At least 134 Yemeni Rebels dead after strikes in Marib area

A probe into the catastrophe Beirut port explosion that killed more than 200 people and injured thousands of others found new evidence that the explosion was the result of a missed safety measure. The investigation is still ongoing, and the findings will be presented to the public in the coming weeks.

The United Nations yesterday warned of a humanitarian crisis in Libya, saying that the situation was at its worst level since the country was plunged into war in 2011.

The conflict in Libya has been ongoing for more than a decade, with rival factions vying for control of the country's rich natural resources, including oil and gas. Despite international efforts to find a peaceful resolution, the situation has become increasingly volatile, with frequent clashes and attacks.

The U.N. Security Council yesterday demanded that all parties in Libya strictly observe an immediate and lasting cease-fire, urging all parties to respect the United Nations Security Council resolution 2258 (2015) of March 2015, which calls for a comprehensive cease-fire in Libya.

Several international organizations have called on all parties in Libya to adhere to the cease-fire and to work towards a political solution to the conflict.

UN observers have reported violations of the cease-fire, with reports of shelling and fighting continuing in various parts of the country. The U.N. has expressed concern that the situation could deteriorate further.

Activists fight stigma to raise breast cancer awareness in Gaza

A Central African Republic rebel group announced on Thursday that it had captured the town of Bria, a key crossroads town in the country's Central Region, and that its leader, 45-year-old Mahamat Said Abdel Kani, was in custody.

The group, known as the Seleka, has been fighting against the government since 2013, and has been involved in a civil war that has resulted in the displacement of more than a million people.

In recent months, the Seleka has intensified its attacks, capturing several towns and villages in the Central Region.

The capture of Bria is a major setback for the government, which has been struggling to contain the rebellion.

The Seleka has made several demands, including the release of leaders held in captivity and the withdrawal of foreign troops from the country.

The government has repeatedly denied the Seleka's claims, and has instead accused the group of committing widespread atrocities.

The capture of Bria has prompted international concerns, with the United Nations and other organizations calling for an immediate ceasefire and a political solution to the conflict.
UK government backed initial Covid response, states MPs' probe

UK lawmakers yesterday launched a long-awaited probe into the government’s response when Covid-19 first began spreading across the country. The probe will examine whether ministers “lost control” of the crisis as the deadly virus swarmed across the UK and the world. The government’s late response meant the country was among the worst-hit in the world when the first lockdown began in March and has fared worse than comparable nations.

In an 89-page report, issued after months of evidence from two parliamentary committees, Prime Minister Boris Johnson was accused of being “wary” and leading to a higher death rate during the early stages of the pandemic. The report also found that ethnic minority staff were worse off during the outbreak compared to white colleagues. Billionaire Jack Ma ‘makes appearance in Hong Kong’

A group of people who appear to be government officials and a security guard were seen near the United Nations Office in Hong Kong, according to local media. The officials are believed to be in Hong Kong for a meeting with the United Nations. However, the purpose of the meeting is not yet clear.

The appearance of the officials is significant as it comes after a period of uncertainty surrounding the fate of Jack Ma, the founder of Alibaba Group, and his financial empire.

According to reports, Jack Ma was last seen in public in October 2020, after which he disappeared from the public eye for several months. His disappearance generated widespread speculation about his whereabouts, one of the sources said.

However, the officials were not immediately available for comment. It is unclear if this visit is related to the ongoing dispute between China and the United States over Hong Kong.

The Chinese government has repeatedly said that it will not tolerate any form of interference in its internal affairs and will uphold its national sovereignty and territorial integrity.

India asks banks for powers to import 10% of coal needs

India yesterday recommended local Covid shots for children under 12 years of age, according to its health minister, who warned that the country’s vaccination drive is facing delays due to a surge in Covid-19 cases. The move comes as the government seeks to ramp up its vaccination efforts to prevent a third wave of the pandemic.

The Indian government has so far approved the use of two vaccines, the Oxford-AstraZeneca (Covishield) and the Bharat Biotech’s Covaxin, for adults. However, the demand for Covid vaccines has increased sharply in recent weeks, with the surge in cases prompting the government to consider administering vaccines to children as well.

India’s vaccination programme has so far reached 200 million doses, but the country’s healthcare system is facing mounting pressure due to the rising number of Covid cases. The government has been under pressure to increase the supply of vaccines to meet the growing demand.

The move to allow the import of vaccines for children is expected to help increase the supply of vaccines in the country, thereby enabling the government to inoculate more people against Covid-19.

However, the decision to allow the import of vaccines for children is likely to face opposition from some quarters, who may argue that it could lead to a shortage of vaccines for adults.

India’s Covid deaths hit 1 million

India’s Covid deaths hit 1 million, according to a tally maintained by the BBC, making it the second country after the US to reach this milestone. India has been hit by a severe second wave of Covid-19, with daily infections crossing 300,000 on multiple occasions.

India’s health system has been struggling to cope with the surge in cases, with hospitals reporting oxygen shortages and patients dying due to lack of critical care. The government has been stepping up its vaccination efforts and increasing the supply of vaccines, but the country’s healthcare system remains under strain.

The number of Covid deaths in India has risen to 1,000,000, making it the second highest in the world after the US. The country has also reported more than 20 million cases of the virus so far.

UK business leaders warn of economic damage

UK business leaders have warned of the economic damage caused by the ongoing Covid pandemic. They have called for more support for businesses and workers, as the country faces a potential third wave of the virus.

The leaders have highlighted the importance of the Government’s vaccine programme, which has helped to bring down the number of deaths and hospitalizations. However, they have also emphasized the need to support businesses and workers, particularly those in sectors such as hospitality and tourism, which have been hit hard by the pandemic.

The leaders have also called for more investment in research and development, as well as support for small businesses, to help them adapt to the changing market conditions.

India’s tech sector braces for labour crunch

India’s tech sector is bracing for a potential labour crunch, as the country’s vaccination drive accelerates. The sector, which has been one of the drivers of the country’s economic growth, is facing a shortage of skilled workers, particularly in areas such as software development and IT services.

The shortage of skilled workers is likely to impact the country’s ability to compete in the global market, as it struggles to attract foreign investment and grow its exports. The government has been working to address the issue, including by increasing the number of training programs and encouraging companies to invest in the development of local talent.

However, the shortage of skilled workers is expected to continue in the short term, which could impact the sector’s growth prospects in the years to come.
A growing number of Haitians are relying on cryptocurrencies to help support family members abroad. The tokens have grown in popularity as they are seen as a cheaper and faster way to send money back home, especially in the face of limited access to traditional banking systems. Tether, for instance, sells its coins for $1 and promises to redeem them for US dollars at any time, making it useful for sending money to those who don’t have bank accounts.

However, US regulators have expressed concerns about cryptocurrencies, particularly about Tether. The US Department of Justice has opened a criminal investigation into Tether’s backing, and US immigration officials have asked charities not to accept cryptocurrency donations for fear of being linked to洗钱. Tether’s reserves include billions of dollars of short-term loans to large Chinese companies, some of which are known to be involved in money laundering.

The US government has also warned about the use of cryptocurrencies in the context of migration. In September, the Biden administration announced plans to enforce a new rule that could bar any individuals who have received cryptocurrency as a form of payment from entering the United States. This rule is still pending approval by the US Supreme Court.

Despite these concerns, many Haitians continue to use cryptocurrencies as a way to send money home. They see it as a way to circumvent traditional banking systems, which can be slow and expensive. As a result, the use of cryptocurrencies in Haiti is likely to continue to grow in the coming years.

The last surviving French Resistance fighter who fought against the Nazi occupiers of World War II has died aged 101.

Hubert Germain, who was awarded the highest bravery order of the French Resistance and who took part in the liberation of Paris, died on Friday at his home in Toulon, according to France's National Resistance Council.

Germain was among the last of the fighters who fought for the French Resistance during World War II, and was a key figure in the liberation of Paris from Nazi occupation in 1944.

The death of Germain, who was a symbol of the resistance movement against Nazi occupiers, is a reminder of the sacrifices made by ordinary French citizens during the war.

Germain was a member of the French Communist Party and was known for his activism in support of workers' rights and social justice.

The last surviving member of the French Resistance, Germain, was awarded the Legion of Honour for his service during the war.

Germain was known for his courage and dedication to the fight against the Nazi occupiers, and his death marks the end of an era for the French Resistance.

In a statement, the French government said: "Hubert Germain was a hero of the French Resistance and a symbol of the fight against Nazism. His courage and sacrifice will be remembered forever."
QU celebrates graduation of 44th batch of female students

U nlike the previous term and proce- dure of Her Highness Sheikha Jawaher bint Hamad bin Su- haim al-Thani, wife of His High- ness the Amir, Qatar University (QU) organised yesterday the graduation ceremony of its 44th batch of distin- guished female students. Her Highness Sheikha Jawaher bint Hamad al-Thani yesterday honoured 421 undergraduate and graduate students from the Class of 2021 during the ceremony. There are a total of 2,369 females among the 3,648 students who attended their respective graduation ceremonies and received their diplomas.

A number of Sheikhs, members of QU’s Board of Trustees, QU vice-presidents, deans and students’ par- ents attended the ceremony.

“Today, we celebrate the 44th batch of female students at Qatar University, which is represented by 2,819 female graduates (among an affiliate of over 15,000) since the university’s found- ing. These successive cohorts of uni- versity graduates have contributed a great deal to what our beloved coun- try Qatar, is witnessing from a comprehen- sive renaissance in the social, cultural, economic and other aspects of various fields,” Wo- jdan Al Qubaisi, established Qatar University has had the most promi- nent role in leading the development and renaissance for the community, and Qatar women in particular. This is evident in the role that Qatar University, in pushing women to play their role in achieving de- velopment in the result of the univer- sity’s vision and mission over the years. The fact of that is the permis- sion development of the university’s academic programme to keep pace with the changes of the times and its role in preparing graduates who have the ability to respond to the needs and challenges of modernity and to play their role in the development of the country and the world. "

As for the second focus, the uni- versity was keen to attract, prepare and train many leading female sci- entists and researchers who contrib- ute to achieving the university’s mis- sion and roles, and have even led these transformations in our Qatari society. The most ambitious and influential point is that the university worked on preparing them with the skills, values and capabilities that will help them in their careers as they are facing these challenges effectively and effi- ciently, through a unique student experience, as observed.”

QU president told the graduates: “Qatar University is not just a pass- ing stage in your journey that ends with the completion of your degrees and your graduation. It forms the starting point in your professional life and reference to which the gradu- ate returns. The university, with its professors and all its sectors, spares no effort in serving you, in order to gain more knowledge. The pursuit of knowledge is a path we take and a goal we seek to reach. Today, we stand here today, carrying in our minds the answers, in our hearts certainty and in our hands the trust. Among us is the teacher who builds generations, the doctor who saves souls, the en- gineer who innovates for the human being, the pharmacist, the researcher, the writer – and there is no shortcom- ing in those who are not mentioned. The women train in their workplaces with professionalism, and we are the proof of that. "

Research professor in the College of Arts and Sciences was the host of the ceremony. She urged the students to continue on the path of success. QU’s new strategy place an emphasis on elevating the student experience by placing QU as a pioneer and a leading educational institution in the higher education sector in Qu-atar and regionally, and the best educational experience in the world. "

During the ceremony, a docu- mentary film was shown about QU’s achievements during the academic year 2020-2021 in various fields. The event was held in line with the pre- ventive and precautionary measures against Covid-19.
