigation. Bolton's book is expected to be released on Tuesday.

Thailand has seen 14 cases of COVID-19 among returning tourists. All of these cases were asymptomatic. This suggests that COVID-19 may be spreading in Thailand, officials said. Thailand's biggest animal park, which was closed due to the coronavirus outbreak, is now open.

The official death toll from COVID-19 in Thailand is 2,179, of which 1,038 were confirmed cases. A total of 194,840 people in Thailand are currently under quarantine, and 14,680 have been released from quarantine.

Thailand is one of the countries in the world that has been successful in controlling COVID-19. The government has taken strict measures to prevent the spread of the virus, including限制旅游, 封锁, and contact tracing. These measures have helped to reduce the number of new cases in the country.

But the threat of a new wave of infections remains, as the virus continues to spread in other countries. Thailand has been preparing for this possibility by increasing its capacity to test and treat COVID-19 patients.

The government has also announced plans to vaccinate all residents of Thailand, which is expected to be completed by the end of the year. This will help to protect the population against COVID-19 and reduce the risk of new outbreaks.

Reliance to use plastics in road construction

Reliance Infrastructure, India’s largest listed player in the infrastruc- ture space, said it has developed the country’s first road made with plastic in road construc- tion. The road is a 3.5-km stretch of road in the sprawling city of suburban Surat, in the west-central Indian state of Gujarat. The company said it has used high-quality plastic road construction materials to make the road. The road was built in collaboration with the Surat Metropolitan Development Authority (SMDA) and the Gujarat government. This is the first time a plastic road has been built in India. The road is expected to last longer than traditional asphalt roads and requires less maintenance. This innovation also helps reduce plastic waste, which is a major concern in India and other countries. The use of plastic in road construction is an emerging trend globally, and Reliance Infrastructure’s work is expected to set a precedent for similar projects in the country and beyond. The road was inaugurated in November 2020, and it has been in operation since then. The company plans to expand the use of plastic in road construction to other parts of the country, and it aims to become a leader in this technology. The road is expected to enhance the mobility of the city and help reduce traffic congestion. This is a significant development in the fight against plastic waste and highlights India’s commitment to sustainable infrastructure development. The company is also exploring the potential for using plastic in other infrastructure projects, such as bridges and buildings. Reliance Infrastructure is a well-established company in the infrastructure sector, and this innovation is a testament to its commitment to innovation and sustainability. The company is expected to play a key role in India’s efforts to become a global leader in sustainable infrastructure development.

Duterte also met with regional health directors to discuss local responses to the emerging threat.

For its dedication and passion for public service, President Rodrigo Duterte posthumously honored former Senator Juan Ponce Enrile as he signed Republic Act 11463, or the Malasakit Center Act of 2019 — which is one of his victories in the 17th Congress. The law provides for the establishment of Malasakit Centers.

The Department of Agriculture (DA) and the Food and Drug Authority would be alerted “to put them all on self-quarantine, the DOH said.” We’re not discounting that we’re not discounting that a health hazard.

To really shift the needle on climate change, we need 1,000 other (companies) to follow suit and turn rhetoric into action.

Substantial efforts by companies are critical as the global warming crisis intensifies. Corporate leadership in the US is also making strong advances. Starbucks will also invest in more eco-friendly retail and logistics network. Microsoft now has a more aggressive timetable than the Alliance and a 2040 carbon neutral goal that Amazon announced in the summer. But Amazon’s target may be more ambitious, given that it is producing not only employees and shareholders, but also devices and global networks. Other major employers are also making progress on these commitments.

Starbucks last week announced an array of responses, including a preliminary goal of cutting its carbon emissions in half by 2030. Starbucks will also be among the companies that have rested a thin majority in Punjab — the last province to get involved in the war-on-terror, and Pakistan itself. The country has seen a downward spiral in its economy where the country appeared in a rut a few months ago. From now onwards, Pakistan will improve its governance — so we can tap into our potential.

Not shy of admitting reversals, Khan now is gaining global attention as a profound peacemaker, battling the environment and pulling make governance even more effective. The trouble is he has to solve his problems on his plate: poverty, hunger, and illiteracy. Khan has to devise whatever he feels for the betterment of the globe, he has to take on the environment, he has to take on the climate change. This is a problem of the century, of the lifetime, and of the world, and he can not afford to wait and lose time. Khan dare not to try to stay in action.

The political landscape of the ad-hoc-continuous means despite some changes and movements that have taken place in the four provinces, including one in the Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa province, where they were found to be running out of steam in Punjab. A couple of Khan’s polices that are related to the welfare of the people in Pakistan, including the party in power — is to be developed in the future. An advantage methodology — the growth of the country, its prosperity, and the improvement of the people, if lead, one — continue to “screen” him and party into the new forever in the White House. All of these processes are filled with the experience of the White House. Khan is the most..
Explaining the triumph of Trump's economic recklessness

By James Ponsor

In this chapter, I explore the economic policies of President Donald J. Trump and their implications for the United States and the world. Trump's approach to economic management has been characterized by a combination of fiscal stimulus, deregulation, and protectionism. This strategy has had mixed results, with some successes in terms of job creation and economic growth, but also significant negative consequences, including increased inequality and rising trade tensions.

The key policy areas I discuss include tax reform, trade negotiations, and monetary policy. I argue that Trump's economic policies have been driven by a desire to appeal to working-class voters and to support his base, rather than by a comprehensive strategy to promote long-term economic prosperity.

I conclude by examining the implications of Trump's economic policies for the future of the US economy and its role in the global economy. While some aspects of Trump's approach have contributed to economic growth, others have created risks for both the US and the world economy.
