Qatar Airways to receive first 777X in 2023

Launched customer Qatar Airways will receive its first passenger version of the new generation, next-generation Boeing 777X, in 2023, according to the US aerospace giant. The 777Xs are scheduled to arrive in Qatar during the Dubai Airshow. Qatar Airways is planning to operate five 777Xs after taking delivery of the first aircraft at the Dubai International Airport to transport the passenger version of the world’s largest twin-engine jetliner, the 777X, ahead of its delivery to Qatar Airways. We will receive our first aircraft (777X) during 2023, in just under two years’ time. We are developing new cabin interiors for this airplane so that the passengers will have different amenities, and we are ensuring that they already enjoy in Qatar Airways.

Qatar attaches high priority to preventive diplomacy, mediation

HE Sheikha Alya stressed that Qatar’s mediation efforts are accompanied by intensive humanitarian and development efforts in order to help build positive ground for establishing and maintaining international peace and security.

Qatar has signed agreements with Egypt to supply fuel and basic building materials for Gaza. This was announced by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry (MoCI) on Monday, as part of the continuous efforts by the Qatari government to support the Palestinian people (QNA). Al-Muraihi noted that Qatar, based on its principles of establishing peace and security at the regional and international levels, is working with various parties of the international community to provide humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian people. Qatar has been providing many financial grants, humanitarian support projects and professional training programs in order to improve the development situation of the Palestinian people.

Ooredoo Group partners with Snap Inc to unlock potential of AR across global footprint

Ooredoo Group has announced a strategic partnership with Snap Inc. that will enable the second largest augmented reality (AR) technology company to enhance its customer experience. This partnership is the first-of-its-kind in the region and will see the two companies collaborate to deliver enhanced AR experience – including 3D-realised AR experiences – for Ooredoo customers across its 10 operating companies, powered by Ooredoo’s comprehensive portfolio of ultra-fast connectivity and control mechanism.

“This is a first-of-its-kind region for a milestone of which we are rightly proud, and which aligns perfectly with our strategic aim of digital transformation,” said the CEO of Ooredoo, Yasseine Belkaoui. “As a leader in the field of telecommunications and ICT, Ooredoo Group will leverage Snap’s community platforms and innovative technology to create a whole new dimension of services that will redefine the customer experience.”

As part of its collaboration with Nader Al-Hammadi, Chief Financial Officer of Ooredoo’s Group, said: “We are proud to work together on the upcoming major humanitarian crisis. We have seen how AR technology can be used in various fields, including healthcare, education, and entertainment. We believe that AR has the potential to unlock new possibilities, enhance customer experiences, and drive innovation across industries.”

Celebrated today, it references the achievements made and resolve to brace for more under the astute leadership of Sultan Haitham bin Tarik.

Oman will today (Thursday) celebrate its 51st National Day, a day which is a momentous occasion at a time when Omanis look back, reflect on the past, and plan for and brace for further accomplishments, in line with the national vision set out in its quest to attain the autonomous nationhood it deserves.

Speaking at a meeting of the Council of Ministers held in Muscat on Wednesday, the Sultan emphasized the importance of the day and underscored the message of the National Day in the past, present and future. He also highlighted the significance of the day in terms of values and the need to emphasize them.

The Sultan said that this day is a momentous occasion which sees a momentous change, a change which is reflected in Oman’s national priorities and actions.

He expressed his gratitude to all Omani leaders and citizens who have contributed to the achievements made by the Sultan Qaboos bin Said bin Taimour, the founder of Modern Oman and its Blessings.

The Sultan said that the National Day, which celebrates the Sultan’s accession to the throne, is a day of national pride and honor.

On the occasion of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (November 29), the Sultan expressed his support for the Palestinian people and their right to self-determination.

On the occasion of the International Day of Non-Violence (October 2), the Sultan expressed his support for the principle of non-violence and the importance of promoting peaceful coexistence and dialogue.

On the occasion of the International Day of Rural Women (October 15), the Sultan expressed his support for the role of rural women in ensuring sustainable development and women’s empowerment.

On the occasion of the International Day of Cities (October 31), the Sultan expressed his support for the role of cities in promoting sustainable development and ensuring the well-being of their inhabitants.

On the occasion of the International Day of the Older Persons (October 1), the Sultan expressed his support for the importance of respecting and protecting the rights of older persons.

On the occasion of the International Day of Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (September 27), the Sultan expressed his support for the principle of non-proliferation and the importance of preventing the spread of nuclear weapons.

On the occasion of the International Day of the Peaceful Use of Outer Space for the Benefit of Mankind (October 10), the Sultan expressed his support for the peaceful use of outer space and the importance of ensuring that outer space is used for the benefit of all humanity.

On the occasion of the International Day of Non-Violence (October 2), the Sultan expressed his support for the principle of non-violence and the importance of promoting peaceful coexistence and dialogue.

US President Joe Biden and Chinese leader Xi Jinping just completed their longest exchange as world leaders — but three and a half hours of talks appeared to do little, if anything, to narrow divergent positions between the superpowers.

China's state media described the meeting as “thick with substance and substantive results”. An official summary of the talks, held behind closed doors, went on to say that the two sides discussed a wide range of issues from Taiwan, to North Korea, to Xinjiang and the South China Sea.

There was nothing from the respective readouts to immediately suggest that either side expected anything more than increased platitude agreements, with the European Union, France and Germany all three countries “Sarah Drew”.

Despite the lack of obvious progress, some Chinese analysts appeared to offer little incentive for the US to take decisive measures if the relationship becomes destabilised, and China and US were “two ships that should not collide.”

A senior US diplomat, who asked not to be named, told Reuters last month that efforts to get the two sides to the table were “very, very worthwhile”, and that they “must” work to promote “the relationship that is strong and vital to the world.”

US-China relations have been strained since the US sold Taiwan arms in September 2019, and have deteriorated since the US led the world into the so-called “cold war” with China on the issue of Taiwan.

It was hard to see any definitive impact. “I am not sure where the discussions ended up, as the Chinese side did not do anything about the core under the sun, but announced no decisions or policy steps,” said an official, who asked not to be named, and said that the meeting continued the positive trend of improving US-China relations for some time, “he said, adding that it should have been addressed in any substantial way.

There were no breakthroughs, but there were efforts to improve the relationship. “We were not expecting a breakthrough,” one official said.

Biden bars Marcos from presidency for tax evasion

The US has designated Philippines President Rodrigo Duterte as a "major violator" of human rights, putting him on a roster of international sanctions against his government. The move follows a string of killings and human rights abuses in the country during his presidency, particularly in the fight against drugs and other crimes.

The US Treasury Department said it was imposing sanctions on Marcos, who is set to run for the presidency in May 2022. The department said in a statement that Marcos had failed to pay over US$70 million in taxes, including about US$60 million in income taxes. The statement came as the Philippines prepares for the presidential election in May 2022.

Qatar Airways is going to "immense lengths" in a bigger fight over how much the airline pays for fuel. When it comes to the country's new fleet, Qatar Airways looks to be in a tight corner with the costs of its new aircraft. The airline recently took delivery of its first Boeing 777-9X, which is expected to be a game-changer in the industry. The move to introduce the new aircraft is part of Qatar Airways' strategy to stay competitive in the market.
