The truth about breakfast

By Paula Borda & Rhonda Helmers

W ill going to a hearty breakfast help you feel more focused and efficient throughout the day? Will cutting breakfast to save time and money be your undoing? The answer may surprise you.

Breakfast is considered the most important meal of the day, and evidence suggests that eating a healthy breakfast may help you maintain good health and lose weight. However, the importance of breakfast has been questioned in recent years.

Research has shown that people who skip breakfast are more likely to overeat later in the day, leading to weight gain. Additionally, breakfast has been linked to improved cognitive function and mood.

But what about those who prefer a lighter breakfast or no breakfast at all? Are they sacrificing important nutrients or missing out on the health benefits of breakfast?

The answer is nuanced and depends on individual factors such as age, activity level, and overall health status.

EU offers to ease border checks to solve N Ireland Brexit row

Tensions remain high after the Brexit deal was agreed last year, but there is now a renewed hope for peace.

The European Union offered to ease border checks in Northern Ireland as part of a new agreement to prevent a hard border between the province and the rest of the UK. This has been met with caution by British politicians, who are worried about the potential for a backstop to be reintroduced.

New proposals include measures to reduce the number of checks on goods crossing the border, with a focus on ensuring that any checks are not used to undermine the agreement.

The EU also suggested that a new system could be put in place to track goods crossing the border, which would allow for more targeted checks. This has been welcomed by some politicians, who are concerned about the potential for a hard border to be reintroduced.

However, there are concerns that the new proposals could be used to undermine the agreement.

The British government has stated that it will not accept any changes to the Brexit deal without the consent of both the UK and the EU.

The issue of the Irish border remains one of the most difficult aspects of the Brexit negotiations.

The new proposals are a significant step forward in the ongoing talks, but there is still a long way to go before a final agreement can be reached.

OF students, educators, students at Youth4Climate Summit

By Roar Arndal

Our foundation continues its mission to promote environmental awareness and engage the voices of young people in the global conversation, aiming to educate and empower them to take action for the future of our planet. Our efforts are targeted toward major global events, enabling us to further our impact and contribute to the planet's well-being.

While OF believes that action is a powerful driving force in awakening global, environmental, and climate awareness, we also recognize that education is a key component to the growth of this movement. The education of our future leaders is crucial to ensuring that they are equipped with the knowledge and skills necessary to lead the world into a sustainable future.

The model of OF's mission is to empower young people to take action together by engaging them in global conversations and facilitating their participation in the world's most pressing issues. This is achieved through various initiatives, such as our global youth climate action summit and other localized efforts. By participating in OF's climate-related activities, young people are provided with opportunities to learn, network, and engage in meaningful discussions that can inspire and motivate them to take action.

Beyond the direct actions of our youth climate activists, OF also recognizes the importance of bringing together environmental experts, educators, and stakeholders to foster a collaborative environment that promotes innovation and solutions to the challenges facing our planet. Through OF's partnerships, we work to bridge the gap between the knowledge of our experts and the practical actions of our youth climate activists, creating a synergy that drives meaningful change.

We believe that it is not enough to simply raise awareness about environmental issues; it is equally important to provide young people with the tools and resources they need to make a difference in their communities and the world. By doing so, we aim to inspire a generation of leaders who will lead the way in creating a sustainable future for all.
