MoPH reports 36,036 total Covid-19 recoveries

T he Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) yesterday announced the registration of a new wave of Covid-19 recoveries, bringing the total number of people recovered in Qatar to 36,036.

The ministry also announced three deaths due to the virus.

The four main testing centres of the MoPH reported 117 new cases of infection among groups of workers in different regions. The new cases have been identified after investigations by the relevant authorities, taking into account the instructions and recommendations of the MoPH that contributed to controlling the spread.

Cases of infection have also increased among citizens and residents as a result of contact with infected family members who had been infected in the workplace or during visits and gatherings.

The MoPH emphasised that the newly recorded cases are due to the application of the latest international recommendations regarding criteria for recovery from Covid-19 infection, approved by the MoPH.

Over the last 24 hours, the ministry recorded three deaths due to the virus. All the deceased were people in their 60s, who were receiving medical care in intensive care units. The number of those receiving care due to the virus is continuing to rise in Qatar, but Qatar continues to maintain the intensive care capacity of all hospitals and healthcare facilities in the country, ensuring that the safety of all patients and the Ministry of Public Health team members is not compromised.

Ministry of Health

The ministry said the new confirmed cases of infection have been isolated at various Madayn centres in the country, where they receive the necessary medical care depending on the severity of their disease.

The MoPH said that in light of the recent increase in the number of infections, it is important to continue with precautions and social distancing and continue to cooperate with the search and investigation teams and the families of the deceased.

The MoPH also encouraged anyone who has symptoms of Covid-19 to either quickly contact the 16000 helpline or go directly to one of the designated health centres for testing. This is important as the earlier the disease is detected, the easier it will be to receive the right treatment and recover from it.

The MoPH also called on the public to wear a mask properly and to maintain a safe distance as a precautionary measure.

Croc's, a world leader in innovative casual footwear, has donated shoes to healthcare workers at Hamad Hospital who are on the frontline of the pandemic.

"As a brand in casual footwear, our goal has always been to keep people comfortable in their daily lives and now, in the face of adversity, there are situations where comfort doesn’t mean too much to them. That’s where Crocs steps in, to help those who selflessly serve humanity through the touch of a shoe," said Crocs' representative.

The donation is part of an ongoing initiative where Crocs makes shoes available to healthcare professionals across the world, ensuring they have comfortable footwear to perform their daily duties.

"It’s not only a gesture for the healthcare workers, but also a symbol of hope for the community," the representative added.

The donation was made as a part of the Crocs for Healthcare campaign, which aims to support healthcare workers around the world in their fight against the pandemic.

"We appreciate the efforts of healthcare workers and are happy to contribute to their cause," said Crocs' spokesperson.

The donation is part of Crocs' commitment to support essential services during the pandemic and ensure that healthcare workers have the necessary resources to continue their work safely.

"Crocs is happy to contribute to the health and comfort of those on the frontlines," the spokesperson concluded.

The Ministry of Interior has launched a new online portal to register the personal information of all migrant workers in Qatar, as part of its efforts to streamline the process of issuing work permits and facilitating the entry and exit of workers.

"This portal will help us to better manage the entry and exit of workers, and ensure that they have the necessary documentation and visas," said the Minister of Interior.

"We are committed to ensuring a safe and secure environment for all workers, and this portal will help us to achieve that goal," the Minister added.

The portal can be accessed through the Ministry of Interior's website, and will allow workers to register their personal information, upload supporting documents, and apply for work permits online.

"This will help to ensure that workers have the necessary documentation and visas, and are able to work in Qatar safely and legally," the Minister of Interior said.

"It will also help us to ensure that workers are paid fairly and on time, and that they have access to essential services and facilities," the Minister added.

The Ministry of Interior has also launched a new hotline number to assist workers in case of any issues or problems, and to provide them with information and guidance.

Yemen donor summit raises half of required $2.4bn: UN

The UN yesterday raised only around half the required $2.4bn humanitarian aid pledged at a donor summit conference hosted by Saudi Arabia in the sixth year of its military intervention.

“Yemen is still in crisis at this time,” said Najib Ghallab, undersecretary at Yemen’s foreign ministry.

“Aid agencies estimate they will need around $2.4bn this fiscal year,” said Mr Ghallab, a key member of the government delegation.

“Yemen was able to hold the summit in Riyadh,” he said. “It reflects the failures and shortcomings of previous leaders.”

Yesterday, over 150 representatives from countries, UN agencies, and international organisations gathered in Riyadh to discuss Yemen’s humanitarian and development needs.

The summit aimed to raise $2.4bn for Yemen over the next fiscal year, which starts in June.

Mr Ghallab called for “a clear and decisive action”.

The conflict between Yemen’s government forces and the Houthi rebels in the country’s north has been ongoing since 2015.

The Houthis control most of Yemen, while the Yemeni government has control over parts of the country.

Mr Ghallab said the Saudi-led coalition, which includes the United Arab Emirates, had agreed at the Berlin conference to “end the blockade”.

Yemen is already gripped by the worst humanitarian crisis, with aid agencies estimating that four million people displaced.

The Saudi-led coalition, which includes the United Arab Emirates, has been accused of violating international law.

Mr Ghallab said the coalition had “failed to meet its objectives”.

A US police officer was on trial this week accused of killing a black man, sparking protests in Australia that saw angry rallies held outside the foreign minister's office and Parliament, as well as protests by Chinese and Hong Kong officials who accused Australia of interfering in the Chinese territory.

The trial is part of a black man who was killed by a police officer in Minneapolis, Minnesota, last May. The killing sparked widespread protests and led to the resignation of the Minneapolis police chief and the firing of the police officer involved.

The trial is being held in a court in Minneapolis, and is expected to last for several weeks. It is being watched closely by protesters across the world, who are calling for justice for George Floyd.

The trial is also being watched closely by Chinese officials, who have accused Australia of interfering in the Chinese territory. China has threatened to take action if Australia continues to interfere in the Chinese territory.

BRITAIN

C oronavirus infections in elderly care homes are spilling into the concern. If the pattern continues, the breakthrough point to the point that cases will start to be out of control in all care homes and hospitals nationwide. The head of the government’s scientific advisory group on epidemics has warned that wider restrictions are needed to contain the spread of infection by about 60%. “Hancock. Dido Harding, who was named to领导 the task force to bring infection rate down, said: “This is a key step in protecting the health of older people, and will help to prevent the spread of infection.”

The latest data shows that the number of cases in care homes and hospitals is continuing to rise, with the government blaming theincrease on the rapid spread of the Delta variant. The government has been criticised for not introducing tougher measures earlier to prevent the spread of the virus.

The government has been under pressure to introduce measures to prevent the spread of the Delta variant, which has been identified as the primary cause of the rise in cases. Labour abuse calls to helpline rise: charity

Labour is being accused of using the coronavirus crisis to secure a power grab over the redrawing of UK parliamentary boundaries.

The all-London MP laser was accused of “automatically becoming law”.

The Cabinet Office has announced that this would no longer be the case.

It would, the Cabinet Office said, provide certainty that the decision of the independent boundary commission, developed through rigorous scrutiny and impartial process that is non-political, and expertly conducted, could not be amended without interference.

The implications of this change to how time-consuming and complex future boundary adjustments would be.

Labour has previously accused the government of weakening the power of parliament.

Under previous plans, the boundary commissions would have been elected and Northern Ireland making up to five of them.

The parliamentary boundaries, including for London, were set up in accordance with the Government of the People Act.

The initial plan had been for borders to be redrawn within 10 years of the 2010 general election, but the scheme had been abandoned amid complaints from Conservative MPs whose seats would have vanished.

The revised plan will keep the 650-seat total, but there still could be considerable changes, with about 10% of the current seats now likely to be redrawn.

He and the Government were able to avoid the chaos caused by members of parliament having to vote electronically, and many MPs might not have been registered.

The parliamentary boundaries, including for London, were set up in accordance with the Government of the People Act.

The initial plan had been for borders to be redrawn within 10 years of the 2010 general election, but the scheme had been abandoned amid complaints from Conservative MPs whose seats would have vanished.

The revised plan will keep the 650-seat total, but there still could be considerable changes, with about 10% of the current seats now likely to be redrawn.

Paris police chief defends force on ‘racism claims’

By MARCELINE LE ROUX, AFP

PARIS

The police chief of Paris, under fire, has defended his forces against accusations of brutality and racism as angry over alleged police violence mounted in France on the United States.

Following a string of complaints of alleged police brutality, interior minister Christophe Castaner said on Tuesday that the “parole” officers must be “taught to handle with politeness and respect, even in the face of violence and insults, repeated endlessly by social networks and certain activist groups.”

The Paris police force “is not violent, nor racist, nor corrupt,” he said when called upon to respond to questions on police violence.

As thousands across the United States took to the streets in the wake of George Floyd’s death on May 25, an unarmed black man who died while in police custody, the “police” officer of the call to Paris to Conflans-sainte-Honorine, near Paris, yesterday also denounced the “unacceptable, systematic questioning of police that Gerlinde Pommer, whose family owned the house originally, entitled to some 810,000 euros in compensation.

Hitler birthplace to be ‘neutralised with redesigning’

Austrian officials yesterday unveiled a plan to redesign the birthhouse of a dictator whose legacy continues to cast a shadow over European history. The government expects the work to be completed by early 2021.

Since then, the building has lain empty. The interior ministry says it intends to put it to use as a museum and a venue for cultural events. But critics have also denounced the decision as an attempt to whitewash events of the past.

Ministry officials of the building, which was owned by the Pommer family, ran into angry resistance from politicians and members of the public when they tried to remove it last year. The house where Hitler was born in 1889, was taken into government ownership by Austria in 1989. It is to be handed over to an Austrian architecture firm Marte.

20 Peru journalists ‘have died of Covid-19 while covering pandemic’

By late January, videos were being shared widely on social media, particularly showing the bodies being thrown on the beach. The authorities, however, said the practice was not of Wuhan but of Indonesia, where the bodies were found on the beach. The fact-checkers revealed that one picture was taken from the beach in Ecuador – showed a body washed ashore with the word ‘Covid’ on it. It was not in Wuhan.

The authorities also investigated the practice of taking the bodies into the sea, but did not order it to stop. The authorities did not order it to stop. El Hajj 2020: Cost will be off ered at 3pm in the elections.

Although the Hajj has traditionally been one of the most significant events in Islam, the costs associated with the pilgrimage have always been high. This year, the cost of El Hajj has been set at Rs. 37,000, which is higher than the cost of last year.

The Prime Minister's media adviser, Fawad Chaudhry, announced the cost for the year 2020.

The government had initially announced the cost for the year 2020 as Rs. 34,000, but after receiving feedback from the Hajj pilgrims, the cost was increased to Rs. 37,000.

The cost includes transportation, accommodation, meals, and other expenses. The government has also made arrangements for medical and security personnel to ensure the safety of the pilgrims.

Philippine exit from key US military pact ‘suspended’

The Philippines has told President Donald Trump that it is "in the light of present circumstances" unlikely to withdraw from the Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA) next month as the United States has demanded, a government official said.

The Philippines' move to suspend the two-decade-old bilateral agreement, which has been a sticking point in US-Philippine military ties, comes after months of diplomatic wrangling between both countries.

"We have to be careful. Do not be complacent. The fight is far from over," one official said, referring to the plan to end the 25-year-old agreement.

"We are not yet the new normal. We have to be very careful. Do not let us make the situation worse in the future," another official said.

The Philippines, led by President Rodrigo Duterte, has been under international pressure to end the VFA and other US military agreements. The agreement, which allows US forces to use Philippine bases, has been a cornerstone of the US-Philippine security relationship.

The Philippines has been reviewing its security agreements with the US, and Duterte has previously threatened to withdraw from the VFA. The Philippines has also been considering other security options, including closer ties with China.

The devastating Israeli-Palestinian conflict for decades has brought down the Palestinian economy to its knees. Newlasses have offered more than $1 billion in humanitarian aid outside to overcome a poor economic outlook and a widening budget deficit. The World Bank has the needed help to avert economic collapse. According to the World Bank.

Israel's prolonged occupation has posed an economic burden, according to the World Bank. Financial support from international donors and the private sector, mainly by foreign donors and the private sector, is needed to recover. The widespread control on the movement of people and goods, destruction of homes, and other assets, and the expansion of Israel's settlement plans have severely constrained the Palestinian economy. Despite the increased financial needs, support for this sector has not been forthcoming.

The prehistory of Merkel’s latest coup

By Heribert Jansen

he prehistory of Merkel’s latest coup can be traced back to the start of the German Confederation, when the Prussian king, Frederick William IV, proclaimed the “Prussian model” in 1815. This model was based on the idea of a strong state, with the king at its center, and a loyal, obedient bureaucracy. It was the blueprint for the modern nation-state, and it has been a cornerstone of German political life ever since.

Merkel has been a master of this model, and her latest coup is no exception. She has used the current crisis to reinforce her position as the unquestioned leader of the German state, and to strengthen the power of the state over the people. She has done this by creating a narrative of national emergency, and by using this narrative to justify her own actions.

Merkel has been able to do this because of her ability to control the narrative. She has been able to frame the current crisis as a national emergency, and to use this framing to justify her own actions. She has been able to do this because of her control over the media, and because of her ability to control the flow of information.

Merkel has also been able to do this because of her control over the state. She has used the state to reinforce her own position, and to strengthen the power of the state over the people. She has done this by creating a narrative of national emergency, and by using this narrative to justify her own actions.

But Merkel’s latest coup is not just about the current crisis. It is also about the future. She is using the current crisis to prepare the way for a new future, one in which the state will have even more power, and in which the people will have even less.

In other words, the current crisis is just a stepping stone to a larger project. It is a test of the strength of the state, and of the ability of the state to control the people. And it is a test of the strength of Merkel, and of her ability to control the state.
