He Minister of Public Health Dr Hanan Mohamed Al-Kuwari visited the Qatar National Mental Health Helpline call centre to commend the hard efforts and commitment to providing vital services.

The helpline was established in April 2020 by the Ministry of Public Health and Qatar Medical Centre. Lessons from Digital India

By Michael Spence

Over the past five years, India has experienced an unusually rapid expansion of digital connectivity and access to services. This has had a positive impact on the formation of economic opportunities and on many people's health and welfare. There are anecdotal measures of the improvements, and of cases in vaccinated and unvaccinated populations. The effects are not always uniform, and many measure has been found to be vacant in variants such as Delta and Alpha, and are linked to heightened infectivity and the ability to evade infection-blocking antibodies. The variant harbors a spiky mutation that allows it to be detected by genotyping tests that detect viruses much more rapidly than common genome sequencing.

To understand the Indian digital explosion, researchers will look at the Hoover Institution.

India’s experience (along with those of other developing countries) shows that relatively low-priced and affordable mobile-internet access to the critical asset in creating new economic opportunities and inclusive growth, which is the mobile internet. This is because the mobile internet has a substantial, and the returns may not be realized for many years. Reliance’s profits are substantial, and the returns may not be realized for many years. Reliance is a clear example of how the mobile internet can be a key driver of growth and inclusiveness, given the broader context of more recent Indian experiences show that the rapid expansion of the mobile internet, setting the stage for the rapid growth of digital services.

A new, highly mutated Covid-19 variant spread across the globe yesterday, causing borders and travel bans and governments to face a "race against time" to contain what has now become a worldwide epidemic. President Joe Biden warned yesterday that the virus could "sweep through the world in months, not days." The new variant, named Omicron, was identified in South Africa last week and has since been found in at least 30 countries, including the United States, the United Kingdom, and several European countries. The World Health Organization (WHO) has warned that the variant could be more transmissible and resistant to existing vaccines.

In the United States, President Biden announced new travel restrictions on countries with high numbers of infections, including South Africa, Botswana, Namibia, Lesotho, Eswatini, Zimbabwe, Namibia, and Botswana. The White House also announced that the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) had activated its highest level of threat.

In the United Kingdom, Prime Minister Boris Johnson called the new variant "a major step backward" and announced new travel restrictions and a mandatory 10-day quarantine for anyone arriving from an affected country.

In Europe, France has banned all flights from South Africa and the Netherlands, while Germany has announced a ban on flights from South Africa, Namibia, Botswana, and Zimbabwe. The Netherlands has also announced a full lockdown, which will last for 30 days.

In Asia, Japan has announced a ban on all flights from South Africa, while India has announced a ban on all international flights for 15 days.

The new variant has also raised concerns about the effectiveness of vaccines. While early data suggests that existing vaccines may be less effective against Omicron, it is not yet clear how much more transmissible the variant is or how easily it can evade existing vaccines.

Health officials are urging people to continue to get vaccinated, wear masks, and practice social distancing. The WHO has also called for increased testing and surveillance to detect the variant early.

The full impact of the new variant is still unknown, but it is clear that it is a serious threat to global public health. The world is facing a critical moment in the battle against Covid-19, and more must be done to ensure that the world is prepared for this new threat.
Sheikha Moza attends Qatar Academy Doha’s 25th anniversary celebration

Stories and memories flow as Qatar Foundation’s first school reaches milestone

H eightteen Sheikha Moza bint Nasser, Chairperson of Qatar Foundation (QF), has attended the 25th anniversary celebration of Qatar Academy Doha (QAD), the first school and the seed from which its vision of education, research and innovation, and community development grew.

The event at Qatar Academy Doha (QAD)’s junior school was also attended by HE Sheikha Hind bint Hamad Al Thani, Vice-Chairperson and CEO of Qatar Foundation and HE Sheikha Hind bint Ha- mid Al Nuaimi, Minister of Education, who, during their time at the school, were equipped to become future leaders and drivers of change.

Since its establishment in 1995 – the year after QF was founded – with just 25 students, the QAD has nurtured more than 1,200 graduates. Almost 1,000 students are currently studying at the Education City school, which offers an innovative and personalized academic programme with a strong focus on Arabic and Islamic studies and opportunities for experimental, real-world learning.

Speaking at the 25th anniversary celebration, she mentioned the QF’s mission was, and remains, to strive for a balance between two pathways – selecting scientific progress, technological development, modernity and globalisation, while preserving our Qatari and Arab traditions and the values of the Arabic language, which we hold dear.

“On the occasion of Qatar Academy Doha’s 25th anniversary, we would like to extend our gratitude to teachers and to families, who are our partners in the field of education, and express our pride in the generation of QAD alumni who have achieved such change-makers while maintaining an absolute and true pride in who they are and how they have faced challenges with confidence and independence,” she added, adding “They have the ability to find solutions and be part of positive discussions that impact the local and international communities.”

“QF, Qatar Academy Doha believe in the power of education to change the world. Over the past 25 years, we have seen what can be achieved by educating, nurturing, and empowering future leaders to create impact, and bringing them to existence following learning.”

Sheikha Moza said the anniversary celebration was “very encouraging response from the community. “We have about 36 rides and attractions. The facility can host about 5,000 people at a time,” he said, adding “We charge only the entry fee … people can spend the whole day and enjoy all the rides as many times as they like.”
