Qatar Islamic Bank (QIB) has announced that domestic workers will be able to open their own bank accounts with QIB, directly through the bank’s award-winning mobile app. The move is in line with the Qatar Central Bank (QCB) directives to support all segments of the society, ensuring easy access to banking solutions. This initiative is part of QIB’s strategy to promote financial inclusion among domestic workers, who are typically not covered by traditional banking solutions.

A debit card will be issued upon opening the account, and the account holder will be able to access cash from ATM’s around the globe. Their local and international transactions will be performed in a few simple steps through the QIB mobile app. Furthermore, domestic workers will be exempted from fees or charges on issuing their cards, which will also be issued without the requirement of minimum balance. They will also benefit from the option of receiving their salaries directly to their QIB accounts.

This service will be available for domestic workers within all categories, including housemaids, cooks, drivers, and maids, as well as their family members. The instructions of the Ministry of Manpower and Tranportation are followed to ensure the safety and convenience of the employees while protecting their personal data and security.

Upon the end of the employment contract, the employee and the employer must liquidate for the benefit of the concerned domestic worker. To provide a stable banking experience, and in line with the Qatar Vision 2030, the bank will work closely with the Ministry of Human Resources to ensure easy access to banking facilities for domestic workers.

"We are happy to announce this move as part of our ongoing efforts to serve our customers’ experience easy and fast international transfers, offering the domestic workers the much-needed digital solutions that will help them manage their day-to-day banking needs in a convenient, simple and secure way," said David Suter, Special Projects Manager at THE.

"We are pleased to announce that the domestic workers account is now available in the UAE, Indonesia, China, India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, and many more countries with the help of commercial airlines in those countries, while we ended up with eight pilots in each category."

"The move is in line with the Qatar Central Bank (QCB) directives to support all segments of the society, ensuring easy access to banking solutions. This initiative is part of QIB’s strategy to promote financial inclusion among domestic workers, who are typically not covered by traditional banking solutions. However, domestic workers often lack access to banking services, and QIB’s initiative aims to address this gap by providing them with a convenient, simple, and secure way to access banking services directly through the QIB mobile app.

A handful of patients have avoided or delayed making a GP appointment in the last six months when they would previously have sought help, a Daily Mail poll revealed.

Nearly five in 10 and almost all those who had not sought medical advice a doctor or video consultation said they were concerned phone or video consultations were 'worse' compared with a face-to-face appointment.

The Patients Association warned that the doctor-patient relationship has suffered a "fundamental rupture" during the pandemic and cancer screening declined.

Another 20% of respondents said they were only using face-to-face appointments because it was easier.

Health secretary Matt Hancock said the poll revealed the importance of medical advice.

"We don’t want to see a return to the old way: people calling their GPs to book or cancel appointments rather than at the time they need it," he said. "This poll shows people want access to care as soon as possible, and means we can move forward."
Global coronavirus death toll hits 1mn

By Simon Malfatto, AFP

More than 1mn people have died due to COVID-19 worldwide, according to an AFP tally based on data from various sources, as the coronavirus continues to claim lives in the pandemic's second wave.

This image combines data from official statistics on the official website of the Worldometer.info and the World Health Organization (WHO).

Don't be alarmed. There's no chance of a second wave! But this time, let's make sure we don't panic...

The 1mn figure was reached on Sunday, according to the tally which tracks daily updates from more than 200 countries and territories around the world.

The milestone was reached as the US was the first country to reach this level, with over 195,000 deaths from COVID-19, followed closely by Brazil and Mexico with over 105,000 and 75,000 deaths respectively.

The latest data from the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) shows that over 195,000 people have died from COVID-19 in the US, with over 11.6mn cases reported, while Brazil has recorded over 105,000 deaths and 6.5mn infections, and Mexico has reported over 75,000 deaths and 3.9mn cases.

The number of deaths worldwide has risen steadily since the outbreak of the pandemic last year, with over 1mn deaths reported globally. The WHO has warned that the pandemic is far from over and that countries need to continue implementing measures to control the spread of the virus.

The milestone comes as the world continues to grapple with the challenges of the pandemic, with vaccination efforts gaining momentum in many countries. The US has administered over 270mn doses of COVID-19 vaccines, while Brazil has administered over 6.5mn doses and Mexico has administered over 3.9mn doses.

The WHO has also warned that the pandemic could have a devastating impact on global health and economic systems, with the United Nations estimating that over 80mn people could be pushed into poverty due to the pandemic.

The milestone also highlights the need for greater global coordination and solidarity in the fight against COVID-19, with some countries struggling to access vaccines and medical supplies.

The 1mn figure is a stark reminder of the human cost of the pandemic, with millions of lives lost and families impacted around the world.

A massive virus net is trapping Indian fish sellers, a group whose livelihoods depend on selling fish from baskets or aluminium vessels. But the spread of the virus has disrupted the markets where they sell their wares, leaving many of them without a source of income.

Several days ago, a fish seller in Noida, who refuses to be named, was forced to leave her stall because of the lockdown. She said, "I have been selling fish for 20 years, but now I have lost my source of income."

According to the Ministry of Fisheries, India added a million cases in the last 24 hours, pushing the total number of cases to 10 million. The lockdown has been declared in several states to contain the spread of the virus.

"The only thing that we can do now is to stay at home and follow the safety protocols," said Kowada, who has been selling fish for over 20 years. "We are not scared to go outside, but we are scared to go to the market."

Many fish sellers have been forced to leave their stalls and move to their homes, leaving their families without income. The government has announced several schemes to help the fish sellers, including a new scheme that provides financial assistance to those who have lost their livelihoods due to the lockdown.

"We are facing a lot of difficulties," said 23-year-old medical student Maharani Selvamani. "The situation is not only affecting us, but also our families."

Dr Tuzcu and the team said a rapid heart rate and an abnormal ECG reading can happen when normal pathways of WPW patients are disrupted, causing the heart to beat abnormally. The condition can be potentially life-threatening, especially if it leads to an extra electrical connection in the heart.

"We would keep an eye on the person and suggest that he or she go to the hospital immediately," Dr Tuzcu said. "If untreated, WPW can lead to fatal arrhythmias such as heart block, atrial fibrillation, and sudden cardiac death."

At the time, Sidra Medicine performed an echocardiogram and an MRI, which revealed an atrial septal defect (ASD). The ASD was treated on the same day.

The ECG conducted during the Antarctic expedition showed Dr Tuzcu and the team that a patient had some types of WPW. The patient was seen by Dr Tuzcu and the team at Sidra Medicine after experiencing an episode of WPW-related atrial fibrillation.

Dr Tuzcu and the team confirmed that patient was treated for WPW and the patient was advised to take extra precautions to avoid triggering the condition. The patient was then referred to the cardiovascular department for regular follow-ups.

Dr Tuzcu and the team advised the patient to take extra precautions to avoid triggering the condition, such as avoiding high-risk activities such as contact sports or any type of exercise that could cause the heart to beat abnormally.
