Amir donates QR50m for Syria charity drive

As a profoundly humanitarian gesture, His Highness the Amir Shaikh Tamim bin Hamad Al-Thani has directed Qatar Islamic Bank (QIB) to donate QR50 million (about $13.9 million) to the High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR) to support the relief efforts for the displaced people in Syria.

"Our role model and our guardian, His Highness the Amir, has insti- tuted the Amir Al-Sham campaign at the highest level in the eyes of the Syrian people. We are strengthened by his role in this campaign," UNHCHR High Commissioner for Human Rights, Ms. Louise Arbour, said.

"It is a great honor for all of us to be part of this campaign and to be able to contribute our efforts. The aim is to alleviate the suffering of the Syrian people and to bring them hope for a better future. We are grateful for the support provided by the Amir Al-Sham campaign and the dedication of the people of Qatar," Ms. Arbour added.

The Amir Al-Sham campaign, which was launched in late 2019, has been instrumental in providing aid and relief to the Syrian people. The campaign has received widespread support from the international community, with contributions from governments, organizations, and individuals around the world.

Qatar’s leadership has consistently demonstrated its commitment to supporting humanitarian efforts and improving the lives of those affected by conflict and displacement. The Amir Al-Sham campaign is a testament to this commitment and its impact.

The Qatari government has further called on the Israeli authorities to immediately cease their violations of international law and human rights, and to ensure the protection of the Palestinian people and their rights.

Qatar’s condemnation of the Israeli attacks comes in the wake of growing international concern over the escalating violence in the occupied Arab lands. The United Nations and other international organizations have repeatedly called on the Israeli authorities to halt their violations and to respect the rights of the Palestinian people.

WHO raises global virus risk to ‘very high’ level

The World Health Organization (WHO) has raised its global risk assessment of the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) to ‘very high’, emphasizing the need for more efforts to stop the spread of the virus.

WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said the new risk assessment reflected the growing threat posed by the virus, which has now spread to more than 180 countries and territories.

WHO has warned that the virus continues to spread rapidly, with the number of cases doubling every week in some regions. The agency has called on governments and individuals to take immediate action to prevent the spread of the virus, including implementing social distancing measures, wearing masks, and washing hands.

The WHO has also urged all countries to step up their efforts to trace and isolate cases, conduct contact tracing, and implement quarantine measures.

WHO estimates that COVID-19 has now infected about 9 million people worldwide, with more than 500,000 deaths. The virus has spread to almost every country, with infections now reported in all continents except Antarctica.

Global stocks slump over virus fears

Global stock markets have continued to fall over concerns about the spread of coronavirus, with the US dollar strengthening against most other currencies. The S&P 500 and Dow Jones Industrial Average have both dropped significantly.

The US Federal Reserve has announced emergency measures to support the economy, including lowering interest rates and injecting liquidity into the financial system. The European Central Bank has also taken steps to support the Eurozone, with the ECB announcing a package of measures to support banks and businesses.

In a sign of growing economic uncertainty, oil prices have plummeted, with Brent crude falling below $30 per barrel. The energy sector has been particularly hard hit, with airlines and travel companies also suffering.

In the Middle East, the Saudi Arabia stock market has also fallen sharply, with the Saudi Arabia Stock Exchange (Tadawul) down more than 10%.

Tunisian, Palestinian and Jordanian students hold protests

The leaders of Tunisia, Palestine and Jordan have condemned recent attacks by Israeli authorities on the occupied Arab lands and have expressed their support for the Palestinian people.

The Tunisian government has called on the international community to take effective measures to address the ongoing crisis and to support the efforts of the UN and other relevant organizations to achieve a just and lasting solution to the conflict.

Jordan’s Foreign Minister has also called on the Israeli authorities to immediately cease their violations of international law and human rights, and to ensure the protection of the Palestinian people and their rights.

The Palestinian leadership has also condemned the Israeli attacks, with the Palestinian Authority calling for immediate international action to address the ongoing crisis.

Pakistan, Qatar set for bilateral pact to enhance tourism

Qatar and Pakistan are geo-politically close, having shared borders for over 600 years. Despite this close geographical proximity, the two nations have limited formal diplomatic relations. In this context, the recent announcement of a bilateral agreement between Qatar and Pakistan opens up new opportunities for cultural and economic cooperation. The pact is being viewed as a significant step forward in enhancing the bilateral relationship between the two countries, particularly in the cultural sector.

The agreement is seen as a natural extension of the ongoing efforts by both countries to promote tourism and cultural exchange. Qatar, with its modern infrastructure and world-class facilities, is seen as a potential tourism destination for Pakistani visitors, while Pakistan, with its rich historical and cultural heritage, offers a unique opportunity for Qatari visitors.

This agreement is also expected to boost economic cooperation between the two countries. With Qatar's growing economy and increasing demand for skilled labor, Pakistan has much to offer in terms of human resources. Similarly, Pakistan's growing middle class and increasing disposable income provide a promising market for Qatari products and services.

The agreement is expected to lead to joint ventures in areas such as tourism, trade, investment, and education. It is also seen as a stepping stone for further cooperation in other areas such as defense, security, and energy.

Overall, the agreement marks a significant step forward in enhancing the bilateral relationship between Qatar and Pakistan. It is expected to bring mutual benefits and open up new avenues for cooperation between the two countries.

White House defends response to outbreak

The US Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar told CNN’s Dana Bash that the US has a “resilient response” to the outbreak, which started in China.

“America today is by far the world’s best placed to deal with this situation,” Azar said.

Azar was responding to attacks on the Trump administration’s handling of the pandemic, which has killed more than 10,000 people in the US and sparked a global stock market crash.

To 11mn people in Brazil, the Earth is flat

The Flat-Earthers are brimming with counter-factual questions: “Why can’t we see the curve from above a disc-shaped planet?” “If I ride a bicycle, why do I not sink into the Earth?” “Why are there no photographs from space of the Earth’s curvature?” “If it’s true that the Earth is spinning, why do I feel stable when I stand up?” “How can we detect the Earth’s rotation?”

To these questions, the Flat-Earthers reply: “That’s just another way to propagate the ‘hoaxes’ of the scientific community.”

Tales from the Philippines' drug war have abounded, but one that the Philippines has moved to put behind it now is officially over.

President Rodrigo Duterte yesterday, working for the tenth time in the past 10 days, signed into law the law creating a new Police Special Action Force (PSAF), starting a new chapter in the drug war.

"There's something we obviously need to still try to do if it can be done or if it can be done with the place on the line," the president said.

The law increases the budget for the force to P42 billion from P20 billion and empowers it to operate in the Philippines and overseas under joint venture arrangements with private companies.

"I'm happy," Duterte said. "It's a good thing."

Govts face pressure to protect nature in biodiversity ‘super year’

Governments are under pressure to sign up to the PARIS AGREEMENT FOR BIODIVERSITY — to halt and reverse shocking declines in nature and species since pre-industrial times. They face a major challenge as they try to find solutions to the biodiversity crisis, which includes species extinction.”

The PARIS AGREEMENT FOR BIODIVERSITY aims to protect and restore biodiversity, slow the loss of nature and address climate change, for example. In the face of the unprecedented challenge this presents, many governments are reviewing the impacts of climate change on biodiversity and are preparing reports on the impacts of climate change on biodiversity. They are also developing strategies to protect biodiversity, including the establishment of protected areas and the implementation of sustainable land-use practices.

For example, the European Union has set a target to protect 30% of its territory by 2030, which includes the establishment of a network of protected areas. The United States has also set a target to protect 30% of its territory by 2050, which includes the establishment of a network of protected areas. The United States has also set a target to protect 30% of its territory by 2050, which includes the establishment of a network of protected areas.

But what if investments in emissions reductions and renewable energy technologies are insufficient to meet these targets? What if investments in nature-based solutions and the establishment of protected areas are insufficient to meet these targets? What if investments in nature-based solutions and the establishment of protected areas are insufficient to meet these targets?

Kondik, an analyst at the University of Virginia's Center for Politics, said Obama "understand why candidates run to earn name recognition and that he is no different."

Thanks to his特点, he is able to connect with everyday Americans and build a base of support. His grassroots campaign has already secured an impressive early-state win in Iowa, where he outpolled both Clinton and Sanders by a margin of nearly 20 points. The momentum appears to be building for an sustained campaign that could take him all the way to victory.

In the coming months, the race will likely focus on economic issues like jobs, healthcare, and inequality. Obama's record on these issues is strong, and he will likely make them a central part of his campaign. He is also expected to continue to emphasize his personal characteristics, such as his empathy and resilience.

However, there are potential pitfalls. Sanders, for one, is likely to challenge him on economic issues, given the growing divide between the haves and have-nots. Additionally, the race is likely to be marked by attacks on Obama's record and personal faults.

Despite these challenges, Obama appears to be well-prepared for the coming months. His campaign is well-funded, and he has a strong team of advisors and surrogates to help him win. If he is able to maintain his momentum and effectively address the concerns of voters, he has a good chance of securing a second term.

In the end, the race will likely come down to which candidate best reflects the values and priorities of the American people. If Obama is able to continue to connect with voters and build a strong base of support, he has a good chance of winning a second term. However, if Sanders or another candidate is able to capture the imagination of voters and present a compelling alternative, it's possible that a different outcome could result.
