Oman is poised to ease coronavirus restrictions as it marks the end of the holy month of Ramadan, which is observed by Muslims worldwide as a month of fasting. The country's health minister said on Monday that the country had not recorded a new case of the coronavirus for the past three days, marking a significant milestone in the battle against the pandemic. However, a few cases were recorded in the previous days, indicating that the virus is still circulating in the community. Oman has so far recorded more than 20,000 cases of the virus, with more than 2,000 recoveries and 120 deaths. The government has implemented strict measures to contain the spread of the virus, including lockdowns, travel restrictions, and social distancing measures. The lifting of restrictions will allow businesses and educational institutions to reopen and allow citizens to travel abroad for repatriation. Last week, the government announced that it would allow citizens to fly abroad after applying for permission. Meanwhile, the Oman Ministry of Health reported 337 new cases of the virus, bringing the total number of cases to 69,887 in the Sultanate, in addition to 412 deaths, QNA reported.
Uganda’s long-serving President Yoweri Museveni has won a 6th term in office, securing him another decade in power. Museveni, 76, was declared the winner of the 2021 vote, which was held in February, after no one else had shown up to contest him to the presidency. The ruling National Resistance Movement (NRM) nominated him. Museveni has been in power since 1986, after leading a rebel group against the long-serving president of Uganda, Idi Amin. Museveni’s ten-year rule brought peace and stability to the country, but did not end corruption and human rights abuses. Museveni has faced increasing criticism from his own party and opposition.

The 2021 election was hotly contested and the results were disputed. The opposition leader, Bobi Wine, was arrested and held without trial for several weeks. The international community called for a peaceful resolution to the crisis, but tensions remained high. Museveni has faced increasing criticism from the international community for his human rights abuses and corruption. The election was marred by reports of voter intimidation and violence.

The mayor of New York City promised on Monday that New York City would not be the last city to enact a nationwide mandate to wear face coverings in public, even as New York state reopens.

The announcement comes as the city’s largest teachers union, the Service Employees International Union, said it would strike in solidarity with the Black Lives Matter movement and other minority groups which suffer racism.

The strike, which was announced by the Service Employees International Union, is expected to begin on Monday and could last for up to a week, depending on the number of teachers who participate.

The union’s president, Lee Saunders, said the strike was necessary to show solidarity with the Black Lives Matter movement and to support the group’s demands for racial justice.

The strike is expected to be a major test of the city’s ability to manage the spread of COVID-19, as the city has been struggling to contain outbreaks in recent weeks.

The strike is also expected to have a significant impact on the city’s economy, as many businesses and restaurants are already struggling to recover from the pandemic.

China vows ‘forceful counter-row’ in escalating conflict with UK over Hong Kong

HK protesters gather on anniversary of mob attack

Small groups of Hong Kong pro-democracy demonstrators gathered yesterday in memory of the first fatality of this year’s protests, a man who was killed in a mob attack on a train stationchanted slogans in Hong Kong, Yuen Long, and the Yoho mall and Yuen Long train station on August 3, 2019. The attack, which highlighted the city’s deep-seated rifts since Hong Kong returned to Beijing’s rule in 1997, shocked residents around the Yuen Long town and Yuen Long train station, as well as the police. Hong Kong police have arrested about 300 people so far, including 44 foreigners, in the Yuen Long attack and the 2019 protests.

Yesterday’s protest follows imposition of new security laws

Beijing says the law, which was imposed on Hong Kong in June, is needed to prevent secessionists and terrorists from carrying out their plots in the city. The law has sparked widespread criticism in the international community and Hong Kong.

Pascal promises ‘compassionate’ Home Office after Windrush scandal

The parliamentary committee heard that the Home Office had sought to influence the Brexit campaign to leave the EU, using £100,000 of public money to fund a survey to “expose the lies” about immigration. The committee also heard that the Home Office had sought to influence the EU referendum result to leave the EU, rejecting the European Commission’s warnings about the potential consequences of leaving the EU.

In response, the director of the Home Office’s immigration enforcement, Tom Hartley, said: “We are absolutely committed to delivering a fair and compassionate system where people feel safe and secure. This is not just about the Home Office, it’s about our whole society, and that’s why we’re committed to ensuring that we provide the best possible service to all our customers.”

Criminal record checks for taxi drivers tightened

The government has introduced new rules for taxi drivers in London to prevent them from driving if they have a criminal record for certain offenses. The new rules come after a series of high-profile cases where taxi drivers were allowed to continue driving despite having convictions for serious offenses. The new rules will apply to all taxi drivers in London, including minicab drivers, and will be enforced by local authorities and the Transport for London.

London Transport Commissioner Andy Byford said: “We are committed to ensuring that London’s transport system is safe and secure for everyone. These new rules will help us to protect the public and ensure that only safe and trustworthy people are allowed to drive taxis in London.”

ministers have also promised to make more information available to the public about the new rules and how they are being enforced, including through regular updates on the website and social media. They have also promised to work with other parts of the government and the police to ensure that the new rules are effective and widely understood.
Billionaire toughened plans to build iconic Berlin museum with dramatic glass-roofed entrance, officials said yesterday. The foundations for the €200mn project were laid in 2018, but the ambitious development has faced delays due to the ongoing coronavirus pandemic. The museum, due to open in 2025, will house a collection of more than 15,000 works of art, including masterpieces by Van Gogh, Picasso, and Monet. The museum, which is being built on the site of an old train station, will feature a large glass roof, creating a dramatic effect that will allow natural light to flood the interior. The project is expected to attract millions of visitors from around the world each year, cementing Berlin's position as a cultural powerhouse. However, the museum's construction has been plagued by setbacks, including delays due to the pandemic and financing issues. Despite these challenges, officials said they remain committed to completing the project as planned. In a statement, museum director Maria Matisch said: “We are working hard to ensure that the museum opens as soon as possible. We are confident that we will be able to complete the project on schedule.” The museum is expected to become a major tourist attraction, drawing visitors from across the globe to Berlin's vibrant cultural scene. It is expected to be a significant boost to the city's economy, generating millions of euros in revenue each year. The museum is set to open its doors in 2025, marking a significant milestone in Berlin's cultural landscape. Visitors can look forward to a truly world-class museum that will showcase some of the finest art the world has to offer.
No more lockdowns in Karnataka, says CM

K Carmath, Chief Minister of Karnataka, on Tuesday said that there would be no more lockdowns in the state.

"As lockdown is not a solution to defeat Covid-19, there will be no more lockdowns in Karnataka," Vedana, who was addressing a press conference in Bengaluru, said.

Mr. Chamar said that the state had already begun implementing various measures to control the spread of the virus, including the use of mask-wearing, social distancing, and the administration of vaccines.

He also added that the state was working towards improving the health infrastructure and providing better facilities to the people.

Justice Isa’s wife seeks review of top court’s order

Introduction

The Supreme Court of Pakistan has ordered the Federal Board of Revenue (FBR) to hand over possession of 1,535 acres of land to the Sindh Special Economic Zone Authority (SEZA) for the purposes of Article 209 of the constitution. The judgement had been made in response to a writ petition. The petitioner alleged that the tax authorities had failed to comply with the requirement to declare the assets and liabilities of the petitioner’s father and had been proceeding with the tax proceedings on the basis of under-declared returns. The petitioner added that she had neither underdeclared nor underpaid any taxes for the tax year 2018 and had filed a complaint in the Supreme Court. The petitioner was seeking a remedy, including the constitutionality of the tax authorities’ decision to proceed with the tax proceedings.

In the Court

The Supreme Court by issuing the June 30, 2019, order had quashed the reference petition and had ordered the FBR to proceed with the tax proceedings. The petitioner had sought a review of the court’s order and had alleged that the tax authorities had failed to comply with the requirement to declare the assets and liabilities of the petitioner’s father. The petitioner had alleged that she had neither underdeclared nor underpaid any taxes for the tax year 2018 and had filed a complaint in the Supreme Court. The petitioner was seeking a remedy, including the constitutionality of the tax authorities’ decision to proceed with the tax proceedings. The petitioner had alleged that the tax authorities had failed to comply with the requirement to declare the assets and liabilities of the petitioner’s father.

Govt to ramp up virus testing as president warns of arrests

The Philippines and Saudi Arabia have joined forces to repatriate stranded Filipinos, with a flight carrying 694 displaced Filipinos reported to leave for the kingdom during the pandemic, the Philippine Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) said.

In a televised meeting with President Rodrigo Duterte, Palace spokesman Harry Roque Jr. said that the repatriation of these waitlisted passengers, who were vacated by those who decided to return home, was a result of close coordination between the two countries.

“Ladies and gentlemen, the flight, 25 passengers did not show up at the airport. As a result, these seats that were vacated by those who decided to return home, the seats that were vacated by 25 passengers, these seats were turned over to 25 passengers who were waitlisted. These waitlisted passengers are those who have been waitlisted by the chartered flight, was a result of close coordination between the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Manpower, the Ministry of Health, and the Ministry of Labor of the Middle East, which is the embassy of the Philippines in Saudi Arabia,” Roque said.

Roque added that those who were waitlisted were those who decided to stay abroad due to the risk of getting infected with the virus. He said that the flight was delayed due to the number of passengers who were waitlisted.

Meanwhile, the Department of Health (DoH) has given assurances that hospitals were understaffed. The government will continue supporting health workers in the country.

Healthcare staff hiring to get boost

By Reina C Tolentino

The government announced the launching of recruitment activities for healthcare workers and the mounting of a campaign for nurses that will be implemented in the third pillar of Philippine health and wellness. The country’s economy will not be the same due to the pandemic, the Inter-Agency Task Force for the Management of Emerging Infectious Diseases (IATF-EID) said.

“Generally, yes, we have won. As a matter of fact, we will never win. It is a serious crime to violate the lockdown, the law, the rule, the order, and not to wear a mask whilePresident Rodrigo Duterte is expected to sign a bill increasing the tax on high-value targets, “the official added.

China needs export growth to return to a sustainable expansion

The UK economy’s 1.9% expansion in May was much weaker than expected. While a 22.6% gauge of current conditions in Germany was the highest in Europe since May 2017, the evidence for the next six months slipped.

The Bank of Japan warned that the economy remains in an “extremely severe situation.”

Hopes the virus is being brought under control, pushing global cases above the 13.5mn mark.

The outbreak has brought about critical interruptions to basic drinking water service. “The true number is probably far larger. According to UNICEF and the World Health Organization, some 2bn people do not have safely managed drinking water services, and 1bn do not have safely managed sanitation services. Contaminated water and poor sanitation are linked to transmission of diseases – such as cholera, diarrhoea, hepatitis A, typhoid, and polio – that afflict hundreds of millions of people, and nearly 25% of health-care facilities lack basic water services.

This is not a developing-economy problem. In the United States, for example, many people do not have access to basic drinking water and sanitation. When the SDGs were introduced, the United Nations declared the goal – to ensure that every human on the planet has access to safe and adequate drinking water for survival and sanitation by 2015 – was not achieved. The world failed again in 2015, with the last millennium development goal on basic drinking water falling far short of the mark.

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) for clean water and sanitation by 2030, set in 2015, were revised to pick up where the MDGs left off. Again, the target was clean water and proper sanitation for all. The deadline even before that point has passed, and the target in 2030 is far from being met. An estimated 2bn people worldwide lack the facilities to drink water.

What makes the Covid-19 crisis so unique is that water utilities worldwide have had to adapt quickly to sudden surges in demand and service disruptions. As it became clear that the virus could be spread through the air, drinking-water utilities immediately started disinfecting water to kill the virus. The next step was to collect and treat sewage. Samples from 15 sewage outfalls in Tokyo showed that community infections were being anticipated.

The Covid-19 crisis is also changing the way that wastewater treatment plants can be used to assess community spread of the virus. In the United States, for example, wastewater analysis is emerging as an important way to assess community spread of Covid-19 because the virus is shed in the stool, even before symptoms appear. In March, wastewater analysis showed that community cases of Covid-19 in New York were already higher than the number of cases detected by Covid-19 testing.

The bottom line: Policymakers, analysts and investors should take into account the degree of uncertainty now in the global economy in the third quarter. But the uneven Chinese recovery, amid Global growth woes

China, for sure, is a key driver of global growth. Its $14tn-economy accounts for almost a third of global growth each year. But expansion in the world’s second-largest economy has already been stuttering amid an ongoing trade war, even before the Covid-19 pandemic hit. The virus did return to growth in the second quarter amid its relative success in containing the virus, but much of that momentum relied on state-driven industry as consumers remain cautious.

And official data pointed at steady, but uneven, recovery. Gross domestic product expanded 3.2% in the three months to June from a year earlier, reversing a 4.8%-decline in the first quarter and beating the median forecast of 2.4%. Output in the first half was down 1.6% on the same period in 2019. In indicating the mixed revival, industrial output rose 4.8% in June from a year earlier – matching estimates – yet retail sales shrank 1.8%, much weaker than a projected 0.5% increase.

QF’s PUE trained over 1,000 educators from education ministry amid Covid-19 outbreak

By Noor al-Rawi

Qatar Foundation is keen to continue providing the best education possible for its students and support in enabling it to help the Ministry of Education and Higher Education to support teachers training and enable them to use the new learning system in order to continue and improve the quality of education and achieve the vision of the Ministry of Education and Higher Education to improve the quality of learning in all schools across the country.

A. One of our main pillars is to support teachers at any time and place. As you know, all institutions in Qatar have joined forces to ensure this reality and to support one another during the training as that was the platform that the ministry was using for teaching and learning. In 2 weeks, we trained more than 1,000 educators from the ministry.

B. These programmes were provided at a time of urgency to help teachers to enable them to set up virtual classes and prepare for distance learning with the Ministry. There have been more than 250 school directors and a lot of trialling and modifying, as there has been a lot of learning about tools and educators were given the best and relevant tools.

C. QF stressed the importance of cooperation between all institutions in Qatar to support teachers training and plans for the new era of education. Additionally, we introduced PALME (Professional and Leadership Mandate and Education) as part of our plans to support teachers training and plans for the new era of education.

D. We have just finished our workshops online with the Ministry of Education to support teachers training and plans for the new era of education.

Teachers had to be fast learners

A. The culture of teaching in Qatar is different from the one we knew earlier. We saw many examples of students and teachers using a variety of apps and online tools to capture and express their ideas. Teachers pushed their creativity by using animations and flipped classroom methods to keep students interested and engaged.

B. Colleagues and peers learning happened within and across schools locally and globally as educators supported each other with ideas and shared what was working for them. Ideas from our educators were added to the PUE online collaboration platform.

C. What kind of collaboration took place between QF’s PUE and the Ministry of Education and Higher Education to support teachers training and enable them to use the new learning environment in all schools across the country?

The joint committee for innovative projects of Qatar Scientific Club (QSC) met to review the progress of projects pertaining to the Covid-19 pandemic. The committee received presentations from the teams of Fatima al-Abooli, a Pakistani and Ornate: a leading global retailer for watches, fine watches and men's accessories. The Qatar Met department has issued a warning for strong winds today, which may become thundery in some places. The wind speed may go up to 30 knots inshore and 25 knots offshore during thundery conditions, with the sea water rising in 1-2 places. The wind speed and sea level will vary depending on the location.
