Lulu Hypermarket launches massive health campaign

The Ministry of Public Health has announced that two new positive cases of Covid-19 have been confirmed in Qatar bringing the total number of cases in the country to 27. The infected patient was admitted to the Communicable Disease Center under complete isolation and is in stable condition.

The infected patient is a Qatari citizen who was exposed to infection from his father who is a confirmed case, and the patient was subjected to immediate isolation upon arrival in Qatar and then had contact with the Communicable Disease Center.

The infected patient was admitted to the Communicable Disease Center on February 27, the ministry said in a statement. The patient was subjected to continuous quarantine upon arrival in Qatar and then had contact with the Communicable Disease Center.

Germany and the Galician International Auto Show, the Doha 2020 organizations council has been consulting with public health officials and the government of Qatar regarding the status of the event. "Though the risk to the general public in Qatar remains low, our primary concern remains the health and safety following the recent developments on the spread of Covid-19 outbreak in several countries, " a press statement said.

Lulu Hypermarket chain, a major retailer in the region, has started a massive campaign named “Your Health is in Your Hands” through all its stores aiming to promote awareness on hand hygiene among its customers, employees, vendors and partners.

The initiative has been launched in the light of the fact that the risk factors for the increased infection and transmission of diseases are mainly associated with hand hygiene, said steps have been implemented to ensure that all shared surfaces and touch points at hypermarkets such as shopping trolley handles, baskets, handrails of the elevators and lifts, and all touch points at the checkouts are cleaned thoroughly on a continuous basis.

Lulu Hypermarket chain has also implemented a strict hand hygiene protocol in all areas, especially sections such as the butcher’s, fish counter, hot kitchen and bakery where there is a mix of raw and cooked food items are handled.

Quoting the World Health Or- ganisation, Fouad Al Ali, chief hygiene officer of Lulu Hypermarket said: "Hygienic habit of adopting personal hygiene such as washing hands the right way, covering the mouth with a tissue when coughing, covering the nose with a handkerchief when sneezing, and washing hands with soap and water could help a person prevent himself effectively from the infection of a wide variety of germs that cause infections like flu, E coli, norovirus and Covid-19 outbreak, and with an awareness of cost responsibility towards the government of Qatar and the general public in Qatar remains low, our primary concern remains the health and safety following the recent developments on the spread of Covid-19 outbreak in several countries, " a press statement said.

Kahramaa signs agreement with Oracle for management systems

The Qatar General Electricity and Water Corporation (Kahramaa) signed an agreement with Oracle Corporation to implement Customer Relationship and Billing Management System aimed at providing a unified and comprehensive business system to enrich customer services and maximize profit.

Kahramaa president engineer Esa bin Ahmed Al-Kuwari, first Vice President of Kahramaa and the head office in the presence of other senior officials of the two organizations.

The agreement will provide Kahramaa with a unique experience throughout the customer’s journey with Kahramaa, starting from registration until the issuance of the bill and collection of payments.

At least 75% of business process will be carried out through Kahramaa’s website, application for customers, and mobile app, new initiatives to provide self-service at the highest quality standards — it amplifies and culminates procedures in accordance with international best practices.

Kahramaa enters at the forefront of using the latest digital standards and regulations. The system also reflects a unique development of smart services that represents a fundamental change in the concept of service provision through the inclusion of dynamic programmes and applications, automatic routing tools, and data analytics to assure responsive and proactive services.

The system will also provide Kahramaa with the latest applications at the call centre and emergency offices that show taking advantage of the capabilities of artificial intelligence, including the “Mobile Workforce Management”.

The new billing system provides an integrated development of the bill issuance process, ensuring smooth processes through smart applications that use advanced technologies and programmes to reduce human interventions in a way that guarantees regular billing at the highest standards of accuracy and supports the financial sustainability of Kahramaa.

The project will improve data accuracy and integrity, as well as protect sensitive information and ensure the security and reliability of the billing system, and the total cost of the system will be divided between the Technical & Information Technology department and will be completed within 2 months.

QNL’s manuscripts collection advances historical research on Islamic traditions

Qatar National Library’s (QNL) China and Southeast Asia Manuscripts Collection is an excellent example of advancing historical research on Islamic traditions, according to Amina Abdul Aziz Khatun, Deputy Head of Research and Development at the Library.

With around 500 volumes, mostly Qur’anic manuscripts, the collection is one of the largest of its kind in the region. The earliest manuscript dates to the 20th century, with most produced in the 19th and 20th centuries. The manuscripts cover a global religion. If they have given many clues to the development of Islamic art, which has spilled over from China not only to the other regions of Islam during the Mamluk and Ottoman periods, but also to the West, according to QNL’s mission to preserve, study and make accessible items of historical and cultural importance to the overall Islamic tradition.

Islamic styles of calligraphy, illuminated books and buildings were combined with local styles, symbols and aesthetics across Asia. The influence of local art and culture is profoundly evident in these manuscripts, which range from the 9th to 19th centuries in China, particularly in their adaptation of elements of Chinese art.

Khatun added: “QNL’s manuscripts collection is one of the largest of its kind in the region and is of great importance to the study of Islamic traditions in these regions and contributions to the overall Islamic tradition. The Library’s influence around the world is incredible. Without religious literature, there is a lack of information on the art.”

QRCS and UNDP open sustainable development projects in Nepal

The Ministry of Municipality and Co-operatives and UNDP have launched the project in the middle sector clinics at selected areas in the country. The first phase includes three mobile clinics that serve the areas on the outskirts, located away from the central region with a high density of livestock. The aim is to enhance veterinary services at such areas, which include Al Medagangoda-Labe and Al-Hail said he was happy to perform the project, meet the beneficiaries and their families.

“Under Kuwait’s Low Energy House scheme, we have designed and constructed a house that uses state-of-the-art air-conditioning and heating systems. The house is built to the highest standards of sustainability, affordability and quality, and benefits from the design and construction of Kuwait’s first Low Energy House. The house has been designed and constructed to use solar energy, which is a steppingstone for many similar projects that benefit from the design and construction of Kuwait’s first Low Energy House.

Qatar Charity distributes winter aid to 639 families in Gaza

Qatar Charity (QC), through its office in the Gaza Strip, has distributed blankets and nylon roof covers to 639 poor families from all over Gaza, in cooperation with the Ministry of Social Development.

Some 523 families were recommended by the ministry, while other beneficiaries are those families sponsored by Qatar Charity as part of the social welfare program in Gaza. Each poor family received a winter blanket and 120 square meters of waterproof nylon roof covers.

The aid was distributed through the Ministry of Social Development directly under the supervision of Qatar Charity’s staff.

As the people of the Gaza Strip were in the urgent need for blankets and waterproof nylon roof covers due to the rainwater, Qatar Charity came to implement this project, said Mr. Mohammed Abu Haloub, director of Qatar Charity’s office in the Gaza Strip.

As poor families living under the deteriorating economic situation in the Gaza Strip are not capable of meeting their basic and winter needs, Qatar Charity came to deliver this winter assistance to them, aiming to protect them from the harsh cold and their homes from the rainwater, added Abu Haloub.

The beneficiaries expressed their delight at obtaining these blankets and waterproof roof covers, which would protect their children from the cold, as they said, hoping that Qatar Charity would continuously support them and families in need.

The houses of poor families in the Gaza Strip are either old or zinc-roofed, and require maintenance. The rainwater flows into these houses, bringing additional suffering to the poor during the harsh cold.

The family of Mrs. Amal is one of those families, who have been struggling to evacuate the rainwater pouring into their home every winter. She has been suffering this problem for more than 20 years when she got married and came to live in this dilapidated house.

Mrs. Amal can not sleep properly under a perforated tin roof, due to the fear of water leakage into her mattress and the beds of her children. The suffering repeats itself every winter.

She along with other beneficiaries thanked the people in Qatar for offering services and delivering assistance to the families living under the high poverty and unemployment rates in the Gaza Strip. She expressed her hope for a safe house that would protect her and her family from the rainwater and cold weather.
Ooredoo has announced a collaboration with Qatar University to develop a new undergraduate degree program in financial services and industry. The program, to be launched in the academic year 2020-2021, will provide students with the knowledge and skills required to succeed in the fast-paced and dynamic financial services industry, and will be offered in collaboration with the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, in cooperation with the Qatar Financial Advisory and Discount Brokers (QFAD). Students will have the opportunity to gain hands-on experience through internships and work placements at leading financial institutions in Qatar. The program will be conducted in a partnership between Qatar University and the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, and will be open to both Qatari and international students. The program will cover topics such as banking, finance, accounting, and risk management, and will provide students with the necessary skills to pursue careers in the financial services industry. The program will be offered in a flexible format, with options for part-time and full-time study, and will be conducted in both Arabic and English languages. The program will be recognized by the Ministry of Education and will be offered at the College of Business and Economics at Qatar University.

Spain to toughen rape penalties after 'Wolf Pack' case

AFP

Tens of thousands of police and protesters have taken to the streets in Madrid, Spain to protest against the recent acquittal of five men in a sexual abuse case. The protest was sparked by the acquittal of five men accused of raping a young woman in 2016 in the northern city of Logroño, causing widespread outrage.

Rising extremism in German military

The German military has asked for additional staff members to handle the increasing number of extremist incidents, according to a report by the anti-extremism agency Die Gegen-Aktion (DAG). Of the 80,000 service members, four in ten were identified as potential extremists within the past year, and 20% were found to have been involved in extremist activities.

Rajasthan launches health map for women and children

Jhalawar, Rajasthan

Rajasthan launches health map for women and children

The three female health workers make their way through the winding lanes of a remote village in Jhalawar district, their feet firmly planted on the ground, their eyes scanning the landscape for any signs of malnutrition or illness. The path they tread is strewn with cracks, rocks, and uneven terrain, but they move with purpose, their mission critical.

Their task is to identify and notify health workers of malnourished children, who are at risk of malnutrition. They are part of a team of 12, each responsible for covering a different village in their district, and their efforts are part of a larger initiative to improve the health outcomes of the state's population.

The team's work is made easier by the Rajasthan health map, a digital tool that uses satellite imagery and data to identify areas of concern. The map is updated regularly, and the team uses it to locate areas with high rates of malnutrition, child deaths, and other health issues.

"In one glance, we can see the extent of the problem," said one of the health workers. "This map is our guide, and it helps us to save lives.

The initiative is part of a larger effort to improve health outcomes in Rajasthan, where child deaths and malnutrition are major challenges. The state government has launched several programs to tackle these issues, including the Integrated Child Development Services (ICDS), which provides nutrition and other services to children.

"We are making steady progress," said the state health minister. "But there is still work to be done, and we are committed to improving health outcomes for all.

As the team continues their work, they are heartened by the progress they have made so far. "It's not easy," said one of the health workers. "But we are making a difference, and that's what matters."
Indigenous kids ‘dying due to malnutrition’ in Argentina

In Argentina’s far northern province of Jujuy, a child was found dead on March 2 in a remote area, just 1,200 kilometres from the provincial capital, according to local media.

A medical team, who found the child’s body at dawn, said she died of malnutrition and dehydration.

The child’s death comes amid an ongoing crisis of malnutrition in the region, where many children are facing food shortages and lack of access to clean water.

A community health worker said that the child’s death was not an isolated case, and that there have been similar incidents in recent weeks.

Pakistan confirms fifth Covid-19 case

A country has now reported a new case of the deadly virus, bringing the total to five.

The woman, a 26-year-old mother, is in a stable condition and has been isolated at a hospital in Islamabad.

Pakistan has now confirmed five cases of the novel coronavirus, with four of them being linked to a health worker who attended a religious gathering in Lahore.

The fifth case involves a woman who recently returned from Iran and tested positive for the virus.

The country's health minister said they were working closely with the World Health Organization (WHO) and taking all necessary precautions to prevent the spread of the disease.

Pakistan has placed strict restrictions on travel from Iran and has closed its border with Afghanistan.

The government has also advised people to avoid large gatherings and to practice social distancing.

Meanwhile, the WHO has warned that the virus is spreading rapidly and that authorities need to act quickly to prevent its spread.

Pakistan has so far recorded 41 cases of the virus, with 36 of them being imported from abroad.

The health ministry has launched a campaign to educate the public about the symptoms and prevention of the virus.

A number of schools, universities, and workplaces have been closed in the country to prevent the spread of the virus.

The government has also urged people to stay home unless necessary and to wear masks in public.

The country's health minister said they were working closely with the WHO and other international organizations to combat the disease.
Odds stacked up against global oil demand growth

As members of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (Opec) and their allies (Opec+) are just days away from a crucial meeting to decide on the future of their latest round of output cuts, odds are all stacked up against global oil demand growth.

The current outlook is making rolling markets crude to copper. Goldman Sachs Group said the world is facing the biggest commodity crisis since the global financial crisis.

As central banks around the world try to calm a market panic, the Paris-based Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Oecd) has warned of possible global growth contraction this quarter. It cut its full-year growth to just 2.4% from 2.9%, which would be the weakest since 2009.

For only the fourth time in almost 40 years, oil consumption may not grow at all in 2020, according to a growing minority of traders, investors and analysts.

For Opec, it’s a nightmare scenario likely to force the group into deep output cuts.

No matter how much cash Beijing pumps into the system, it will be impossible to fix something that’s broken. China had spent most of 2019 boosting demand to support its economy, and the losses are now likely to infect the global economy. Goldman Sachs analysts said the new coronavirus represents an all-out war against global oil consumption, putting an end to the oil bulls’ ten-year rally.

Since 1984, oil demand has grown every year barring three occasions: 2008 and 2009, during the global financial crisis, and in 1999 as the US recovered from recession.

Commodity traders and oil companies have updated their internal forecasts since then, with some cutting 2020 demand growth to a range of 200,000 to 700,000 barrels a day to reflect the impact of the virus.

The US administration has backed the European project, the virus has tripped on the side of any return to some type of normalization.

In Europe, that means building up cooperation, not competition. It needs to develop actual power and influence, not just talk. It needs to address growing challenges from China, the Middle East, North Africa and more.

In Washington, meanwhile, it’s high time to address the negative attitude towards allies and the US. The US needs to lead again, bringing together the European Union, North American and Asian allies in a common strategy and, above all, the US needs to deal constructively with China’s initiatives.

That’s what alliances are all about - no capacity for collective action to advance common interests. And collective action is what’s needed more than ever - 21st-century statesmanship.

By Ivo Daalder

President Emmanuel Macron agreed: “The West is winning. We are collectively winning. We are doing it together.”

President Donald Trump, a day earlier, had sharply challenged the Opec+ producers, saying that they were “clueless” and “the price’s not going up.”

US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo sharply disagreed. “I can happily report to you that the alliance is greatly encouraged,” he told the oil ministers.

The US was not the only one laying the groundwork to discuss whether to extend their current production cuts of 230,000 barrels per day in March.

US President Donald Trump has repeatedly accused Opec of rigging the market for oil and suggested, were becoming less western.

The virus is a game-changer for Opec and its allies. Opec+ is in no position to extend their cuts to 1.8 million barrels per day, the amount they agreed to implement when they first formed the alliance in 2019.

The US administration has backed the European project, the virus has tripped on the side of any return to some type of normalization.

Global effort will be required to control Covid-19

...the weather is so notorious that controlling it is impossible. The best we can do is to prepare for extreme events, such as floods, and take measures to mitigate them. For example, we have implemented measures to reduce the risk of severe floods, such as building levees and improving drainage systems.

Later this year she will unveil plans to transform a vast, unused bridge into a park. She says: “I’m very passionate about this project. It will enable people to experience nature and have fun while promoting a healthier lifestyle.”

She adds: “The bridge is not just a connection between two parts of the city, but also a symbol of unity and inclusivity. We want it to become a place where people can come together and enjoy the beauty of nature.”

Women wearing protective masks cross a street in the Iranian capital Tehran.

The solution lies largely in HPV vaccination and regular screening.

Women are at higher risk of developing cervical cancer if they are not vaccinated against HPV. Unvaccinated women are at risk of developing cervical cancer, which can lead to serious health problems such as pelvic inflammatory disease, infertility, and even death.

To minimize the risk of cervical cancer, women are advised to get vaccinated before they become sexually active. HPV vaccines are available for girls aged 9 to 19 years.

She says: “I’m always thinking about how to improve the health of Thai people. It’s a never-ending journey, but I’m determined to keep moving forward.”

Thailand has made significant progress in recent years, but there is still much work to be done. We need to continue to invest in public health, and we must work together to ensure that everyone has access to the care they need.

The data analyzed in the study included information from 38 previous studies, which had different sampling methods and did not always measure the same outcomes.

The included studies also were not randomized, which means that the results may not be representative of the general population.

The authors suggest that future research should focus on developing more effective interventions to control the spread of Covid-19.
