Qatar past the peak but rise in Covid cases among nationals, expatriate professionals

T he country is past the peak of Covid-19 transmission but there has been an increase in the case among Qatar nationals as well as expatriate professionals. Also, non-compliance with the current restrictions or even multiple positive cases within families and contacts.

Le Châtelet in Arras and Le Dabistan at the press conference yesterday.

At the same time, he noted that “we are seeing an increase in the number of deaths each week and this is due to people who were infected at the peak of the virus weeks ago”. He also said that “the public health situation continues to stabilize and the period so far can further increase in the coming days, he added.

“Our are now past the virus in Qatar and are seeing the reduced number of new infections come down each week,” Dr Al-Shihab said “the number of people being admitted to hospital each day with Covid-19 is also declining”.

UN official highlights importance of education in the time of pandemic

The global pandemic of Covid-19 and the subsequent lockdowns disrupted the lives of millions of children around the world. The panacea, or at least a temporary solution, came in the form of online education. It ensured that education could not be completely suspended. It also highlighted the need for digital infrastructure and the role of the internet in education.

However, the disruptions caused by the pandemic have also exposed the inequalities in access to education. The crisis has shown that the digital divide is not just a problem for the poor, but also for the well-off. The pandemic has also highlighted the importance of investment in education and the role of governments in ensuring that all children have access to quality education.

The UN has been at the forefront of advocating for the importance of education during the pandemic. The UNICEF, UNESCO, and the World Bank have all emphasized the importance of education in the time of crisis and the need for a comprehensive approach to education.

Education Minister Akio Toyoda's commitment to promoting stylistic freedom and engineering creativity.

At a panel discussion held in Dubai, Dr. Hassan Al-Derham, President of Qatar Academy for Education, highlighted the importance of education during the pandemic. He emphasized the need for a comprehensive approach to education that includes the role of technology, the role of parents, and the role of governments.

"We need to ensure that all children have access to quality education. This is not just about providing access to online classes, but also about ensuring that children have access to the necessary resources for learning. We need to ensure that all children have access to the internet and the necessary technology," he said.

The UNICEF report will assess the impact of Covid-19 on education and highlight the need for a comprehensive approach to education. The report will also emphasize the role of technology in education and the need for a strong partnership between governments, NGOs, and the private sector to ensure that all children have access to quality education.

Palestinian shot dead

Israel police yesterday shot dead an 18-year-old Palestinian youth, and Israeli forces had to use tear gas and live fire to stop an angry crowd from breaking through a roadblock in the occupied West Bank.

The youth was killed and three others were injured when a group of Israeli soldiers began firing tear gas to disperse a crowd of more than 300 Palestinians who were protesting against the Israeli military roadblock in the village of Qabatiya, east of the West Bank city of Jenin.

The Israeli army said the youth was killed by a Palestinian youth who was injured in the shooting.

A Palestinian official said the youth was shot dead by Israeli soldiers after he apparently ran towards them.

The Israeli troops were trying to arrest the youth, who was reportedly carrying a gun, when he ran towards them, the officials said.

Law enforcement officers managed to arrest the youth, but he was later pronounced dead at a hospital.

Palestinian authorities called for a peaceful protest against Israeli violations, and said they would take all necessary measures to ensure the safety of all protesters.

The Israeli army said it was investigating the incident, and that the youth had been carrying a weapon.

The shooting came amid a rising number of clashes between Israeli forces and Palestinians in the West Bank.

The Israeli army said it had used tear gas and live fire to disperse the crowd, but Palestinian officials said the army had fired rubber bullets and tear gas canisters.

The incident has sparked outrage in the Palestinian territories, with many people calling for a peaceful resolution to the ongoing conflict.

Allied Democratic Forces, a notorious armed group condemned the attack, which she said was carried out by members of the ADF—M23 Democratic Forces, a named armed group in Democratic Republic of Congo.

The incident happened as the UN peacekeeping mission in the eastern DR Congo was on alert, as it monitored a recent resurgence of violence in the region. Monday is the country's troubled north. Their patrol was on a routine mission in the town of Beni in North Kivu Province, Syria. A soldier from another uniformed peacekeeping force from the M23 Democratic Forces, a named armed group in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

A civilian and one of the five people killed in the attack was also killed in a similar attack in the same region in March. Thegrunt forces are considered to be a prime target of the UN peacekeepers in the region. The UN has been working to stabilize the region, which has been plagued by violence for decades. The region has been a battleground for numerous armed groups, including the ADF—M23 Democratic Forces, a named armed group in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

The incident highlights the ongoing challenges faced by the United Nations peacekeeping mission in the Democratic Republic of Congo. The country has been beset by numerous conflicts since the fall of dictator Joseph Kabila in 2018, and the UN peacekeepers have been struggling to establish a credible presence in the region. The incident also raises questions about the effectiveness of the UN's peacekeeping mission in the region, and whether it is able to protect civilians from violence.

China launches final satellite to complete rival to GPS

Beijing testing its new global navigation system at the polls could be a coup for the country's rising tech industry

China has launched the final satellite needed to complete its own GPS-like system

The launch of this final satellite was the latest in a series of events marking China's rising confidence as a global player in technology, a move that could potentially challenge the US's dominance in the field.

The new system, which is called Beidou and is designed to rival GPS, will be used for a range of applications, including navigation, communication, and even military purposes. It is expected to improve the accuracy and reliability of China's navigation system, making it more competitive with GPS.

The launch comes as China continues to assert its influence in the region, particularly in the South China Sea, and as tensions rise between China and the US. The new system could potentially be used for military purposes, such as tracking and targeting enemy ships and aircraft.

The launch also marks the end of a long and difficult process. The Chinese government has been working on the Beidou system for over two decades, and the launch of the final satellite is a major milestone in the project.

The launch is also significant because it shows China's growing confidence in its ability to compete on a global stage. As the world's second-largest economy, China has been working hard to establish itself as a major player in the global economy, and the launch of the Beidou system is a clear sign of its growing confidence.

The launch of the final satellite is also a sign of China's increasing importance in the region. Covid-19 vaccine may not work for at-risk older people, say scientists

The British government has announced that people over the age of 75 will be the first to receive the Pfizer-BioNTech Covid-19 vaccine, with over-50s set to follow. However, experts have warned that the vaccine may not work as effectively in older people.

Scientists have warned that the vaccine may not work as effectively in older people, with the vaccine's efficacy in preventing illness and death in this age group yet to be determined. The government has also advised that people over the age of 75 should receive a second vaccine dose to increase their protection.

The government has also announced that people who are immunocompromised will be offered a reduced-dose vaccine, and that people who have had a severe reaction to the vaccine will not be offered a second dose.

British and EU negotiators are reportedly closing in on a trading协议，with both sides reportedly closing in on a deal. The talks are set to continue over the weekend, with the aim of finalising the agreement by the end of March. Negotiators are said to be close to reaching an agreement on key issues such as trade in goods and services, competition rules, and regulatory cooperation. However, there remain significant sticking points on issues such as fishing rights and the Northern Ireland protocol. The UK has made clear that it will not accept a protocol that would allow the EU to regulate the Irish Sea and has threatened to suspend parts of the agreement if sufficient progress is not made. The European Union has also been firm in its stance, insisting on the implementation of the protocol as agreed. The prospect of a no-deal Brexit remains a concern for both the UK and the EU, with businesses and citizens preparing for the possibility of increased red tape, tariffs, and reduced trade flows. The talks are expected to continue this week, with both sides looking to bridge the remaining gaps and secure a mutually beneficial agreement.
French cops face scrutiny after chokhold death

By Eleonore Hughes and Joseph Schmid, AFP

French police officers have faced scrutiny after footage emerged that showed a police officer using a chokehold on a man during an arrest.

The footage, which was recorded during an arrest in Paris last year, shows a police officer applying a chokehold on a man who is pinned down by several officers.

The police officer, who is identified as Olivier Chouviat, was arrested last January and died in police custody in 2016.

The French police watchdog said the officer had violated the law and had faced disciplinary action.

India, Pakistan, both on the way to reduced tensions after border standoff

India and China agree to reduce tensions after border standoff

India and China said on Wednesday they had agreed to reduce tensions along their disputed Himalayan border following last month’s deadly clash, as the foreign ministers of both countries met in Moscow.

The meeting came ahead of a scheduled visit by Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi to China next month. The Chinese foreign ministry said in a statement.

The meeting took place after a virtual meeting between the foreign ministers of India, China and Russia, ostensibly to discuss the stand-off in Ladakh, the Chinese foreign ministry said.

In India, the increase in tensions follows a tit-for-tat expulsions of diplomats engaged in acts of espionage and bilateral agreements to cut staff at missions.

The dispute has been escalating since May, when India accused China of acting unilaterally to violate Indian territory in Ladakh.

India’s action came in response to a similar move from China, where authorities have been arresting Indian border guards.

The Chinese side has accused India of violating territorial integrity and sovereignty.

India’s defence minister said the country would not cede any territory.

The situation has been described as critical, with both sides engaging in acts of provocation.

In a statement, India’s foreign ministry said it had taken “decisive action” to tackle the situation.

Quake rattles Mexico

Brazil losing a generation of indigenous leaders to virus

A fraud was last Friday when 15 people were killed in an attack on a Mexican village. The attack appears to be the work of criminal groups and is the latest in a series of violent incidents in the region. The government has vowed to take swift action to bring the perpetrators to justice.

Brazil president told to wear mask by court

A judge in Brazil ordered President Jair Bolsonaro to wear a mask in public. The judge ruled that the president’s non-compliance with the order was "irresponsible and a clear violation of the constitutional right to health". The president has previously resisted wearing masks and has been criticized for his handling of the pandemic.

Venezuela

Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro has been "prepared" to talk to US称赞总统, White House, on the condition that he is able to secure a meeting with opposition leader Juan Guaido. The move comes as tensions between the two countries rise.

Mexico

Two indigenous leaders were killed in an attack on a Mexican village. The attack appears to be the work of criminal groups and is the latest in a series of violent incidents in the region. The government has vowed to take swift action to bring the perpetrators to justice.

The government’s indigenous policy has faced criticism from indigenous groups, who have long complained of neglect and discrimination. The government has promised to address these issues, but many indigenous leaders remain skeptical.

What next?

The government has said it will take action against the perpetrators of the attack. However, some indigenous leaders have called for more concrete measures to protect indigenous communities.

The attack highlights the ongoing conflict between the government and indigenous communities. The government has been accused of neglecting the needs of indigenous peoples and failing to protect their rights.

A defining moment

The attack is just the latest in a series of violent incidents that have rocked the region in recent years. The government has been criticized for its handling of the situation, and many indigenous leaders have called for action.

The attack has sparked widespread outrage among indigenous communities. The government has promised to take action, but many indigenous leaders remain skeptical of its commitment to protecting their rights.

The Philippines' recent day reported more than 1,100 new coronavirus infections, the highest number of cases reported within a day, bringing the national tally to nearly 73,000, health authorities said Wednesday.

Health Undersecretary Dr. Maria Rosario Vergeire said the past 100 days of restrictions have given the country “enough time” to prepare and expand its health capacity.

The Inter-Agency Task Force for the Management of Emerging Infectious Diseases (IATF-MEID) was starting relaxed flight restrictions on May 16.

In a briefing, Palace spokesman Harry Roque explained the measures that the country has been taking to support its aviation projects.

"In the coming days, Customs and the Department of Health will be releasing a list of quarantine rules that are to be implemented in the Philippines," Roque said.

"This afternoon, the IATF-MEID meeting will continue, they will present data on what we can do using our decision on whether we will open our country to foreign tourists," Roque added.

He refused to identify the countries that the officials, when discussing the list of potential countries that will be allowed to travel to the Philippines, will apply the same travel restrictions, and not just to one nationality.

"If there are not enough buses and modernized jeeps, we will allow jeeps and UV Express and even tricycles," Roque said.

"Maisonneuve, Felix said. The Department of Health said it was preserving the ability to operate the country's existing public transportation system, but was looking for ways to reduce the number of people on board.

"Of course, if you allow operators to have enough to run, there will be no tipping over," Felix said.

The death of George Floyd, Trump unmasked and humiliated. Black man, at the hands of – or, at least, aided and abetted by – police officers in Minneapolis triggered massive protests across the globe, as a new anti-racism consciousness and police brutality – it also sparked a growing number of people outside the US to contest the legacy of racism and inequality in their own countries. Donald Trump’s administration, however, is doing no such thing. Instead, the Trump administration has confiscated – even isolated – the forces that some institutions in favor of a militant populism. Its ultimate goal seems to uncreate a fully fledged democratic hegemony.

No one is more astonished by this drama than William Barr, Trump’s current attorney general. Barr isn’t just a Trump crony; he’s the epitome of the former Soviet Union’s main ideas: far-left extremist demonstrators, whom he calls “thugs.” Unlike Stalin, he has the right to gut the apparatus of the state’s fear of civil insurrection. Barr, by contrast, is a determined “general” in his job title – replete with the words of Rudi Dutschke, the 1960s German radical leader who studied Gramsci’s work – required to make that claim true. This has meant, for example, abandoning Special Counsel Robert Mueller’s investigation into Trump’s presidency, dismissing as ever the notion of executive privilege, and even Gramsci would be stunned by the impunity Barr has been granted. And, under Trump, he has been doing nothing but expel executive privilege.

Fighting the elements, not the enemy, on India’s China border

The announcement of Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s planned state visit to China, however, provides a timely opportunity for both nations to reflect on the nature of their relationship and the issues that continue to shape their interactions.

As relations between India and China have evolved over the years, both countries have experiences of coexistence but also clashes. The most recent and most notable conflict occurred in 1962, when Indian forces sustained losses against Chinese troops in the Sino-Indian War. Since then, efforts have been made to prevent any future escalations and ensure peace on the border.

India and China share a 3,500-kilometer-long border that runs through the Himalayan range, with over 12 strategic points. The border issues include the Line of Actual Control (LAC), which is neither a legal nor an internationally recognized boundary, but a de facto line that divides the two countries.

In December 2020, both India and China agreed to disengage at five strategic points on their border in Ladakh region, an area that has seen military tensions in recent years. The disengagement followed several months of standoffs and were reached through extensive talks and negotiations.

However, despite the disengagement agreement, both countries remain cautious about the possibility of another face-off, given the long history of border disputes and the potential for further escalation in sensitive areas such as the Indo-China border.

What we’re seeing: The current situation in the border region has raised concerns among both countries. The stakes are high as both nations have significant stakes in the area, with strategic and economic interests at play.

What we’re hearing: There have been reports of increased militarization and deployment of troops in the region, leading to heightened tensions. Both countries have been accused of building up their military presence, which has further fueled concerns.

What we’re thinking: It is crucial for both India and China to maintain open lines of communication to prevent any further escalation of tensions. A peaceful resolution through negotiations and dialogue is essential to avoid any further bloodshed.

India and China have a shared interest in maintaining stability in the region to ensure peace and prosperity for their citizens. Both countries need to work together to address the root causes of the border disputes and move towards a more stable and secure future.
