A firefighting first: LAFD engine can run for two hours on electric power

The Los Angeles Fire Department (LAFD) has taken the first step in a new phase of its effort to reduce its carbon footprint by introducing an electric hybrid fire engine. The Concept Fire Truck, or CFT, is designed to reduce the department's reliance on fossil fuels and lower emissions from emergency response operations. The CFT is capable of running for up to two hours on electric power, allowing firefighters to respond to fires in areas where fuel fills are not available.

Four survive 32 days adrift in Pacific

Four survive a month adrift in the Pacific in a small boat captained by a navigator and a crewman who had been abandoned by their ship while sailing through the Fiji Islands in the South Pacific. The four were rescued after they had been adrift for 32 days, with only a small amount of food and water.

The survivors, a man, a woman, and a girl, were found by a Fijian fisherman, who spotted them from a distance while returning from a fishing trip. The Fijian fisherman then contacted the authorities, who launched a search and rescue operation.

The survivors, who are from the Fiji Islands, had been sailing for several days when their ship encountered rough seas and they were forced to abandon it. They were able to survive by catching fish and drinking rainwater.

The rescued survivors were taken to a hospital in the Fiji Islands, where they were treated for dehydration and other health issues. They are expected to make a full recovery.

A 10-year-old Fulton man, Dylan L. Palmiero, was arrested on April 16, 2023, in the city of Cork, Ireland, and charged with murder. The arrest came after a nationwide manhunt for the suspect, who had been on the run for over a year.

Palmiero, a known member of the Irish Republican Army (IRA), was caught in a surprise raid conducted by a team of elite police officers. The operation involved a coordinated effort by law enforcement agencies from across the country, including the Garda Síochána, the Irish police force.

According to sources, Palmiero was found hiding in a remote area of the Wicklow Mountains, where he had been avoiding capture for months. He was taken into custody without incident and is currently being held in a high-security prison in Dublin.

The murder victim, a 52-year-old man, was known to have ties to the IRA and was targeted for his involvement in the organization. The exact motive behind the killing remains under investigation, but it is believed to be related to the ongoing conflict between the IRA and the Protestant paramilitary groups in the area.

The arrest is seen as a significant blow to the IRA, which has been battling for independence from the British government for decades. It is also a testament to the effectiveness of the law enforcement forces in Ireland, who were able to track down the suspect and bring him to justice.

The case has sparked a wave of emotions across the country, with many expressing relief at the capture of the suspect and mourning for the victim. The trial is expected to be a high-profile affair, with international media covering the proceedings in detail.

In a statement, the Garda Síochána said: “We are pleased to announce the arrest of this individual who has been on the run for over a year. He is facing charges of murder and will appear in court shortly.”

The case is expected to be a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict in Ireland, and will be closely watched by both domestic and international observers.

Corbyn attacks PM on deportation row

The leader of the opposition, Jeremy Corbyn, has lashed out at the prime minister over the issue of deportations. In a statement, Corbyn said: “The government’s record on deportations is a disgrace. It has deported thousands of innocent people, many of whom have been here for decades and have made significant contributions to our society.”

Corbyn went on to say that the government’s policies were a “disgrace” and that it was “morally wrong” to deport people who had made significant contributions to the UK.

The statement comes as the government faces increasing criticism over its deportation policies. A recent report by the Home Office found that 19,000 people had been deported in the past year, with many of them being innocent individuals who had made significant contributions to the UK.

Corbyn ended his statement by saying: “The government must act now to change its policies and stop deporting innocent people.”

Corbyn's comments have been met with a mixed reaction, with some who have called for an end to the deportation of innocent individuals, and others who have defended the government's policies.
Senators lift immunity for Salvi overARRIER

Romania

European Union leaders are set to decide whether to lift immunity for a senior Romanian politician who is accused of corruption, a move that could derail efforts to back two major new fighter jets for NATO.

The European Council is due to meet in Brussels later on Wednesday to decide whether to lift immunity for Andrei Nastase, who is accused of money laundering and tax evasion.

The European Parliament has already lifted immunity for Nastase, who was a senior politician in Romania's National Liberal Party.

But the council, which has final say on such matters, has been divided over whether to lift immunity for the politician.

The council is due to meet on Wednesday to decide on the matter.

Nastase was accused of having received kickbacks from companies that were awarded EU contracts.

He has denied the allegations and has said he is innocent.

The council is expected to vote on whether to lift immunity for Nastase on Wednesday afternoon.

If the council decides to lift immunity, it would mean that Nastase could be tried in court in Romania.

But if the council decides not to lift immunity, it could mean that Nastase would remain immune from prosecution.

The matter has been a major source of tension in relations between the European Union and Romania, which is a member state.

Relations between the EU and Romania have been strained in recent years over issues such as corruption and the rule of law.

German lawmakers approve fund for new Eurofighter jet

GERMAN lawmakers have voted in favour of a proposal to fund the development of a new generation of fighter jets for the European Union.

The proposal was approved by a 411-241 vote in the lower house of parliament, the Bundestag.

The funds would be used to develop a sixth-generation fighter jet called the Tempest, which is being developed by a consortium of European companies.

The Tempest is expected to enter service in the 2030s.

German lawmakers supported the proposal on the condition that the new fighter jet would be compatible with existing aircraft and would not be a “black box” project.

The proposal is part of a wider European Union plan to develop a new generation of fighter jets that would be able to operate in a CO2-neutral manner.

The proposal was presented by the government of German Chancellor Angela Merkel and defended by Defence Minister Ursula von der Leyen.

The project is expected to cost €18 billion.

Anger in Bolivia as anti-Morales bloc splinters before May polls

The government of Bolivian President Evo Morales is facing a crisis of unity from within its ranks, with the electoral authorities having prevented a presidential candidate from running while a probe into possible election irregularities continues.

The case has raised concerns about the future of the Morales administration and the stability of the country's political system, which has been mired in controversy since the 2019 elections.

The Morales government has faced allegations of fraud and corruption, leading to massive protests and a cut-off of gas supplies from Venezuela. The president has repeatedly denied any wrongdoing.

In this context, the crisis of unity within the anti-Morales bloc is seen as a potential blow to the government's stability. The opposition is divided, with several candidates running for the presidency, but none of them have the backing of a clear majority.

The Morales administration has sought to mobilize supporters to counter the protests, but the opposition has refused to recognize the results of the election, leading to a political standoff.

The situation in Bolivia is complex and volatile, with the potential for further escalation. The future of the Morales government is uncertain, and the country is facing a crucial period of transition.

Guanicoe calls for release of detained relative

The Guain.co campaign has called for the release of its detained relative, who has been held for months without charge.

Guanicoe is a Bolivian political party that has been active in the country's opposition politics. The party has been critical of the Morales administration, and its members have been arrested and detained on multiple occasions.

The detainee was reported to have been arrested in October and held at the military prison in La Paz. The Guain.co campaign has called for his immediate release, arguing that he has been held without charge and in violation of due process.

The campaign has also pointed out that the detainee is not a political threat and that his release would not undermine the state's security.

The situation in Bolivia is marked by political polarization and social distancing. The Guain.co campaign is calling for solidarity and support for those who have been affected by state violence.

The campaign's call for release has resonated with many in Bolivia, who are calling for an end to the political crisis and for respect for human rights.

Compliance report conveys concerns for Mount Ararat

The compliance report from the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) has raised concerns about the situation in the Armenian-Azerbaijani border region.

The report has highlighted issues related to security, human rights, and the environment, and has called for a dialogue between the two sides.

The OSCE mission in the region has been monitoring the situation since the 2020 war, and has expressed concern about the long-term stability of the region.

The compliance report has been welcomed by some as a step towards greater transparency, but has also been criticized as insufficient to address the underlying issues.

The situation in the region remains tense, with tensions between Azerbaijan and Armenia persisting.

Meanwhile, the US State Department has called for a diplomatic solution to the dispute, and has urged both sides to refrain from any actions that could escalate the situation.

USDA on Thanksgiving: No major changes expected

The US Department of Agriculture (USDA) has said that there are no major changes expected in the American Thanksgiving menu this year.

The agency has noted that the COVID-19 pandemic has had an impact on the food supply chain, but has also pointed out that the situation is improving, with more supplies available.

The USDA has urged consumers to plan their Thanksgiving meals carefully, and to consider alternative foods if their usual options are not available.

The agency has also reminded consumers to follow the latest guidelines from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to prevent the spread of the virus.

The situation in the US remains complex, with the ongoing pandemic affecting the economy and the food supply chain. The USDA's call for careful planning and attention to safety measures is seen as important in ensuring a successful Thanksgiving.

President Biden returns to Mexico for first trip

The visit comes amid ongoing tensions between the two countries, particularly over migration policies and drug trafficking.

The White House has said that Biden's trip is part of a broader effort to strengthen ties with Mexico and to work together on shared priorities.

The situation in the US-Mexico border region remains complex, with ongoing challenges related to migration and the drug trade. The Biden administration's visit is seen as an important step towards strengthening cooperation with Mexico.

Making room in the US for legal immigrants

In his State of the Union address last week, President Trump asked Congress to pass “prohibition on federal public assistance for illegals.” He was referring to “Medicaid for illegals” and suggesting that the government provide health benefits to all US “residents,” including undocumented immigrants.

Whether America’s public health is better served by including or excluding undocumented immigrants in the country is a debate worth having, and one that will surely take place should any Medicare for All legislation move forward.

But what we absolutely cannot do is that increasingly his immigration policies are discouraging legal immigrants from applying for the existing public benefits that they legally can receive.

Last August, the administration dramatically expanded the federal “public charge” rule by denying green cards to legal immigrants already in the US who have ever used, or are deemed likely to use, public benefits such as Medicaid, food stamps or housing assistance. The new rule is an assault on legal immigration that attempts to skirt Congressional injunction against the rule while various legal challenges are pending.
