Hawai speaker unravels white feminist ideology

Rafia Zakaria, a writer, attorney and a human rights activist, recently delivered a lecture on “Against White Feminism: Notes on Disruption (NU-Q)’s most recent Hiwar” at the Global Multicultural Center. She drew from her experience as a Pakistani-Muslim and feminist scholar to explain why white-centric feminism is inherently flawed and perpetuates harmful stereotypes. Zakaria noted that colonial and white-centric feminism historically informed the framing of women of colour as allies to advance their rights struggle that has been central to every social justice movement. Zakaria’s career spans across 62 years as an architectural and cultural critic. Her foundation was established in 1937 with its first New York-based venue for the display of art, the Museum of Non-Objective Painting. Nearly 200 die in India, Nepal rains

The World Health Organization (WHO) on Friday, October 22, 2021, said it was ready to help those affected by floods and landslides in India and Nepal, where at least 200 people have been reported dead in what has been described as the worst flooding there in a century.

In northern India, nearly 150 people were confirmed to have died from the floods, according to the National Disaster Management Authority (NDMA). Another 32 deaths were reported in Nepal, according to the nation’s disaster management agency.

India's Prime Minister Narendra Modi said on Thursday, with the government indefinitely extending its indefinite for that, Justice Sanjay Kishan Kaul said in his order that he could not regulate the roads blocked by the farmers. "The farmers have the right to oppose the laws, introduced late last year, because they believe them to be bad," he said.

India’s Supreme Court said farmers are entitled to protest against the government over three new farm laws, and have the right to cause inconvenience to the government. "The farmers have the right to oppose the laws, introduced late last year, because they believe them to be bad," he added.

Arunachal Pradesh Police said in a statement that at least 200 people were reported dead in the worst flooding in a century. "The worst floods in the country have been witnessed in the past 100 years," it said.

India's Cabinet, chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, on Friday, October 22, 2021, approved a Rs 30,000 crore package to help India move towards achieving net-zero emissions by 2070, in line with the country's commitment to the Paris Agreement.

Arunachal Pradesh Police said in a statement that at least 200 people were reported dead in the worst flooding in a century. "The worst floods in the country have been witnessed in the past 100 years," it said.

India's Cabinet, chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, on Friday, October 22, 2021, approved a Rs 30,000 crore package to help India move towards achieving net-zero emissions by 2070, in line with the country's commitment to the Paris Agreement.

India's Prime Minister Narendra Modi said on Thursday, with the government indefinitely extending its indefinite for that, Justice Sanjay Kishan Kaul said in his order that he could not regulate the roads blocked by the farmers. "The farmers have the right to oppose the laws, introduced late last year, because they believe them to be bad," he said.

India’s Supreme Court said farmers are entitled to protest against the government over three new farm laws, and have the right to cause inconvenience to the government. "The farmers have the right to oppose the laws, introduced late last year, because they believe them to be bad," he added.

Pakistan Foreign Minister Shah Mahmood Qureshi has told his US counterpart that the region needs to work closely to ensure peace and stability. Qureshi, who is on a visit to Washington, met US Secretary of State Antony Blinken to discuss the political situation in the region.

In a new National Intelligence Estimate, the Office of Director of National Intelligence (DNI) has warned that Pakistan could be vulnerable to outside influence, potentially leading to a "very good" situation for Afghanistan. The report identifies threats from both the US and Afghanistan, with the former's "very high" due to its proximity and the latter's "high" due to its potential for instability.

The possibility of Polesit

By manufacturing a constitutional court ruling that effectively rejects the legal basis of EU membership, Poland's ruling Law and Justice party may have finally bitten off more than it can chew. Sadly, whatever happens next, all Poles are likely to bear the costs of the government's brinkmanship.

The investor sentiment has turned in 2021 in anticipation of a return to normal. While Amazon-backed Deliveroo raised its full-year guidance on October 28, Takeaway reported weaker than expected third-quarter orders last week, but CEO Jitse Groen said it was seeing business improve in several weeks.

The Polish government has implemented during this period a series of important changes that are beginning to have an impact on the country's economic performance. For example, it has expanded the minimum wage and increased social benefits, which are likely to boost consumer spending and improve the overall business climate.

One unknown quantity is the amount of business-related travel, which is expected to take longer to recover than leisure trips

With the spread of the Covid-19 pandemic, the travel industry has been hit hard. However, with the introduction of vaccines and the easing of travel restrictions, there are signs of a recovery. Airlines are optimistic about the future and are planning to add new routes and increase capacity in major cities.

One more thing that is impacting the travel industry is the rising cost of fuel. Due to the increase in oil prices, airlines are having to absorb the cost, which is likely to be passed on to the passengers in the form of higher ticket prices.

Two regions that are expected to benefit from the recovery are Australia and New Zealand. Both countries have managed to control the spread of the virus and are now open to tourists from other parts of the world.

In conclusion, the travel industry is slowly but surely recovering. However, there are still many challenges to overcome, such as the rising cost of fuel and the uncertainty surrounding the future of the virus. But despite these challenges, there is optimism in the industry that a full recovery is on the horizon.
The ethics of the men of learning

By Shaykh Abdul-Aziz Abdur-Rahim ibn Baaz

The men of learning are those who are learned in the correct knowledge of Allah's guidance and His religion, who are trained to convey this guidance and religion to others. This can be achieved by writing, teaching, sharing knowledge, and following the path of the sunnah to deliver the message of Allah (SWT) and His Prophet (SWT).

And those who read and study the Qur’an give it its due place and importance. They memorize its verses and recite them in their daily lives. They also translate it into different languages and teach it to others. They seek to understand its meanings and apply its principles in their daily lives.

The ethics of the men of learning also include being humble and modest in their knowledge, not boasting or showing off. They seek to guide others to Allah's guidance, not to prove their own knowledge or superiority.

A man of knowledge is one who knows Allah's image and His attributes. He avoids believing in the qualities of Allah that are outside of His attributes, such as the creation of the universe from nothing. He also avoids attributing to Allah qualities that are not proportionate to His greatness and majesty, such as being limited by space and time.

The men of learning are also known for their kindness and mercy. They treat others with respect and consideration, and avoid showing arrogance or condescending to others. They seek to guide others to Allah's guidance, not to assert their own knowledge or status.

Furthermore, the men of learning are known for their generosity and charity. They donate their wealth to help others, whether it be to the poor, the needy, or the righteous. They also support the religious community and its institutions.

The men of learning are also known for their patience and perseverance. They do not give up on their efforts to guide others to Allah's guidance, even if they face opposition or criticism. They seek to guide others in a gentle and kind manner, avoiding harshness or aggression.

The men of learning are also known for their modesty and humility. They do not seek to prove their own knowledge or superiority, but rather to guide others to Allah's guidance. They seek to be humble in their knowledge and avoid arrogance or condescending to others.

The men of learning are also known for their self-control and discipline. They do not allow their desires to control their actions, but rather control their desires and avoid any actions that conflict with Allah's guidance.

The men of learning are also known for their selflessness and sacrifice. They do not seek personal gain or benefit, but rather seek to guide others to Allah's guidance. They are willing to make sacrifices for the sake of Allah's cause and the guidance of others.

The men of learning are also known for their honesty and truthfulness. They do not deceive or lie to others, but rather speak the truth and avoid any actions that conflict with truth.
